Stand Arouses Criticism in Senate; English Emissary Arrives in Capital

No Request Expected

Great Britain was viewed as a good credit risk by a second Cabinet member yesterday as Sir Frederick Phillips, undersecretary of the British treasury, arrived in Washington for financial talks.

An echoing "yes" from Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to Secretary of Commerce Jones' "good risk" comment on proposed loans to England, meanwhile touched off the first flare of criticism in the Senate.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, protested use of the stabilization fund for "making loans to any nation" and later told reporters it was "nonsense" to call Britain a good loan risk.

Senator Clark Startled

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, said he was "very much startled" at Secretary Jones' statement. Clark referred to England's unpaid World War debt to the United States. He said Congress should look carefully into the "very large resources of the British empire."

As Secretary Morgenthau opened wider the door to possible credit aid to Britain in the future, Sir Frederick arranged to confer with him at the Treasury today.

Morgenthau said that as far as he knew the British treasury undersecretary came to the United States only to present factual information on British finances and resources available for purchases in the United States and not to make a loan request.

Sir Frederick Wednesday had indicated the same. He said England's financial condition was "never stronger" and that credit "is a stage further on."

Speculation turned on possible discussion of large-scale further liquidation of British assets in this country to increase England's dollar balances.

Morgenthau's reference to Britain as a good credit risk came in response to a question on whether he agreed with Jones. The Treasury Secretary replied that he did.

But in reply to a question on when

Fair skies and a mercury that will rise no higher than 38 degrees was the Weather Bureau forecast for today. No repetition of the Wednesday's snow flurries and sleet and rain is expected.

The thermometer will range upward tomorrow which the weatherman predicted will be fair and warmer with gentle variable winds. Yesterday's high was 40 degrees at 6 p. m. and the low was 33 at 12:01 a. m.

In the grip of King Winter, parts of Maine, New York, Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin are blanketed with 10 inches of snow, it was reported.

President Calls St. Lawrence Project 'Vital'

Seaway a 'Necessity' To Defense, He Says; Will Press for Treaty

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Dec. 5.—President Roosevelt announced today he would ask the Senate, convening in January, to approve a treaty with Canada providing for completion of the St. Lawrence seaway and power project "on which so much of our national safety and welfare depend."

The President's announcement, presaging another battle in Congress over the long-debated project (defeated by the Senate in 1934) was made by A. A. Berle, Jr., Assistant Secretary of State, in an address before the Great Lakes Seaway and Power Conference.

John C. Beukema, chairman of the executive committee of the National Seaway Council, told the conference that he felt "the end of the road was near" in the struggle to obtain completion of the seaway.

"It ranks first on any long time program of national defense," he asserted.

Message Read by Berle

At Ottawa, Ontario, Canadian officials said negotiations for completion of the seaway are "continuing satisfactorily."

Mr. Roosevelt's message, read by Berle, emphasized that the St. Lawrence project would provide millions in new horsepower urgently needed to speed up defense production, and create a safe haven and waterway for construction of ships to replace tonnage sunk in the war.

"The opposition which defeated the St. Lawrence Treaty in 1934," Mr. Roosevelt said, "was a mistaken opposition, based on failure to appraise the full needs of their country in the world situation which was even then developing.

"I said then that 'an opportunity is presented to complete a seaway comparable in economic value to

Defense Snag

As lumber strikes spread and a shipping strike ended on the Pacific Coast, a California Democrat warned the House yesterday that an "outbreak of strikes" is now threatening America's aviation industry.

At the same time, steps were taken by the Government seeking to reduce future labor difficulties. Edward F. McGrady, former Assistant Secretary of Labor and well known as a labor conciliator, was named special consultant to Secretary of War Stimson. In addition, representatives of industry, labor and the Government conducted an all-day conference at which it was agreed that work in shipyards should continue at full blast without interruptions from strikes.

The conference, conducted by Sidney Hillman, Defense Commissioner in charge of labor, set up machinery to stabilize employment in the shipyards; with no strikes "before all facilities at the disposal of the National Defense Advisory Commission for adjusting differences have been exhausted."

McGrady's appointment was believed to have resulted from the recent strike at the Vultee aircraft plant in California which tied up production on Army planes. McGrady now is vice president of the Radio Corporation of America in charge of labor relations.

The close of four Tacoma lumber mills brought to 23 the total number of mills and camps in the State of Washington that have had to shut down despite national defense contracts for the supply of wood for plane manufacturers and for Army cantonments.

On the other hand, conclusion of a 60-day-old coastwise shipping strike in San Francisco will permit the movement from Northwest ports of a considerable amount of accumulated lumber needed for defense construction.

Negotiations Begin

In the House, Representative Costello (Democrat), of California, declared that if the threatened walkouts in the aviation industry materialize they will "bring the entire aviation defense program to a standstill."

The settlement of the recent Vultee strike has been followed by opening of wage negotiations at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. at San Diego, he said. Other firms in the path of the union drive, he declared, are Consolidated, North American,

Axis Believed Trying to End Greek War

Nazis Reported In Bid to Athens; Italians Burning Stores at Bases

By George Balint
International News Service Staff Writer

Budapest, Dec. 5.—A German proposal to end the Italo-Greek war was reported in Budapest tonight to have been delivered by Turkish Foreign Minister Shukru Saracoglu to the Greek premier, Gen. John Metaxas, at a secret meeting in Salonika, Greece, today.

The peace formula, supposedly offering German mediation and certain concessions to Greece, which has expelled the Italian invaders from its soil, was said to have been handed to Saracoglu in Ankara several days ago by Col. Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey.

Greek and Turkish political sources did not confirm this report, but, on the other hand, did not deny it. It was pointed out Germany and Greece continued to maintain relations with each other.

Italians Reported Firing Stores in Lost Bases

Athens (Friday), Dec. 6 (AP).—Large fires in Porto Edda and Argirocastro were reported today as the Greek army pressed into the outskirts of those two key Italian military bases in southern Albania.

It was presumed here that the Italians, who have been reported abandoning the towns, had fired all stores and materials they were unable to cart away.

A general headquarters communique reported general progress over the entire Albanian front, "especially in the central and southern sectors despite strong reaction from enemy aviation."

Italian planes bombed Corfu again, the communique continued, but there were no casualties and only slight damage resulted.

On the northern sector, in the region of Koritza and Pogradetz, a Greek spokesman declared, the last Italians in that lofty area had been dislodged.

Reports from the front said the Greek air force had dive-bombed mechanized Italian units, virtually destroying some of them, and had attacked barracks which later became enveloped in black smoke. Italian trenches also were reported bombed.

District Draft Heads Suggest Easing Rules

Declare Economic Status Should Decide Married Men's Cases

Liberal interpretation of deferment regulations concerning married men, even if their wives have jobs, as a means of avoiding social and economic repercussions was urged last night at a meeting of more than 100 selective service officials.

In a special meeting called by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Capital selection head, to iron out classification policies, key men in the local draft set-up called for decisions by 25 local boards that would forestall not only immediate but long range hardships to families of selected men.

William E. Leahy, chairman of the Appeals Board, declared "not only questions of outright dependency, but interdependency" must be considered by board classifiers.

Typical Case Cited

"Suppose a man is called whose wife has a job but who, without her husband's income, is forced to give up her home, possibly losing the mortgage. This brings a financial disturbance," he said.

He asserted an increase in the country's "unemployment burden" might result in calling men whose wives would be forced to seek additional work to support themselves adequately.

Spencer Gordon, chairman of the Registrants Advisory Committee, cited several cases illustrating liberal deferment theories he advanced for adoption. He urged exemptions for men involved in the following situations:

Both husband and wife are working. The have no children, but they pool their incomes to support themselves as a family unit and thus are

Roosevelt Inspects New Naval Base Site at Jamaica

By International News Service

Aboard U. S. S. Tuscaloosa, off Kingston, Jamaica, Dec. 5.—President Roosevelt today saw for the first time a sample of what America received for its national defense in trade for 50 over-age destroyers released to England.

Picking up British and American officials at this capital of Britain's West Indies crown colony, the President sailed on to inspect Portland Bight, site of the naval base acquired here by the destroyer deal.

The President's guests on the Tuscaloosa for lunch and the inspection trip were the colony's governor, Sir Arthur Richards, Lady Richards and their children; Colonial Secretary and Mrs. A. W. J. Grantham; Public Works Director Cooper and American Consul General H. A. Watson.

The consul general reported that Jamaicans had expressed keen pleasure at having America establish a base there. He said the work would give badly needed unemployment relief.

Joys of Parking Where They Please Cost Couple $119

Two motorcycle policemen took Harry A. Wilson, 36, and his wife, Arthenia, 30, of 1727 R Street Northwest, to the Traffic Division for a parking violation yesterday and it cost the couple $119.

Privates H. J. Steinmyer and J. S. Davis were cruising near Seventeenth Street Northwest, about 3 a. m., when they noticed the Wilson machine parked within 50 feet of the building line. Steinmyer remembered he had a parking warrant for the car.

When the couple appeared they were told to drive to the Traffic Division where records disclosed 20 other parking warrants for the pair. Five additional counts also were placed against them.

Wilson was charged with driving an unapproved automobile, failing to change his address on driving permit, no lights on while motor was running, and the building line violation charge. Mrs. Wilson was accused of failing to change her address. The 21 warrants were split up between the two.

British Prisoners, Freed From Prize Ship By Sub, Describe Raids in Atlantic And Pacific, Mining of Australian Waters

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—The story of a German sea raider, disguised as a Greek ship, destroying enemy vessels in the south Pacific, laying mines in Australian and African waters and refueling from a Nazi tanker in midocean, is related in the log of the British freighter Haxby, a victim.

The 5,207-ton Haxby left Greenock last April 8 for Corpus Christi, Tex., the log, published by the New York Maritime Register and London Journal of Commerce, relates.

Seven days after the Haxby left her convoy a steamer carrying Greek colors crossed her bow. A moment later the Nazi ensign went up and incendiary and high-explosive shells from four concealed six-inch guns burst from the vessel.

In 30 minutes the Haxby was afire, her lifeboats riddled, gaping holes torn in her sides and 16 men dead.

"I decided to abandon ship," Capt. Arundell wrote in his log. "When the frigate captain saw us in the water . . with only lifeboats he put out boats and picked up survivors.

"We were taken aboard the raider and each of us were issued with the following articles: One shirt (wood pulp), one set underwear (wood pulp), one pair socks (wood pulp), on canvas suit, one pair canvas shoes (soles ersatz leather), toothbrush, tooth paste and one glass."

Later he noted in the log:

R. A. F. Bombs Set Arsenal Afire at Turin

British Fliers Pound Dusseldorf, German River Port, 12 Hours

By David Anderson
Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 5.—Turin and Dusseldorf received different kinds of pasting in raids carried out by the Royal Air Force on Italy and Germany last night, the air ministry announced today. The first was short and sharp, the second prolonged, yet the results of each attack are said to have been smoking ruins amid Axis war industries.

One British bomber failed to return from the trip across the Alps to Turin.

The British airmen reported vivid bursts of bombs on the roof of the royal arsenal and on the clustered buildings of the Fiat works at Turin.

What made these sights more than usually welcome was the threat of failure due to heavy cloud conditions in the first part of the outward journey. It was only when the British raiders were almost on their target that the mists lifted, offering them an ideal chance to fulfill their mission. The long flight across France and back again took nine hours, although less than two were devoted to the bombardment.

After the last bomber wheeled north from the royal arsenal, there was an eruption of flames and smoke

Britons Cheer Rebuke To Faction Urging Overtures to Hitler

By Raymond Daniell

London, Dec. 5.—Today's session of the House of Commons provided a striking demonstration of the vitality of democratic processes in this country, engaged in a death struggle against totalitarian states, and of the unanimity of purpose of the people and their government to carry on to victory regardless of sacrifices and costs.

The little handful of pacifists who argued for a conference to bring about a negotiated peace were heard respectfully by a well-attended House, which, after wildly cheering the uncompromising rebuke given proponents of the peace move by Clement Attlee, Labor Party leader, voted, 341 to 4, against an amendment to King George's speech, regretting his failure to open the door to peace talks with Adolf Hitler.

Except for the fact that the incident served to dramatize British solidarity against anything less than complete vanquishing of the enemy, and the fact that in doing it they are keeping alive those principles for which they are fighting, today's debate and its outcome would be

American Diplomatic Officials Acting To Protect Rights Of Embassy Clerk

By Samuel E. Stavisky
Copyright, 1940, by The Washington Post

A clerk in the American Embassy at Paris, granddaughter of a former United States Senator, has been arrested by Nazi authorities there on the charge of conniving to help British officers escape from occupied France, it was learned last night by The Post.

The woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Deegan, 40, of Asheville, N. C., is being detained by German police for questioning, the State Department confirmed after querying the Paris Embassy.

State Department officials said appropriate action is being taken by the embassy to protect the American woman's rights, and added that they did not yet know the specific charges.

The story of Mrs. Deegan's arrest first trickled into Vichy, capital of unoccupied France, and was reported last night by the New York Times in a copyrighted item.

Was Justice in District

Mrs. Deegan, who served the Paris embassy for the last four years and was one of the few women employes who chose to remain at their posts when the Nazi army marched in, is the granddaughter of Jeter Connelly Pritchard, Senator from North Carolina from 1895 to 1903, and later a justice of the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

A diplomatic officer closely connected with the embassy told The Post that Mrs. Deegan had an outstanding service record in the American foreign service, and scoffed at the Nazi charges.

He pointed out that it was part of Mrs. Deegan's job to help the scores of British subjects left in Paris when the British diplomats fled, and that she naturally had constant dealings with them.

"The British embassy officials left Paris so suddenly," the informant revealed, "that we of the American embassy found ourselves virtually swamped by the enormous task of taking care of the interests of the 6,000 stranded British subjects. She had red hair and plenty of guts."

As receptionist it was Mrs. Deegan's duty to meet and question the bewildered Britons, and to see what the American Embassy could do for them, the informant said, and he ridiculed the charge that she might have participated in a plot to smuggle English officers out of the country.

Lived in Paris 12 Years

"The British," he said, "were given a free run of Paris, and as a rule were not molested.

"Besides, knowing how well Mrs. Deegan had served the embassy during the invasion crisis, I feel sure she would not involve herself in any such escape activities," the informant insisted.

The Post learned that Mrs. Deegan (nee Rollins), member of a pioneer North Carolina family, had been living in Paris for the last 13 years, and four years ago was appointed to the clerical position. She was separated from her husband,

Lady Astor Makes Fighting Speech to U.S. Volunteer Fliers

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 5.—In a fighting speech to the Eagle squadron of American volunteers in the Royal Air Force, American-born Lady Astor declared today that the "British empire, backed by the United States, cannot fail."

She predicted that the same 30 American volunteers now training for active service alongside British fliers would be followed by "thousands of others."

"America should know that this is really the greatest hour of trial in the history of the English-speaking people," said Lady Astor, a native of Virginia, her eyes flashing. "They may not know it, but it's their turn next."

Turning to the young Americans, organized into a volunteer air force by Col. Charles Sweeney, Lady Astor exclaimed:

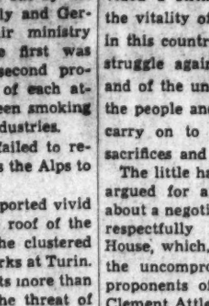
"I know they would come. Thousands of young Americans are longing to get into this war. It is right that they should.

"As Sherman said, 'war is hell,'" she added. "But it is more terrible that the civilization we think is based on Christianity should fail."

Lady Astor said the British would never submit under aerial bombardment.

"The most extraordinary thing is the stupidity of the German mentality," she said. "You can kill us, but you can never scare us."

She declared that the British people "enormously appreciate" the help coming from America through the Red Cross, the ambulance units and other relief organizations.



LADY ASTOR

"I don't suppose there ever has been a country in the world more generous than America has been to Great Britain."

She expressed the belief that world peace would be maintained after this war by the collaboration of Britain [illegible] the United States, and the war brought about [illegible] of the new world, she said, it is quite likely that this "great war will bring about federation of these two great empires."

The six children at home in the C family had never known what it meant to be hungry, until their feather lost his job three months ago. As funds dwindled, the family cut down on their food, before they sought any help. Today they are one of the neediest families in Washington.

Generous citizens, who have an impulse to help someone else at the Christmas season, will find an opportunity through contributions to The Post's Neediest Families Fund. Every contribution will help to give new hope and a definite prospect for independence to these families. It will be a Christmas gift not for one season, but for years to come.

Today Post readers are given a glimpse into the bleak situations in two of these families. Contributions should be sent as promptly as possible, to help relieve these emergencies, which are growing in seriousness.

Mr. C had held a small but steady job for several years as a clerk in a drugstore. By careful management he was able to take care of his seven children, but he never made enough to build up more than a small savings account. Nazis to Help Italy Boost Farm Yield

Output Fails to Meet Axis Needs; Poor Are Undernourished

By the Associated Press

Rome, Dec. 5.—Italy's farm production is not yet meeting the Nazis' needs, it was disclosed today, and thus she has agreed to accept German help in attempting to increase her agricultural yields.

The agreement was announced through Stefani, the official Italian news agency. (Italy recently instituted rationing of spaghetti, rice and flour for her own people.)

Italian growers, it was stated, will be assured good prices "stabilized as much as possible" by "elimination of the speculative influence on the world market."

Whether this means that the Italian government must act as a direct buyer of foodstuffs, selling them to its Axis partner was not made clear, but to foreign observers some such step seemed to be in view.

Effort to Defeat Blockade

There also will be cooperative action in fighting plant pests, breeding and feeding of livestock, canning, irrigation and colonization.

(All this appeared to be another German effort to defeat the British blockade. It followed by only a day a broad economic and agricultural alliance made with Rumania under which Germany is to extend financial credits for ten years for increasing Rumania's agricultural output, among other things.

(Only last Friday, a United States Department of Agriculture study based upon diplomatic reports said that an extension of food rationing was to be expected in Italy this winter; that the British blockade had disorganized the Italian economic structure; that the poor in great numbers already were suffering from malnutrition.

(All Italian imports of coffee and meat, 95 per cent of her fat and oil imports and 70 per cent of normal cereal imports had been cut off, the report added.)

Bomb Key Highway

On the military side, the Italian high command's communique said Fascist aerial action on the Albanian front had cut the Premet-Perati Highway at several points.

The objective appeared to be to halt a Greek advance beyond Premet—an advance which, if carried some 20 miles, would cut off the Italian forces at the southern base of Agirocastro.

Aside from this, the Italians were declared to have bombed a series of objectives—military works, columns of troops, supply trucks. The submarine Deflino was credited with having sunk a Greek destroyer in the Aegean November 29.

Without mentioning the date, Il Giornale D'Italia reported that a British cruiser of the Neptune type had been sunk by Italian torpedo boats.

Greeks Reported In Porto Edda

other quarter. Neither the Greek high command and Athens sources nor Rome dispatches have reported Greek entrance into Porto Edda. Advices on the Greek side merely have pictured impending occupation of the two towns.)

At the opposite end of the mountain-broken battlefront, near the Yugoslav border, Greek troops, fighting in snow and fog, were said to have cleared their foe from the last positions on Kamia and Mokra mountains, forcing a continued Italian withdrawal toward Elbasan, on the road to Tirana, Albania's capital.

Meanwhile, Albanian refugees arriving in Yugoslavia declared that Italy faced a general uprising in her Albanian protectorate unless she could deliver food and supplies. They asserted that hundreds of Albanian deserters from the Italian army were hiding out in mountains and forests.

The reported new successes in the astonishing Greek campaign would mean virtual collapse of the Italians' southern operations.

Thirty-nine days ago, when this Balkan war started, Italian forces of invasion on the southern sector were aimed at capture of Jannina, in northern Greece, and eventually Athens, the Greek capital, itself.

At the other end of the Albanian front other Fascists columns attempted to drive east onto Phlorina, Greece, en route to Salonika. This northern drive was squelched by Greek assaults whoch brought capture of the Italians' base, Koritza, and later Pogradetz.

Now, if the reports on Porto Edda and Argirocastro are to be credited, Italy has lot the principal sea gateway into southern Albania and stands to lose her last remaining base in the frontier region for conquest of Greece.

Heavy fighting was reported in southern and central sectors of the Albanian front with Italian aviation attempting to stem the Greek advances. The British Royal Air Force, according to Athens reports, also was taking a strong hand in the Greek offensive.

An R. A. F. communique reported raking bombardment of Italian troops and the communications vital to their withdrawal from the southwestern corner of Albania, two direct hits which left an Italian destroyer "listing heavily" off Porto Edda and apparent destruction of ten Italian planes in an air battle yesterday.

The fates of Porto Edda and Argirocastro were closely linked by the tumbled geography of southwestern Albania and their combined fate was linked to that of Premet, a town 15 miles within Albania which the Greek high command announced today had been taken.

Capture of Premet, in the upper valley of the Viosa River, opened the way for a Greek advance 20 miles further down the valley road to Tepelini, where the Viosa is joined by its tributary, the Dryno. Argirocastro lies in the Dryno Valley, about 20 miles upriver from Tepelini.

The only escape from Argirocastro left by the thundering mountain artillery of the Greeks was northward toward Tepelini. The Greek advance toward Tepelini threatened to bottle up the Argirocastro forces and thus, coupled with the frontal pressure on Argirocastro itself, was reported forcing withdrawal.

The main inland route from Porto Edda into northern Albania passes through Argirocastro. Italians at Porto Edda could not use it. They were reported to be withdrawing along the twisting coastal road to Chimara, 25 miles northwest of the port.

Bulgarians Close Rumanian Border

Turkish Press Sees Revival of Hopes For 'United Balkans'

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Rumania, Dec. 5.—The Bulgarians have closed their frontier, it was learned in official circles here tonight.

The explanation given here was that Bulgaria had decided that the entire number of emigrees allowed to enter southern Dobruja (Bulgaria) under the Craiova agreement already had crossed into Bulgaria. (This was the agreement by which southern Dobruja was returned to Bulgaria from Rumania.)

Meanwhile, new concentrations of Rumanian reservists were called up.

Earlier the ministry of interior had ordered all foreigners in Rumania to deposit their passports and identification papers with the police by December 20

Failure to comply will result in expulsion, the order said. No explanation was given.

Threat to Sofia Implied

Ankara, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Turkish radio said tonight that "it is indicated" Germany has promised to return to Rumania some of the territory she has lost recently. The comment was not expanded, but it appeared the radio was warning Bulgaria she might lose southern Dobruja.

Turkish Press Sees Hope Of Bulgarian Accord

Copyright by New York Times

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 5.—Unusual satisfaction with the speech of the Bulgarian foreign minister, Ivan Popoff, is expressed in the Turkish press as giving a further indication of the lessening of tension in the Balkans, especially as Germany shows signs of postponing aggression in the Near East following the tame conclusion of the Russo-German talks in Berlin.

Some newspapers seem to think that Popoff's speech holds out prospects of establishing a united Balkan front against aggression. But others write with greater reserve. Ulus' editorial says it is needless to record "how happy are the Turkish reactions to these pacific assurances from Sofia. It is within Bulgaria's power to make good these assurances as long as those in power pursue the interests of peace."

Turning to Popoff's references to Turkey's military preparations, the newspaper says these are not directed against Bulgaria, "which is our friend as well as neighbor."

Turkey has never entirely abandoned hope of the revival of the Balkan entente to include herself and Bulgaria, but not Rumania, in order that the Balkans should present a common front against aggression. In the remark, "we have always considered the security of the Balkans as a whole and never have conceived a Balkan union without Bulgaria or against her," Ulus puts out a feeler toward this goal.

Nazis Lose 14 Planes in Raids On England

South Coastal Town Under Heavy Attack For Several Hours

By James MacDonald

Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), Dec. 6.—London had a comparatively peaceful time of it this morning and last night, with the antiaircraft guns rumbling distantly as German raiders made minor attempts to penetrate the city's defenses. Only a few succeeded.

Formations of Nazi raiders launched a heavy attack on a south coast town last night. Many planes failed to reach the town owing to the intense antiaircraft barrage put up and were forced to drop their bombs indiscriminately.

Incendiary bombs caused a large fire in a nurses' home. In the raid, which was carried on for some hours, a cinema was hit but most damage was done to houses and shops. According to early reports, casualties were not heavy.

There were two alerts in the London area before midnight. Bad flying weather caused the raiders to retire after a period of slight activity.

The night's raids came after a day in which Nazi fliers attacked points in east Anglia, the southeast coast, the west Midlands, Liverpool and other points in west England. The air ministry announced that 14 German planes were destroyed yesterday, 13 of them falling victim to British fighter planes and the other being shot down by antiaircraft guns. British officials said two Royal Air Force defending planes were lost in the day, but that the pilot of one of them bailed out and landed safely.

In contrast to the quietness prevailing in London, heavy gunfire shook Channel towns for two hours last night when big British guns fought a violent artillery battle with German long-range rifles mounted on the French coast across the Straits of Dover. The shelling began at dusk, when the German guns began to roar and British heavy artillery boomed an immediate reply.

Petain Cheered In Toulouse And Lyon

Acclaim Is Personal Tribute to Premier, Not to Government

By G. H. Archambault.

Copyright by New York Times

Vichy, Dec. 5.—The chief of state, Marshal Henri-Philippe Petain, was back in Vichy this morning after his visits to Marseille and Toulon, every minute of which was occupied by some ceremony or some conversation.

At 11 o'clock last night, his train stopped at Avignon, where war veterans were lined up to cheer him and present him with the manuscript of the first draft of Mistral's great provencal poem, "Mireille."

Far from showing signs of fatigue, the marshal was the first to alight from the train, even before it had come to a stop. In Vichy this morning he appeared as alert as ever.

He has now been acclaimed in the most important parts of the free zone as the very incarnation of France. The Archbishop of Lyons said on the occasion of the marshal's visit to that city, "Petain is France and France is Petain." The definition seems to have been adopted now by the great majority, despite active propaganda on the part of Communists and stubborn inertia on the part of some supporters of the old regime.

It should be stressed that the acclaim, the confidence, the faith go out to Marshal Petain alone; all cheers raised have been either for him or for France. No one in Toulouse or Lyons or Marseille even thought of shouting, "Long live the government!" for there is an instinctive realization on all hands that today, so far as patriotic Frenchmen are concerned, Marshal Petain is everything and without him there might be nothing.

So much so that the newspaper Le Jour may write:

"After acceding to power with a cabinet taken from Parliament, the marshal—manifesting therein a remarkable sequence of thought—rid himself of 'heavyweights' in three successive phases. Is this work finished? He alone knows."

which looked like Vesuvius and was visible against the sky 50 miles distant.

The squadrons raiding Dusseldorf spent nearly 12 hours in clouds searching for openings. Periodically when an opportunity came they would glide down and discharge a bomb load on freight yards, armament works, quays and dockyards.

Other groups of British planes raided the ports of Antwerp and Calais, enemy airfields and searchlight and gun positions. Observers on this side of the Channel noted raiding activity on German gun positions at Boulogne tonight.

The chief objective at Turin was the royal arsenal, a major Italian source of supply for guns, gun carriages, shell cases and tanks. Official accounts say so many bombs fell on this large building that pilots lost track of their own missiles in the confused mass of explosions.

The Fiat factory's output of automobiles and airplane engines was believed crippled, as one raider after another sailed over the target, took careful aim and loosed eggs from 3,000 feet. "We could not miss; it is an enormous place," reported one aviator.

The squadron operated with precise teamwork. First, showers of incendiary and a few high explosive bombs were dumped on the target while the main raiding body kept "station." They attacked in small formations, sometimes in quick succession.

Dusseldorf's rail yards in the Derendorf district and the Mannesmann Rohrenwerke armament works, employing 6,000, were hit. The raiders maneuvered from 6 p. m. until nearly dawn. Twenty fires were counted.

American Arrives From Britain After Voyage in 97-Foot Ketch

Sails With Crew of Six to Spend Yule With Family; Menaced by Submarine, Food Shortage During 68-Day Trip

By Gene Plowden.

United Press Staff Writer

Miami, Fla., Dec. 5.—The 97-foot ketch, Marie, rode at anchor in Miami's yacht basin tonight after bringing its owner, Henry B. Clarke, here from England to spend the Christmas holidays with his family.

Clarke, a United States citizen whose factory in England makes airplane parts, bought the ketch and made the perilous 68-day voyage through submarine-infested waters after other avenues of travel had been closed to him.

"It was the most thrilling trip I ever made," said Clarke, who had made 34 crossings, "and the last one I'll make on this craft."

Clarke attempted to reach America aboard a clipper flying boat but found all seats booked until February and 6,000 on the waiting list. The neutrality act prevented his sailing on a British passenger liner and no American ship was available.

The Marie sailed from Dartmouth September 2. A month later she left Falmouth, with a crew of three Britons and three Danes. One night, before leaving England, a bomber came over and machine-gun bullets spattered the water, but none hit the tiny ketch.

The British admiralty allowed the Marie to clear.

Clarke's radio went out in the Channel and for the remainder of the voyage he could neither send nor receive.

At 4 p. m. October 16, while the ketch was 540 miles from Madeira, an Italian war submarine appeared dead ahead.

"She came for us and kept her guns trained on us," Clarke wrote in his log. "She passed within 200 feet to starboard and we waved. I smiled when one member of her crew waved back. Then she turned sharply, circled, and made off. She was about 250 feet long.

After Madeira, the ketch headed for Nassau. Food ran out and Clarke and his crew went on a forced fast for three days. During that time, Norman Middleton, the steward, who was making his first voyage, tried to make bread out of flour, castor oil and water.

Finally, they stopped the freighter Caribbean, out of Baltimore, and obtained some food and cigarettes.

Clarke planned to continue to New York tomorrow by train or plane and spend Christmas with his wife and four children at Roslyn, N. Y.

unimportant and scarcely worth mentioning.

The four members who voted in favor of the motion, offered by John McGovern, Independent Labor Party, who sponsored it, were his party confrere, James Maxton; William Gallacher, the lone Communist member, and David Kirkwood and Dr. Alfred Salter, both Laborites who for years have held pacifist views.

Maxton cast the only Independent Labor vote possible because the other two members of his party, McGovern and Campbell Stephen, were acting as tellers.

The government has issued a peremptory call to its supporters for the afternoon's division, and many service members in uniform helped swell the government majority. Supporting the opposition, Dr. Salter and Kirkwood opposed their own party's official policy. There may have been two or three members of the Labor Party who abstained from voting, but most of them gathered in the government lobby to show their opposition to McGovern's proposal to call off the war before complete victory is won.

Parliamentary Procedure

The reason war aims were discussed at all was that parliamentary procedure requires that, in debate on the King's address, an opportunity must be given the opposition to move amendment in order to register its viewpoint on any subject it chooses to raise. Today the amendment was offered by McGovern. There was a little restiveness when he said that a growing number of people believed the struggle could be ended, and that the prime minister himself in a book had conceded the danger of carrying on war to the point where both sides were exhausted by grief and poverty.

Declaring he was as much anti-Fascist as anti-Nazi, McGovern asserted that attempts to destroy nazism and fascism by force were merely putting in practice precepts of the German and Italian dictatorships. He suggested that if Italy were "properly" handled, her participation in the war would be short.

Finally he suggested that an approach should be made to Reichsfuehrer Hitler for a conference at which a fair and just peace could be negotiated. He declared, too, that today Britain has the "nearest approach to totalitarian government" it has ever had—an observation which brought a heated rejoinder from Attlee.

McGovern was followed by Stephen, who suggested that Britain make a great moral gesture to the world by offering Hitler peace on the basis of justice. Maxton denied that the partys proposal meant a cringing suing for peace, and said it was merely asking the government to state terms on which it would discuss peace.

Hitler Refused Parley

As chief speaker for the government, Attlee said the Independent Labor Party wanted a conference, but he reminded the speakers that Hitler was offered one before he invaded Poland and refused. The government spokesman wanted to know who would be invited to a conference if one were held, and demanded to know whom they would represent. Finally in conclusion, he said:

"I am not in a position to say when a statement of our aims can be made. Our aims are to try to establish a peace of free peoples. That does not mean the kind of peace in which everybody is subdued to the will of one man or nation, but a peace of free peoples as we civilized peoples understand it.

"What we ask for ourselves we ask for all other nations. You must replace the anarchy of the world by an ordered peace. We say you must base that ordered peace on ordinary justice. We must build a new world."

Attlee sat down to the accompaniment of cheers such as few ministers except Churchill hear.

Nazi Raider Lays Mines in Pacific

3,113-ton vessel out of Hamburg)."

The raider then rounded Cape Horn and on June 12 laid about 230 mines near the New Zealand coast.

(On November 8 the American freighter, City of Rayville, 5,883 tons, only American ship sunk in the war to date, struck a mine off Cape Ottway, Victoria, Australia, sinking almost immediately with death to one man.)

On June 18 the raider intercepted the Norwegian freighter Tropic Sea, loaded with wheat for England. After her capture the Winnetou came alongside to refuel the raider.

Try to Run Blockade

The raider placed the British sailors aboard the Tropic Sea with a prize crew, and dared the British blockade in an attempt to reach Bordeaux in occupied France.

The vessel was 400 miles off Gibraltar when the British submarine Traunt appeared, causing the Germans to scuttle the Tropic Sea. After they had staged a premature celebration in the belief, that the sub was a German U-boat.

Capt. Arundell, his crew, the Norwegian skipper and his wife were landed at Gibraltar by the submarine and a ship was sent to pick up the Germans and Norwegians.

Dies and Jackson To Work Together

Attorney General Sees 'No Objection' on Propaganda Expose

By the Associated Press

The Justice Department and the Dies Committee, which have been critical of each other, got together yesterday for an exposure of Nazi and Fascist propaganda in the mails.

Attorney General Jackson notified Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, of the committee, that although the department has been investigating the situation there was "no objection" to the committee's "having the facts and giving such publicity as you see fit to this flow of propaganad."

The propaganda in question, Jackson said, has been "imported to this country through use of mailing privileges which this country accords other countries under the international postal convention" and most of it "is legal in character and not subject to criminal prosecution."

Follows Conference

"The steps which we have taken and those which we are contemplating taking in connection with it will not be prejudiced by disclosure," Jackson said in a telegram.

This followed a conference between Jackson and Voorhis, designated by Chairman Dies (Democrat), of Texas, of the committee to act in his behalf, for the purpose of promoting cooperation between the department and the committee.

Voorhis said afterward that it was agreed each had "a place in a particular field—the committee in exposing subversive activities and the department in the apprehension of violators of the law."

Meanwhile, committee sources predicted that indictments would result from evidence turned over to the department that German sympathizers were sabotaging a British plane order in a California factory, which was not named.

Sabotage Denied

Dies said in a radio speech Monday that an experimental plane had crashed there with indications of sabotage and a committee clerk said today he was advised by a Los Angeles newspaperman that a B-25 medium bomber had been wrecked there after its starboard motor caught fire on a trial flight.

Col. Lowell H. Smith, of the Army Air Corps, said at Santa Monica that there was no evidence of sabotage, however, in the crash of a British experimental pursuit ship November 20 and the fire yesterday in a B-29 bomber, made for the Army by the North American Aviation Co. Both incidents were purely accidental, he said.

Jackson, in an interview, advised against too hasty assumption of sabotage in connection with industrial fires and explosions, explaining that "industry is engaged in a great and sudden speedup which results in accidents."

Daughter Home, King Family Scene Complete

The new-found love of Mrs. Lola Stageberg for the father she had never seen before a reunion in New York Tuesday yesterday branched out to include her parent's home town.

Resting at her father's home, 3038 O Street Northwest, after the excitement of the last three days, Mrs. Stageberg expressed determination to live here permanently.

"I want to have my husband come East from Denver, so we can settle here," she said. "I don't want to have to leave my father now that I've just found him," she said.

"Of course, that will mean that my husband will have to find a job here. I am not going to let him give up his position in Denver to come here without the promise of another."

Mrs. Stageberg went on to tell of her determination to find employment herself and thus aid in the financing of a new life, linked to that of Robert E. King, taxi driver, the father she had never heard of until a month ago.

If her plans about settling here did not turn out? "Then I will leave in time to be home Christmas Eve," Mrs. Stageberg said." She has been married only a month and a half, she added.

"She won't be going home for Christmas," King said. "She'll be right here."

Adm. Towers Warns On Inferior Planes

Cautions on Passing Over Improvements For Production

The chief of the Navy's flying forces said in his annual report yesterday that it would be "dangerous" to neglect development of new aircraft while energies were concentrating on boosting the production of warplanes for defense.

Rear Admiral J. H. Towers, as head of the Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, declared:

"The United States is entering a new period of intense competition in the aviation field, with emphasis on combatant aircraft."

"Important as is the necessity for accelerating production, we must not fail to realize that while we are catching up with foreign nations in productive capacity, there is danger that lack of emphasis on development and experimentation may leave us with aircraft inferior to those of foreign countries which are able to concentrate on this phase."

Admiral Towers reported that the situation with respect to patrol plane tenders had improved due to conversions completed and pending, but urged that progress be continued to offset completely the present deficiency and to insure for patrol squadrons the mobility and flexibility of operation of which they are capable.

He also recommended that training facilities existing and in prospect be used to maximum capacity to alleviate a shortage of naval aviators and meet the demands of the expansion program.

Towers urged continued close cooperation with the National Defense Council, the Army Air Corps, and manufacturers of aircraft to insure the rapid procurement of suitable aircraft; acceleration and simplification of procurement of civilian personnel; active pursuit of the shore station development program; and pursuit of a "moderate" air ship building program with continued training of personnel in nonrigid airships.

Towers said the year had been marked by rapid advancement in aircraft armament resulting from the activities of aircraft in the European war.

In cooperation with the Bureau of Ordnance, he said, the naval bureau has fostered improvements of naval aircraft armament along three principal lines, modernization and improvement of armament installations in existing fleet aircraft; incorporation in aircraft under construction of new designs in gun and bomb installations, a general increase in the caliber and number of guns carried, and improved new sighting methods; and design and development of new and more effctive aircraft weapons and accessories.

President Calls St. Lawrence Seaway 'Vital' to Defense

the Panama Canal,' a seaway to which the public development of St. Lawrence power is inseparably linked.

"It was then an opportunity. It is now a vital necessity."

A commission, named by the United States and Canadian governments, now is making necessary preliminary surveys for the proposed project, and discussions leading toward a treaty covering the project's construction are under way between the two governments.

After delivering the President's message, Berle declared that Canadian power resources already are taxed to capacity for defense needs, and that more power is needed on the United States side of the St. Lawrence for the same urgent purpose. Specifically, he said, there is need for the manufacture of more aluminum at the plants at Massena, N. Y., and of more chemicals at the plants of Union Carbide and other companies in the St. Lawrence Valley area.

The Presidential message described defense program "pressure" for "lots of cheap power."

He wrote:

"What would we not give today, we who are responsible for the country's supreme defense effort, if the great St. Lawrence turbines were already in place, steadily revolving under the drive of St. Lawrence waters now running to waste, producing every hour of the day 1,000,000 horsepower to supply the expansion of our essential defense industries.

"Had this project been started in 1934, as we urged, it would now be complete and occupying a place with other great projects, such as the Tennessee Valley in the Southeast, Boulder Dam in the Southwest and the Columbia River projects in the Northwest, among the great national defense assets of this continent."

Balfour added that "while in the air we work for measures to oppose the night raider, in the factory we will mend, patch, replace and rebuild. . . .

"Please tell your fellow countrymen in the United States, which is giving such invaluable and increasing help to our cause, that there is no limit to what we can face and accept. Argentina to Get $100,000,000 Loan

Stabilization Fund, Export-Import Bank To Supply Credits

The United States, giving further substance to its program for economic defense of the Western Hemisphere, yesterday announced a credit of about $100,000,000 to Argentina is being arranged.

Climaxing a visit here by a financial mission from the powerful South American country, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said a $50,000,000 credit from the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund was being negotiated, and Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, made it clear that a similar amount probably would be provided by an agency.

Pierson said he would "hate to see the Treasury do better than us."

No Trade With Reich

Morgenthau was asked whether any arrangements would be made to prevent Argentina or its businessmen from using some of the American money to pay debts to Germany or buy goods from the Reich. He replied:

"I have every confidence in the good faith of the Argentine government. I do not believe that they would take our money and do anything with it but do business with us."

He added that, in view of the British blockade, he did not see how Argentina could do any business with Germany at present.

Morgenthau also said that the stabilization operation for Argentina was "to a certain extent a departure from the original purposes of the stabilization fund, but we feel definitely that it will help a friendly government stabilize its currency in relation to the dollar and help us in our sales there."

Fund Created in 1934

The stabilization fund is a $2,000,000,000 account created in 1934 out of "profits" on the gold devaluation of the American dollar. Up to the present war, it was used primarily to stabilize the American dollar in terms of British, French, Dutch, Belgian and Swiss money, but the war brought that activity to a virtual standstill.

Morgenthau described the Argentine arrangement as similar, in some respects, to a $50,000,000 currency commitment given to China last week.

He said, however, that he did not feel it necessary to consult Congress about the Argentine arrangement, as he did in the case of China, "because of the important difference that Argentina is at peace."

Although some of the details remain to be settled, Morgenthau said that, in general, the $50,000,000 would be used to enable the Argentines to buy American dollars with their native pesos.

dependent on each other.

Husband and wife are employed as a domestic couple. They have a joint and interdependent income, since either one without the other might not be able to find employment.

Teachers in schools and colleges should be deferred until the end of the academic year, the chairman suggested.

Gordon emphasized, however, that his proposals applied only in general and that each case had to be decided on its merits.

The calling of Washington policemen and firemen was opposed both because of the shortage of Capital officers as well as on the ground of the exemption clause excusing from service those in necessary defense occupations.

Gen. Cox declared he would publish an opinion now being prepared by national selection headquarters on the part of police and firemen in the military training program.

A representative of the national office emphasized there would be no blanket deferment for occupational reasons, and that occupational deferments would cease when another qualified person had been found to replace the excused man.

Meanwhile, eight Washington selectees were ordered to permanent stations at the Edgewood Arsenal, Md., chemical warfare base, in a contingent of 116 recruits leaving Fort Meade for the post today.

Three men from the Capital area were assigned to the First Chemical Co. for laboratory work. They are Bartlo G. Hunt, 1312 A Street Southeast; Clark W. Jolley, Clearbrook, Va.; and King Stone, Warrenton, Va.

John S. Bean, Callaway, Md., and Ernest J. Tinsley, 1914 Biltmore Street Northwest, will join the Edgewood Headquarters Detachment. Two men ordered to the Tenth Chemical Co. are: John R. Dudley, of Middleburg, Va., and Kermit H. Godwin, of Silver Spring, Md.; Harry R. Bell, 618 Rock Creek Church Road Northwest, was assigned to Headquarters Company of the Second Chemical Battalion.

U. S. Probing Report British Halted Ships

Copyright by New York Times

The State Department has made inquiries of the British Embassy and is consulting with the Brazilian government on the reported stopping by a British ship recently of one or two Brazilian ships off the Brazilian coast. According to the reports, 20 or more Germans were taken off as well as goods destined from a Brazilian to a Venezuelan firm, both of which are on the British blacklist.

In the past, joint representations have been made to the offending government by the 21 American republics through the President of Panama. This is in accordance with the provisions of the Panama Declaration.

It is presumed that, if the official inquiries support the reports, similar action will be taken in the present instance.

Another Reported Stopped

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—Another Brazilian steamer, the Parah, was reported today to have been boarded nad searched by sailors of a British warship, possibly the same who boarded the Brazilian steamer Itape and caused a protest against British violation of the Pan-American neutrality safety zone.

Diplomatic quarters have reported a movement in several South American countries to close American ports to British ships as a reprisal.

Britain Plans Shipyards in U.S. to Replenish Merchant Fleet

The British government has decided to build its own ship assembly yards and construct prefabricated freighters on a mass production basis from parts made at factories throughout the United States and shipped to the two assembly points, one on the East Coast and one on the West Coast, it was said in official circles here last night.

The British Shipping Mission, which has been in the United States for nearly two months, has returned to New York to complete the final details and sign the last contracts before announcing the plan. The assembly plants will be similar in many respects to the Hog Island ship yard which the United States Government constructed and ran during the World War.

The rising rate of sinkings by Nazi submarines has forced the British government to take action, and after careful study and discussion with Administrative officials and leaders in private industry the mission recommended that in the long run the British would profit more by constructing their own shipbuilding facilities.

According to British estimates, the first ships should be completed within ten months, or perhaps even sooner. However, shipping circles are less optimistic.

The present arrangement is largely a compromise, arrived at after talks between the British Shipping Mission, the United States Maritime Commission, the Navy Department and other interested Government agencies.

At these conferences it was decided that it would be impossible to use existing facilities for the production of freighters for the British, not only because the yards were pressed to fill orders from the American Government, but also because the ships which the American ship yards would turn out would be built for an entirely different purpose than the type of vessel which the British government wanted.

Agriculture Dept. Estimates Five-Year Outlays for Defense

National defense outlays of approximately $35,000,000,000 in the next five years were visioned yesterday in an Agriculture Department study on "the impact of war and the defense program on agriculture."

Departmental economists estimated defense spending would go to $7,500,000,000 in 1941 and reach a peak of $9,000,000,000 in 1942, assuming the United States is not involved in war and there are no drastic changes in present policies.

For the remainder of the five-year period, the economists estimated a tapering off in defense spending to $7,500,000,000 in 1943, $6,000,000,000 in 1944 and $5,000,000,000 in 1945.

Special Defense Fund

The report said greater costs might be expected in event of "additional unfavorable developments in the world political situation" and that the expense would be less if peace comes, with an accompanying public demand for economy.

Other Administration sources, meanwhile, indicated that the President probably will ask restoration and a possible increase in the $200,000,000 special defense fund placed at Mr. Roosevelt's disposal by Congress this year.

Of the $100,000,000 cash allocated for Presidential use, and an additional $100,000,000 in contract powers for defense purposes, the President has only $86,000,000 cash unobligated and only $36,000,000 remains of his contract authorizations.

Last assignment from the fund was $50,000,000 to the Navy and $25,000,000 to the Army for developing new Atlantic bases received from Great Britain. It was pointed out that numerous other agencies have made defense demands on the fund, and that these will increase as the defense program gains speed.

Farm Aid Guide

Estimates on defense program costs by Agriculture Department economists were prepared as a guide in planning future farm aid programs. The economists estimated that as a result of defense spending nonagricultural income may increase from around $60,000,000,000 in 1940 to at least $82,000,000,000 in 1942. It was estimated that cash farm income would increase to approximately $9,500,000,000 in 1941 and to more than $10,000,000,000 in 1942. Offsetting the farm income advance "in considerable measure," the report suggested, would be probable advances in farm wages and in cost of farm materials and equipment.

"Despite the increase in prices and incomes received by farmers, the situation as a whole does not promise any great improvement in living conditions on the farm," the report concluded.

Morgenthau Backs Jones on Britain

Britain would need credits, Morgenthau said:

"If I knew the answer to that, it would not have been necessary for Sir Frederick to have come over."

Morgenthau pointed out that Sir Frederick "has been here twice before and he has never asked for anything before."

Taft Assails Secretary

Attacking the Administration's foreign loan program in the Senate, Senator Taft charged Morgenthau would be guilty of "usurpation of authority and breach of trust" if he carried out an announced plan to aid China with money from the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Absent when the Senate Banking Committee and the House Coinage group jointly voted confidence in Morgenthau on disclosure of the China loan policy earlier this week, Taft said he would have "protested vigorously" had he been present. He maintained that Morgenthau would need the specific approval of Congress before using the fund for Chinese aid, and that indorsement by two Congressional committees did not constitute such authority.

Morgenthau, Taft declared, had "lost all sense of reason in the performance of his duty."

The stabilization fund, Taft said, was for the purpose of minimizing fluctuations in the exchange rate and possibly discouraging any competitive devaluation of the currency and not for use as "a diplomatic war chest to support the economies of friendly nations from China to Latin America."

He declared Morgenthau "seems to fee. that his appearance before the Banking and Currency Committee and his explanation of Chinese loans removes all further restrictions on the stabilization fund so that the whole $2,000,000,000 can be used to loan foreign countries."

Taft said he approved of making a loan to China, but it was a question for Congress to decide and no one should say "the risk was nil."

On possible financial aid to Britain, he told newsmen he was "open-minded" but that "if we are going to do anything, it might perhaps be better to give them the money than lend it to them."

"At least that ought to be considered," said Taft. "In the end I think we may have to lend money to England but some immediate aid to Canada would be desirable first."

Senator Grows Personal

Expressing surprise at Jones' comment on England as a credit risk, Senator Clark said "nobody cares what Morgenthau thinks is a good loan—he's never had a business transaction in his life. But Jesse Jones is a very different proposition."

Clark's call for a Congressional inquiry into Britain's present credit resources in this country before considering financial aid was in line with a resolution still pending before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Action on both this measure and proposed modification of the Johnson Act has been postponed until next session. The Administration has never officially indicated it intends to seek repeal of the latter. The Johnson Act does not ban loans by Government-owned corporations.

Suggestions in Congress that Sir Frederick himself be asked to testify before Congressional committees on Britain's financial condition were put to Morgenthau at his press conference. The Treasury Secretary replied only: "I haven't had a chance to think about it."

Clutch Trouble Merely a Cat, Motorist Finds

Winchester, Va., Dec. 5 (AP).—Robert Wilt, 30, salesman, thought his automobile had a bad clutch.

As the car started he heard a strange sound that seemed to come from the clutch and each time he shifted gears the noise became worse. Wilt said he stopped the car, cut the motor off and stepped on the clutch pedal.

"The sound was repeated, louder this time," he said. "I tell you, the chills began creeping up and down my spine."

Raising the hood of the car, he found, fastened between the clutch pedal and floor board and tangled in the ignition system wires, a cat—a black cat.

U. S. Report Asked On Belvoir Hiring

War Department Urged to Tell of Union Requirements

Renewing his attack on reported construction labor requirements at Army camps, Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday introduced in the House a resolution calling on the War Department to furnish information as to whether only union carpenters are eligible for employment at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Hoffman also read excerpts from a letter purported to have been written by a laborer from East Falls Church, Va., stating that he had been denied work until he joined a union and asserting that union iniation fees varied from $5 to $25.

He also recounted a telephone conversation with a 63-year-old union workman who said, among other things, that a young college graduate who has never had any experience as a carpenter was earning $120 a week "on a Government job as a carpenter within a few miles of Washington."

Hoffman also introduced a bill to extend the provisions of the ban on "kick-back" of Federal wages to national defense projects and to add a new section making it unlawful to demand or receive any sum of money as a condition precedent to obtaining work or furnishing materials on defense jobs.

The information asked of the War Department, Hoffman said, "is sought from official sources because, while the unions admit that they are demanding the payment of a sum of money for the exercise of the right to work on government jobs, no one knows the amount that has been paid, how much has been added to the cost of the jobs, and to what extent the work has been delayed."

Hoffman explained that he wanted the information as a foundation for a resolution, heretofore introduced and pending before the House Military Affairs Committee, seeking the appointment of a House committee "to investigate the whole situation in connection with the denial of the right to work on government jobs unless conditions prescribed by individuals or unions are met."

One of the purposes of the latter resolution, he added, is "to determine the accuracy" of such statements as he cited from anonymous workmen.

"Some of these statements we know to be true," he said. "As to the others, there is a dispute. The taxpayers are entitled to know the truth."

Strikes Threaten Warplane Output

Menasco and Harvill in California, and Ranger, Republic, Grumman and Liberty on Long Island.

"The production of planes, so vital to this Nation as well as to Great Britain, is in danger of being stopped at any moment," Representative Costello declared.

He demanded that the Government decide whether it will pay for the estimated $250,000,000 increase in the cost of the aviation program if the Vultee raise becomes general throughout the industry.

The Vultee scale, raising the old 50-cent-an-hour minimum to 62.5 cents, "cannot be adopted in the aircraft industry without causing a similar increase in wages in all industries throughout the Nation," said Costello.

"These increases," he said, "are the first step in a period of inflation which threatens to make the silk shirt days of the World War period look like shreds of cotton. Something must be done to prevent this wild inflationary movement which is now budding."

Representative Costello urged that the proper governmental agencies decide on a uniform policy of meeting the potential increased costs. He told reporters that "the Government should let the manufacturers know if they must accept the responsibility for wage increases."

Some—but not all—national defense contracts do make provisions allowing for possible boosts in cost, he declared.

Sabotage Defense Drafted for States

U. S. Prepares Bills For Legislatures To Act Upon

A national system of sabotage defense in which virtually every State, city and town would be armed with new powers to assist the Federal Government began to take shape in Washington last night.

Within a few days, The Post learned, the Governors and Legislatures of 43 States will be asked to enact uniform legislation intended greatly to increase their powers to protect public utilities and defense industries against saboteurs.

At the same time initial steps to provide municipalities with similar powers were taken at the annual meeting here of the National Institute of Municipal Law Officers.

Four Bills Drafted

Four antisabotage and home defense bills have been drafted for submission to 43 State Legislatures meeting in January, The Post was informed. Drafting of the bills is the first major accomplishment of a conference of State Governors and law enforcement officers held in the Capital last August.

Though provisions of the bills remain secret, one of them, it was learned, is expressly aimed at sabotage prevention. A second bill would set up State laws for licensing of explosives while a third would provide means for State control of public properties lying along or crossing State lines.

An official of the drafting committee cited as a classic example of the need for the third bill the fact that water sources in Pennsylvania feed systems supplying water to certain defense industries in Maryland.

Home Guards Proposed

A fourth proposed measure would establish State homeguards to replace the National Guard when State units are called into Federal service. Enactment of this bill by the State legislatures would make uniform throughout the country the responsibility of Home Guard units and the conditions under which they would be organized under authority granted by Congress.

The legislation was drafted by a committee of the Federal-State Conference on Law Enforcement Problems of National Defense, whose August meeting was under Department of Justice auspices.

Increased authority for city governments, including that of the District, to enable them to cope uniformly with problems certain to arise when the National Defense program hits top speed was urged yesterday before the annual meeting of city law officers at the Mayflower Hotel.

After listening to Col. Louis J. Roberts, city attorney of Evansville, Ind., outline changes in municipal services likely to result from national defense, the institute decided to name a committee to study the problem and to make recommendations for expansion of city powers.

At an earlier session the institute was read a message from Attorney General Jackson declaring that "concerted action" between municipal officers and the Federal Bureau of Investigation is essential in dealing with sabotage and espionage.

Roosevelt Sends Greetings

President Roosevelt sent the institute "hearty greetings," declaring it "our supreme duty" to "safeguard those institutions of democracy on which all of our happiness as a Nation rests."

"In the performance of that duty we need the cooperation of all citizens," Roosevelt said. "It is a source of great satisfaction to know that we can depend on the full support of our municipal law officers in this great work."

In additional to taking measures to safeguard public utility properties, Colonel Roberts, who will report for a year's service with the Army in a few days, pointed out that cities in some instances will have to double their police forces and greatly increase their education and sanitation facilities to take care of the influx of workers for defense plants.

He pointed out also that most cities operate under definitely restricted authority granted in charters or set forth by the State Legislature and that these powers must be greatly expanded to enable municipalities to provide services necessary to the success of the defense program. He suggested that additional grants of authority be made on a "limited emergency" basis.

Few cities have either funds necessary for expansion of services or the authority to expend them, Roberts said. "Who is going to provide the answer to the city's budget problems of defense preparation?" he asked. "How can the little towns absorb sudden population increases? What is going to happen to their public services?"

Roberts recommended that the solution be left to a special commission of city officials working with the Defense Commission and other Federal agencies.

"It is always later than you think on the home front," Walter E. Helmke, Fort Wayne city attorney, told the institute in urging measures to protect utilities from bombing planes.

"If we err on the side of excessive caution we shall have little to regret," he said. "If we err on the side of complacency we most certainly will have cause for regret."

Defense Sidelights

Col. Jouett Again Will Head Aeronautical Trade Chamber

New York, Dec. 5. (AP).—Col. John H. Jouett, of Washington, D. C., was reelected president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce today at the annual meeting of the membership.

JOUETT

Other officers elected: Glenn L. Martin, Baltimore, Md.; L. R. Grumman, Bethpage, N. Y., and Howard Mingos, New York, vice presidents; Richard H. Depew, jr., Alliance, Ohio, secretary; Frank J. Walsh, Passaic, N. J., treasurer and assistant secretary.

Col. Jouett said at the annual meeting that American manufacturers of aeronautical equipment have spent or contracted to spend nearly $316,000,000 on plant expansion to meet National defense needs.

The number of workers has expanded from 60,000 last January to 164,920, he said, and when current expansion programs are completed by next June the industry will have 382,000 employes in its shops.

Anthem Regulations Are Changed

The Army changed official regulations yesterday to provide that occupants of tanks and other combat vehicles need not get out and salute when the National Anthem is played.

Rules previously had required that all vehicles in motion should halt and all occupants except drivers should tumble out, down or off, snap to attention and salute upon hearing the strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Gets Limited Divorce

In the Circuit Court at Rockville, Judge Stedman Prescott has signed a decree granting to Mrs. Catherine Miller Hutchinson, of Bethesda, a limited divorce from Robert M. Hutchinson, of Washington. It was charged that the plaintiff was deserted November 27, 1939. The marriage took place at Bethesda February 19, 1938, it was stated.

WPA Accused Of 'Hi-Jacking' Construction

A. F. L. Building Trades Chief Makes Charge At Defense Parley

The Works Progress Administration was accused of "hi-jacking" the construction industry yesterday as some 500 building representatives gathered here to discuss their part in the national defense program.

John P. Coyne, president of the building and construction trades department, American Federation of Labor, charged that skilled workmen are being used at relief wages by the WPA "in numbers exceeding those which have been made available to the National Defense Program by the building and construction trades."

Called to a national industrial conference by the United States Chamber of Commerce, the building men, at a luncheon session at the Hotel Washington, heard Coyne charge the WPA with competing with private contractors and forcing skilled labor to accept relief wages.

He demanded that skilled workmen be eliminated from the WPA rolls and be made available to the "fullest extent" for jobs under the defense program.

"I request you all," said Coyne, "to use your best efforts to have Congress confine the WPA to projects on which only common or semi-skilled labor would be required."

The meeting was keynoted by warnings from the construction men that "business must be freed from unecessary restrictions and must be given a fair chance" to carry out the program for both normal and national defense requirements.

The construction industry, said Alfred Rheinstein, chairman of the coordinating committee of the New York Building Congress, is probably better prepared than any other to produce on a large scale in times of emergency.

John W. O'Leary, chairman of the executive committee of the United States Chamber of Commerce, saw private construction work as a "sound foundation" for the defense program.

"We need it also," he said, "as something substantial on which to build our future prosperity when defense construction is finished or greatly reduced."

Lewis H. Brown, president of the Johns-Manville Corp., was prevented from flying here from New York because of bad weather conditions and addressed the meeting over long-distance telephone.

He warned of the "tremendous responsibility" placed on industry by the defense program after more than ten years of running in "low gear." He likened the job to an athlete out of training for years who is suddenly called upon to do a 100-yard dash in "10 seconds flat."

Brown said the United States should continue to give all possible aid "short of war" to Great Britain.

Other speakers who discussed the industry's part in preparing defense lines were Ernest T. Trigg, president, National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association; Thomas S. Holden, New York, vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corp.; Charles F. Palmer, Atlanta, housing coordinator of the National Defense Commission; George West, Atlanta, past president, United States Savings and Loan League.

The meeting closed last night with a banquet at the Hotel Washington.

Short of Funds, Family Cuts Down on Food

Savings Dwindle After Father of Six Children Is Laid Off

The store management changed, and the help was replaced with the manager's friends.

The C family moved to cheaper quarters, and began cutting down on food. This was hard to do, especially when the young children needed milk. The oldest boy, 17, has joined the Navy, but the other six children, all under 13 years of age, must look to their father for the support which he cannot now give.

Mr. C, who is industrious and has an excellent work-record, has prospects of getting a job within the next few months. His greatest worry is whether the family can be tided over this period without suffering. One month's rent is overdue, and the fear of eviction looms.

With $65 a month for two months, the family's living expenses could be provided. Since the children's shoes are worn-through, $10 more is required for minimum clothing needs.

Family certified and help administered by Family Service Association. Amount needed, $140.

FAMILY NO. 10

Mr. and Mrs. L have been struggling for the last few months to keep their family from want, since Mr. L lost his job as a driver for a provisions company. He had worked on this job for two years, but when the company combined with a larger firm, he was released.

He cannot apply for every type of work because he lost the sight in one eye several years ago. But even with this handicap, he has had a record of ten years' driving without an accident.

He has been able to get only a few days' work in the past month, and has several bills pressing for payment. Rent is overdue and there is the threat of an eviction notice.

The four children need more nourishing food than they are getting. Mr. and Mrs. L are particularly proud of the fact that the youngest child, Mary, 18 months, has not had rickets. All the other children had this illness, but Mr. and Mrs. L sacrificed greatly to give her the proper diet. Now they fear that she and the other children will suffer, unless there is a way to provide the food they need.

One hundred dollars will help pay the rent for two months and will buy fuel and food and warm clothing for the children.

Family certified and help administered by Catholic Charities. Amount needed, $100.

These families are not eligible for public relief, and the funds of the various social agencies are severely limited, insufficient to meet all the demands made upon them.

Each one of the 50 neediest families was selected by one of the following agencies: Family Service Association, Catholic Charities, American Legion welfare office, Salvation Army and Bureau of Rehabilitation. These agencies, which are members of the Community Chest and supported by Chest funds, carry all costs of administering The Post's fund for the neediest families.

Envoy Expects Britain Will Ease French Blockade

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Gaston Henry-Haye, French Ambassador, said today he was "practically sure" Great Britain would permit help to be sent to the civilian population in France, although no official response to a French request had been received yet. He did not amplify his statement, made at a luncheon of the Paris Repatriates Club in the Hotel Brevoort here.

The Ambassador devoted most of his talk to a defense of the actions of the Petain government, saying that the Vichy government was not understood by most Americans.

Post Fund to Bring Renewed Courage, Mrs. Roberts Says

Mrs W. A. Roberts, executive secretary, Council of Social Agencies, and secretary, Citizens Christmas Committee, says:

"May I express to The Post the very deep appreciation of the Citizens Christmas Committee of the Council of Social Agencies for the constructive appeal being made by The Post for the 50 neediest families in Washington?

Mrs. Roberts

"The needs of these families are well known to the workers in the family welfare agencies. The funds raised by The Post will be used to put these particular families back on their feet and give them renewed courage.

"The contributions made through The Post to these families are in addition to the relief funds given by the Community Chest to its member agencies, but neither Chest dollars nor those of the public agency can possibly be stretched to cover the needs of all the families in Washington requiring assistance. This is particularly true as the Community Chest was not given sufficient community backing in its recent campaign to reach the minimum goal which had been asked. Even if this goal had been reached, there would still have been many families uncared for.

"Without the help given by The Washington Post at Christmas, the families in which you are so deeply interested would have been among those uncared-for people. But with your help, they will be given a lift which we hope will help in bringing them back to normal once more.

"I earnestly hope your appeal will be successful so that in these 50 Washington homes Christmas Day will be one of real joy and thanksgiving."

SEC Criticizes Auditing Firm In Drug Fraud

Failure to Uncover McKesson & Robbins Shortage Is Hit

The Securities Commission said yesterday that Price, Waterhouse & Co., New York auditors, had failed to use a proper "degree of vigilant inquisitiveness and analysis of the evidence available" in auditing the books of McKesson & Robbins, Inc., huge drug company.

The commission had inquired into the circumstances surrounding what it called a $19,000,000 "fraud" directed by Philip M. Musica, alias Frank Donald Coster, who killed himself while being taken into custody.

Musica, according to the SEC's account, had conducted a fictitious foreign business in crude drugs which amassed about $21,000,000 in nonexistent assets when it was exposed in December, 1938.

The SEC's investigation was concerned with the financial statements filed with it by McKesson & Robbins, of which Musica was president. These reports, the SEC said, were based on audits made by Price, Waterhouse & Co.

The commission said that the audit firm had conformed substantially "in form" with the procedures generally considered necessary at that time, but that failure to discover the "gross overstatement of assets and of earnings is attributable to the manner in which the audit was done.

"We are convinced by the record," the SEC said in a lengthy report, "that the review of the system of internal check and control at the Bridgeport (Conn.) offices of McKesson & Robbins was carried out in an unsatisfactory manner."

Noting that Musica himself had regularly appointed the auditing company, the SEC offered several suggestions for the selection of auditors. It proposed that the stockholders vote on the appointment of a firm from a list chosen by a committee of nonofficer directors; that the audit short-form report or opinion be sent to all stockholders, and that auditors be required to attend stockholder meetings to answer questions.

Another recommendation was that auditors increase the "physical inspection or independent confirmation" of figures shown in documents and records.

German Aid to Russia Beat Finns, Photographer Asserts

Without German help, Russia would have lost the Finnish war, Albert J. Hart, former Washington Post photographer, who fought for Finland, said yesterday.

HART

The tide began to turn, he said, when Russian first-line troops were thrown against the Finns and when German artillerymen were employed to lay the Russian guns and German airplanes took the place of Russian. He talked with German infantrymen, he added, who were captured by the Finns while fighting for Russia.

It is not the war and the fighting which Hart wants to talk about now, though. It is the bravery of the Finns and their present destitution and how badly they need help from America, where alone they can expect it. Their most pressing need, he said, is for warm clothing in the approaching winter and for artificial limbs for their wounded.

"There are 200 Finnish veterans," he said, "without arms or legs who have tried to starve themselves or to commit suicide in other ways because they see no hope for themselves ever to be anything but helpless burdens on their country. They have been forcibly fed and otherwise prevented from taking their own lives. Artificial arms and legs would give them hope, but they simply cannot be had, except from America."

Hart told of the intricate machinations of Russian propaganda, which includes incessant broadcasts to Finland describing glories of life in the Soviet, despite the fact that 800 men, women and children once walked 600 miles through the snow to escape from Russian-occupied Finland. Only 370 arrived at Helsinki.

He cited a case where 60,000 Russian soldiers were released by Finland and were photographed in motion pictures which showed them overcome with delight at being returned to Russia. Then they were lined up and shot so they could not return home to describe what actually took place on the Finnish front.

Hart's first taste of warfare was given him last March off the coast of Scotland, when he saw nine British ships in a convoy sunk by torpedoes. On his way to Finland to photograph the war as a free lance, he enlisted in the International Brigade, the Sisu or "Superman" brigade. When the war ended, he said, 300 Hungarians left the brigade to join the Germans and 50 Belgians went to Norway to fight against them.

The Finns, Hart declared, will fight their way back despite all obstacles.

Standard Jury Instructions On Way Here

Bar Group Works On Project to Speed Trials, Cut Costs

Standard jury instructions to speed trials and cut the cost of lawsuits will be worked out by three Washington judges and a special committee of the District Bar Association.

Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the association, announced launching of the project yesterday. The task is expected to take about six months.

Campbell Heads Group

Heading the special committee is Attorney Edmund D. Campbell, whose group will collaborate with the judicial committee appointed by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the United States Court of Appeals. The judges are Justice Wiley Rutledge, of the Appeals Court, and Justices Oscar R. Luhring and James W. Morris, of the District Court.

When the jury in a lawsuit has heard the facts from witnesses it becomes the duty of the presiding judge to explain the principles of law applicable to the case. For centuries it has been the practice to work out the instructions to be given on each occasion, often in the course of many hours of dispute.

The proposed reform here is inspired by procedure adopted in the courts of California, where "standardized" instructions have been prepared, to be given as cases require them with little, if any, change in form or wording.

Advantages of the proposed system expected by Chairman Campbell include reduction of the average duration of jury trials by about one-third, with consequent saving of money to litigants and taxpayers; reduction of the number of appeals by eliminating many errors of law that now creep into the "handmade" instructions, and more enlightened deliberations because of the simpler procedure.

Pope Assails Mercy Killing To Purge Race

Approves Decree Against Wartime Move to Save Food

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Dec. 5.—The Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office, the Catholic Church's most authoritative organ to protect faith and morals, has condemned euthanasia (mercy killing) for racial reasons, it was announced today.

That decision is one of the most important which the Catholic Church has taken against racism, because it has been done openly, officially with the full authority of the Holy See.

The condemnation is in the form of a decree answering a question put to the Holy Office concerning "the direct killing of innocents to be carried out on the order of public authority." Your correspondent was told today by an important Vatican authority that certain knowledge had arrived from outside of Italy that euthanasia was being practiced for reasons connected with improving the race and so as to have less mouths to feed in wartime. Persons incurably insane or physically incapable of working or providing offspring for the state are the victims.

The Sacred Congregation ruled that the practice was "contrary to natural and positive divine law." The Pontiff thereupon "approved, confirmed and ordered the decision to be published." The decree said that while it is admitted that a criminal may be deserving of death at the hands of the state, it is denied that the interests of the state render permissible the elimination of the weak just because they are weak.

Girl's Good Steer Wins Prize, Stakes Dad to a Farm

Chicago, Dec. 5. (AP). — Pretty Evelyn Asay sold her grand champion steer today for $3,498, enough to help her father buy a farm.

The 1,060-pound Hereford, best beef animal exhibited at the forty-first International Livestock Exposition brought $3.30 a pound, nearly 20 times the highest price paid on the day's open market.

Miss Asay, an 18-year-old Mt. Carroll, Ill., Junior College freshman, smiled for a moment when the $3,498 check was handed to her, then hugged "Sargo," white-faced steer, and wept. The two had been close companions since Miss Asay bought the animal 11 months ago for $50 when he was six months old. He won $835 in prize money for her at various exhibitions.

Won't Desert China, Russia Tells Japan

Moscow, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—The Soviet government today disclosed officially that its policy toward China (which has been one of military and economic assistance) remains unchanged.

The official announcement, first made known through Tass, official news agency, came after newspapers had featured a Tass dispatch from Tokyo announcing a conference between the Soviet Ambassador there, Constantin Smetanin, and the Japanese vice minister for foreign affairs, Chuichi Ohashi, at which Smetanin had outlined Russia's position.

With Mary Harris

FOOTBALL IS KING in Washington this week-end. Night spots are jammed with folks eating, drinking, talking, singing football. The Chicago Bears will roll into the Ambassador Hotel tomorrow and the hostelry's Hi-Hat will be dynamic with excitement and folks trying to get a peek at the big footballers. The Redskins will retire to their quiet tepees in the Fairfax Hotel, not to be so much on view. But the Hi-Hat will leap with football spirit while Jimmy Summerville and his Four M's play "Chicago, Chicago, That Toddlin' Town," in honor of the Bears. While the Bears have to go beddy-bye-bye at 11 p. m. sharp, no such rule applies to the team's execs who, as on previous visits, will probably be around Hi-Hat until the bell rings.

After the championship game, crowds of rejoicers and moaners will head for spots open on Sunday night. The Madrillon and Troika will be crowded even more than usual. Also Paul Young's, where "Emcee" Al Gale is proudly waving his game tickets under the noses of envious customers. Del Rio's big parking lot will be crowded with cars of football fans enjoying its new show, headed by Archie Robbins, also featuring dancers Jane and Wild and blues singer Nancy Walker.

FOUR HITS AND A MISS. We're talking about Mayfair's Paul Kain foursome with songstress Adele Van. But don't get us wrong. Miss Adele is a big hit, too. Both with Mayfairites and with Al Pearce, who recently auditioned her. As a result of the audition she may soon leave for the West Coast to join Al Pearce's Gang. This would be our town's loss, only to be mitigated by the Pearce radio sessions. Since her debut at Cafe Caprice, Adele has adorned the Lounge Riviera, Glen Echo, the air waves and, now, Mayfair.

"TONIGHT IT'S SNOWING DIAMONDS," thrilly song by Pianist Eddie Chase, is being sung by Russ Cullen every night in the Pall Mall Room. It's the first winter song of the season, has a fascinating frosty glitter, very probably will be the theme song of a new Manhattan ice carnival.

BACK STAGE. Hal Cummings, the Shoreham's barytone star, confided back stage that he's a step ahead of F. D. R.'s defense tours. He's just back from the West Indies, where he saw the sites of most of the new U. S. air and naval bases . . . If you step back stage at the Lotus you'll see four of the cutest Chinese babies ever. They're the offspring of vaudevillian Jim Wong, range from 9 months to 4 years old. Manager Dick Lam of Lotus is positively gloating over the new show he'll present next week. Says it'll not only be big, but plumb astonishing! . . . In their off hours you'll find the Arthur Murray dancers, not back-stage, but in the Mayflower Lounge. There were six of them there the other eve and they never missed a conga or rhumba . . . Talking back stage with Ray Nelson, singer-bassist of the Casino Royal, we find that his special joy is the electric kitchen in his new apartment. He says he's a good cook, though a bit of a kitchen "noodler."

"Mayor" Ciro of the Famous Village has just ordered a flock of song books so that the customers will know all the words when the nightly songfest starts with Dare at the solovox and the "Mayor" coaxing rhythm from his French horn.

MAGIC IN COSMOS. Bob Simpson's new Cosmos Room Orchestra is evoking no end of oh-ing, ah-ing and cheering. It's sleek, hot, sweet, inspiring, danceable and several other complimentary adjectives. More especially, it makes a splendiddly successful bid for the approval of the younger set and has already magnetized all listening undergrads . . . Hollywood came to the Cosmos the other eve when beauteous Madeline Carroll, Geraldine Fitzgerald and he-man Bruce Cabot arrived all at once.

VERSAILLES' GOLDEN BANquet. The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Morgenthau were honor guests at a dinner given at La Salle Versailles on Wednesday by ranking Treasury officials. The chefs were in a great dither, we're told, over the privilege of preparing a feast for the country's head money man. Couque de vin (capon in wine) and other delicacies a la Francais were on the menu.

CUSTOMER ANGLES. There's never a big public function or ball at Wardman Park that isn't followed by dozens of jolly little parties in the Metronome Room. The visitors don't count the evening complete unless they top it off with sung by Russ Cullen every night in music . . . Visiting and resident naval officers can't resist the Anchor Room. They feel right at home in that cruiser interior . . . Many of the folks seen in Burt's Trans-Lux used to be patrons of his two New York Avenue cafes, managed by his wife, Mrs. Margaret Lopatin, and his sister, Betty. Burt, Margaret and Betty are now all together at the Trans-Lux and everyone's very happy about it . . . The new Silver Fox immediately drew scads of customers from up around Chevy Chase way. But the fame of its steaks spread so quickly that diners now arrive from all over town . . . Businessmen from the financial district pack the New Bavarian for those toothsome and substantial luncheons concocted by Chef Andy Miller . . . The Harrington Tavern is another popular rendezvous for businessmen, both out-of-towners and from nearby offices . . . And if you want to see the season's loveliest debbies and their beaux, you'll always find them by the dozen dancing to Pete Macias' rhythms in the Lounge Riviera.

It's Harvest Night" at River Bend tonight. You'll have a harvest of fun stepping to George Stein's hotcha music. The lucky ones will also harvest prizes of homemade pies and cakes.

ALTITUDINOUS MUSIC. Even if Toscanini comes to town, the Rainbow Room patrons will say, "You'll never find a better band than Milton Davis' outfit." Milt has been at Rainbow for half a dozen years, set a record for long sustained popularity . . . The new Don Carper musicos in Cafe Caprice are uniquely bright and gay, gain unusual effects through solovox and vibraharp.

RODD RAFFELL, young leader at Nightingale, is cooking up a novelty that'll s'prise you all. Ask him about it when you join the terrific Nightingale week-end crowds.

STRICTLY FOR FUN. The square dances at Kavakos Grill, big and tremendously popular Northeast spot. Plenty of regular dance tunes, too, but the square dances are a circus. Big Bill Kavakos is a great host, knows everybody for miles around . . . Week-end parties at Peter Fritz' Log Cabin a "must" item for folks who prize real good times . . . Do you know "Big-Hearted Nick" Alexopoulos who advertises "mustard free with 5-cent sandwiches" at his E Street Grill? Nicks' going serious today, will donate his entire gross receipts to Greek relief.

U. S. Jury Hears 4 Witnesses In Campaign Expense Inquiry

Quayle, Douglas Among Those Who Give Testimony, but Subpoena Servers Fail to Locate Martin and Flynn

Two Roosevelt and two Willkie supporters appeared yesterday before the special grand jury impaneled in the District Court to investigate suspected violations of the Hatch Act and the Corrupt Practices Act.

Four more Willkie backers are scheduled to testify today.

Conducting the investigation is Maurice Milligan, United States Attorney for western Missouri, who was appointed Special Assistant Attorney General following his success in attacking Kansas City machine politics. His aides are Assistant District Attorney William S. Tarver and Assistant Attorney General Roy D. Williams.

The witnesses yesterday were Oliver A. Quayle, jr., treasurer of the Democratic National Committee; Lewis W. Douglas, president of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Co. and former director of the budget, who was chairman of the National Committee of Democrats for Willkie; John W. Hanes, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, who was active in the Democrats for Willkie committee, and Eugene B. Casey, of the National Committee of Agriculture, an agency of the Democratic National Committee.

Desired among yesterday's witnesses, but not reached by subpenas, were the chairmen of the Republican and Democratic National Committees. Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, and Edward J. Flynn. Both were reported out of town.

Milligan yesterday issued a public warning that the law requires that every political expenditure of as much as $50 be reported to the clerk of the House.

Individuals Warned

Milligan said contributions to political party agencies should be reported by them, but that "there were so many people in the last campaign who personally paid for newspaper advertisements, radio broadcasts, pamphlets, etc., that I think it is only fair to warn them that the law requires an itemized statement from them on their expenditures, if the money was used to influence the election in two or more States."

The witnesses expected to be heard today are Oren Root, jr., president of the Associated Willkie Clubs of America; James Orr Young, of the Willkie Magazine Club; H. W. Updike, of "We the People," and John Burke, president of the New York chapter of the National Republican Builders.

Ramspeck Law Hits 2,000 Jobholders

Defense Workers Previously Dismissed From Other U. S. Agencies Barred From Civil Service Benefits Under Ruling

By Edward Ryan

At least 2,000 Government employes holding "defense jobs" will be barred from the civil service benefits of the Ramspeck law under a new ruling of the Civil Service Commission, it was learned yesterday.

The employes are those who had been dismissed from Federal bureaus within the past year and who were out of work when the defense program was boosting the demand for trained workers with Government experience.

They landed their present jobs via an emergency replacement service, established in the Civil Service Commission by two executive orders of the President. The orders permitted employes with good records, who had been involuntarily dropped from their jobs since July 1, 1939, to receive temporary appointments to civil service defense jobs without, however, getting civil service status for themselves.

Records of the replacement system showed yesterday that 2,000 persons had been appointed to defense positions under this arrangement, out of about 5,500 whose names have been entered on the replacement list.

Those who have landed jobs through the replacement service, and the others who may land them, would all be barred from obtaining formal civil service status through any operation of the Ramspeck law, according to the commission's ruling.

The ruling has been sent out to the heads of all the Federal agencies as part of a commission circular calling for detailed reports on what Federal positions can be placed in the classified civil service under the Ramspeck bill, and what positions the agencies want left outside the civil service.

These reports, the commission told the agency chiefs, would not include positions which are already in the classified civil service, "even if the incumbent does not have a civil service status."

Allan Haywood, 58-year-old organization director for the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday was appointed president of the United Federal Workers, C. I. O.-affiliated union of Government employes.

Haywood will take over the new job today, officials said, succeeding Jacob Baker, who has resigned to become a consultant for the Federal Works Agency. Besides heading the U. F. W., Haywood will continue to be in charge of national C. I. O. organizing work.

Before taking over the organization director's job a year ago, Haywood had been regional C. I. O. organization director in New York State and president of the State's industrial union council.

A. C. I. O. spokesman said that Haywood's assignment to head the U. F. W. was regarded as an "interim appointment" until a permanent chief could be found for the government employe union.

The spokesman added that "it would be fair to assume" that the appointment heralded an increased C. I. O. organization drive among Federal employes.

Seaton Directs Engineer Training

Roy A. Seaton, Kansas State College dean of engineering, has been appointed to direct training of engineers for the national defense program in the Office of Education, Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt announced yesterday.

The engineer training program was started by the Office of Education in cooperation with the National Defense Commission, with a $9,000,000 appropriation from Congress. The program calls for aiding engineering colleges to give short intensive courses that will equip engineers for technical and supervisory defense jobs in Government and industry.

Seaton served as an ordnance captain during the World War, designing artillery ammunition. He has been dean of the Kansas State engineering school since 1920.

The Gallup Poll

Labor Defection From Roosevelt Found In Both Union and Nonunion Groups

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Dec. 5.—With all Washington deep in a study of how to maintain labor peace in the defense industries, the attitude of the rank and file of labor unions toward the Roosevelt Administration assumes vital importance in the coming months.

A flood of bills has been introduced in Congress to enforce labor peace. Has labor grown less sympathetic with Roosevelt? Do the workers in industry who, after all, are the ones turning out the defense production, question the Administration's aid-to-England policy?

Post-election studies now being completed by the Institute indicate the amount of Democratic defection in recent years.

This analysis shows that among all classes of labor, both union and nonunion, Roosevelt failed to poll as high a percentage of votes in November, 1940, as he did in November, 1936. But the losses are by no means equal in all groups.

Among the C. I. O. members reached in the Institute's sample, for instance, the loss amounted to only a comparatively few points. Among A. F. of L. members it was somewhat larger, while among workers who belong to other unions, such as the railroad unions and other independent organizations, the loss was comparatively large.

The extent of defection is shown in the following table, representing the vote of workers included in the Institute's cross-section. Despite the shifts, the President still had a sizable percentage this year.

	Roosevelt Percentage Nov. 1940	Nov. 1936
C. I. O. members	79%	85%
A. F. of L. members	71	80
Other union members	57	74
Nonunion labor	64	73

In the week before the election many observers wondered what effect John L. Lewis' broadcast in favor of Wendell Willkie would have on the C. I. O. vote.

Today's report, which is on a national basis, gives no indication of the effect the speech may have had in certain key States, such as Michigan or Pennsylvania, but it does show that among the C. I. O. members interviewed the percentage for Roosevelt was actually a little higher this year than among the A. F. of L. members.

When the laboring class is divided into skilled, semiskilled and unskilled groups, the attitude toward Roosevelt shows an interesting pattern.

Skilled workers—the so-called "aristocrats" of the laboring class—are not as pro-Roosevelt as the semiskilled or the unskilled.

	Roosevelt Percentage Nov. 1940	Nov. 1936
Skilled workers	59%	67%
Semiskilled	67	74
Unskilled	69	81

The foregoing shows clearly the extent to which the Administration owes its reelection to labor. One question which remains is, to what extent does labor itself sympathize with the Roosevelt policy of aiding England? A large number of C. I. O. and A. F. of L. members are now engaged, directly or indirectly, in work on defense and rearmament orders.

The Institute's studies show that labor union members in its national cross-section takes the same attitude on helping England as the general public takes.

Fifty per cent of the general public wants to aid England even at the risk of going to war. Labor union members divide in the same proportion.

British Show Signs Of Concern Over Food

Evidence that the British people are growing concerned about the food situation this winter is revealed in a survey by the British Institute of Public Opinion published in the London News Chronicle.

With British shipping losses mounting as a result of the submarine warfare, nearly as many voters consider that solution of the food supply problem is as urgent as solution of the bombing problem.

The survey asked: "What do you think is the most important war problem the British government must solve this winter?"

Twenty-three per cent listed the threat of night bombing, and the need for safer shelters. Twenty per cent gave maintenance of food supplies and beating down the submarine attacks on shipping as the prime problem.

Next came productions of arms and aircraft, protection of the nation's health, and preparation for a coming offensive.

Tax Systems Need Revising, Anderson Says

Monopoly Committee Official Sees Peril In Present Setups

A monopoly committee official declared yesterday in a report on "taxation, recovery and defense" that "it becomes increasingly clear that the local, State and Federal tax systems require substantial revision."

"As debt mounts and expenditures increase," Dr. Dewey Anderson said in a 355 page study, "further delay in facing our tax problems becomes more hazardous to economic stability."

Dr. Anderson, the committee's executive secretary, said that the basic reforms studied for the Federal tax system "revolve around an effective income tax structure, supplemented by certain levies on business privileges, such as a tax on 'value added by manufacture.'

"Through a thoroughgoing revision of income, estates, profits and gifts taxes, with proper credit to States participating in the combined program, a sound tax system can be developed to aid in stabilizing either a preparedness or a peaceitme economy.

"Basic reforms in the State and local government tax structures are necessary, and can be achieved through the adoption of 'added value' taxes on State corporations and businesses, and property income taxes, plus certain registration and control taxes required to regulate business activities."

The Senate agreed yesterday to extend until April 3 the time for a report from the Temporary National Economic Committee.

Chairman O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, explained that the group would be unable to complete reports on its investigations and hearings in time for opening of the new Congress in January.

Relief Cuts Impair Morale, Canadian Welfare Aide Says

Charlotte Witton, Here to Attend Conference, Declares U. S. Is on Verge Of Committing Same Error

The gravest internal threats to the Canadian war effort are a Fifth Column movement and an impaired national morale brought about by sharp relief cuts, curtailment of social services and a falling standard of living, Charlotte Whitton, director of the Canadian Welfare Council, said yesterday.

Miss Whitton

The head of the quasi-official agency that coordinates Dominion, provincial and local welfare activities, warned that the United States is on the verge of committing the same error that now plagues Canada.

Interviewed at the Wardman Park Hotel, where she is attending the American Public Welfare Association's round table conference, Miss Whitton explained that the competition of war charities has cut private welfare funds and that governmental relief has been pared down in anticipation of increased employment.

Small, dark-haired, lucid, with active hands that emphasized each pointed argument, Miss Whitton drove home the meaning of war charity competition for relief funds by saying, "A baby deprived of milk dies sooner than a soldier without extra writing paper or a deck of cards."

With relief decreasing and prices rising, poverty-stricken groups become prey to subversive ideas she declared. Other groups, faced with falling living standards and inadequate social services, may lose interest in defending a democracy that does not tend to their well-being.

The conference which opened Wednesday conducted closed discusisons yesterday. At today's meeting, representatives of Federal welfare agencies will speak. William Hodson, Association president who is commissioner of welfare in New York City, will preside at the annual dinner tonight.

Murray Urges Walter-Logan Veto

President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. urged President Roosevelt yesterday to veto the Walter-Logan bill "because the slender resources of workers" could not support the "lengthy proceedings" Murray said the legislation entailed.

The bill is designed to make uniform the procedure of many quasijudicial agencies and to expedite court appeals from their decisions.

Murray said in a letter to the President the bill would result in "interminable hearings" and "obstructive and litigious tactics" harmful to workers.

$5,000 More Raised to Cut Chest Deficit

Executive Committee Confident That Goal Will Be Attained

Striving relentlessly to attain the $2,000,000 goal, Washington Community Chest workers yesterday secured an additional $5,000 to $6,000 in post-drive gifts and pledges to bring the fund to well over 96 per cent of its mark.

More than $16,000 has been added during the past two days, it was reported after a special meeting of the budget committee yesterday at drive headquarters, 1101 M Street Northwest. Eight other meetings are scheduled for the committee, which will seek ways and means of securing additional contributions to make up the deficit.

Members of the executive committee expressed confidence that the goal would be attained and already allocations have been made on that basis for distribution among the Chest member agencies.

Italy Blames Pilot's Error in Bombing Of U.S. Oil Lands

Secretary Hull disclosed yesterday that Italy, replying to a protest from the United States, had attributed the bombing of American oil properties in Saudi Arabia, to the mistake of an Italian pilot.

The properties were bombed in October in an attack by Italian fliers on British oil sources in the Persian Gulf, including Bahrein Island, a British protectorate off the main land of the neutral kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

Hull said the Italian government, in replying to an oral protest made here on October 23, had stated that the Italian pilot believed he was flying over territory under British control.

The Italian foreign office added, Hull said, that an appropriate expression of regret had been conveyed to the government of Saudi Arabia, which now considered the matter a closed incident.

Virgin Islands May Be Made Refugee Haven

Copyright by New York Times

Plans for the possible utilization of the Virgin Islands as a temporary haven of refuge for homeless and nerve-shattered victims of the war in Europe, who seek rest and recuperation in the Western Hemisphere, are under consideration by the Department of the Interior.

Only those of independent means, demonstrably able to support themselves without engaging in any remunerative employment in the islands, would be eligible, and even those would have to satisfy numerous health and other requirements.

18 Police to Hunt For Shoplifters

Due to begin their operations next Monday, the detail will be under the supervision of Detective Lieut. Clement P. Cox, and is comprised of Detectives W. A. Schotter, G. W. Cook and Pearl Pythian, and Privates F. A. Jordan, G. H. Prather, F. M. Owen, H. S. Montgomery, Frank Dodson, G. G. Maghan, G. R. Collins, J. D. Loughran, A. G. Keene, W. E. McCarten, F. L. Text of President's Message Calling St. Lawrence Project 'Vital Necessity'

The text of President Roosevelt's message, delivered by Assistant Secretary of State Berle to the Great Lakes Seaway and Power Conference at Detroit, follows:

As I said in a message to your last conference four years ago, this assemblage of leaders from many sections of the country for a most practical purpose is a welcome and significant event.

I said then that "an opportunity is presented to complete a seaway comparable in economic value to the Panama Canal," a seaway to which "the public development of St. Lawrence power is inseparably linked."

It was then an opportunity. It is now a vital necessity.

The United States needs the St. Lawrence seaway for defense. The United States needs this great land-locked sea as a secure haven in which it will always be able to build ships and more ships in order to protect our trade and our shores.

Power Also Needed

The United States needs, tremendously needs, the power project which will form a link in the seaway in the international rapids section of the St. Lawrence River to produce aluminum and more aluminum for the airplane program which will assure command of the air.

Selfish interests will tell you that I am cloaking this great project in national defense in order to gain an objective which has always been dear to me. But I tell you that it has always been dear to me because I recognized its vital importance to the people in peace and in war.

Let those who oppose the immediate undertaking of this project sit here at the center of the national defense effort in Washington and feel the pressure of the National Defense Commission calling for more and more power for our great aluminum plants and for other munitions industries requiring lots of cheap power. I am sure that they will know that the opposition which defeated the St. Lawrence treaty in 1934 was a mistaken opposition, based on failure to appraise the full needs of their country in the world situation which was even then developing.

What would we not give today, we who are responsible for the country's supreme defense effort, if the great St. Lawrence turbines were already in place, steadily revolving under the drive of St. Lawrence waters now running to waste, producing every hour of the day 1,000,000 horsepower to supply the expansion of our essential defense industries.

Vital Factor

Had this project been started in 1934, as we urged, it would now be complete and occupying a place with other great projects, such as the Tennessee Valley in the Southeast, Boulder Dam in the Southwest, and the Columbia River projects in the Northwest, among the great national defense assets of this continent.

No one who has studied our national defense problems and the international situation can possibly fail to see the need for this project in the defense of the continent. The Congress of the United States, in providing funds for a two-ocean navy on a program covering many years, has properly recognized the essential place of sea power in continental defense. The world's merchant tonnage is diminishing at the rate of tens of thousands of tons a month. The distances which may be effectively covered by bombing planes are rapidly increasing.

"Seacoast shipyards are already overtaxed with uncompleted construction. Shipyards on the Great Lakes, with access to the ocean, yet close to the sources of supply of labor, raw and finished materials, further removed from possible attack, may be a vital factor in successful defense of this continent. They will help to build the ships which will bring back commerce to the harbors of the Atlantic Coast ports.

"Opponents of the project have pointed out that it takes four years to build this seaway. They know, but fail to mention, that it takes at least that long to build a battleship. They also know that this project and that the power project will be entirely self-liquidating.

Demand for Power

We hope that the world situation may soon improve. But we are bound to be prepared for a long period of possible danger. Who can say, with assurance, that we shall not need for our defense or peaceful pursuits every possible shipbuilding resource, particularly those that exist and may be developed in the interior of our country? Only one who can say that we do not need the battleships that we are now building will dare to say that we do not need the essential Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway.

The need for the seaway is coupled with an increasing demand for the power. Already our defense industries in the Northeast have been required to import huge blocks of electric power from Canada. They are asking greater imports and Canada can agree to supply this power only temporarily. A new source of cheap power for national defense mut be developed immediately.

Along with its benefits to national defense, this project will contribute to the peacetime welfare of a multitude of laborers, small businessmen, home owners and farmers. I said in 1936 and I say now, "such a development as we propose to carry out in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Basin unquestionably will result in greater activity for all ports and transportation agencies. This has been the history of all new navigation projects and improvements directed to better commercial communication in this country and throughout the world. The fear that the seaway will result in injury on the lower Mississippi or to our Atlantic ports is groundless."

What this project means to the ordinary man and woman cannot be too highly stressed. It means a more secure Nation. It means a continent protected and served by the additional shipping built in inland shipyards. It means more industries, both defense and domestic, thriving on the cheapest power in history. It means more comforts in the homes of many cities and rural areas. It means more work for the ordinary citizen in shipyards, factories and other transportation services connecting the center of this continent with this great highway to and from our national and international markets.

I am preparing to press for the immediate construction of this project. Because of its vital defense character I have allocated $1,000,000 of the defense funds made available by the Congress to make the necessary engineering surveys and to prepare the preliminary plans and specifications so that no time may be lost in starting the undertaking.

I am conducting conversations with our neighbor Canada to work out the international aspects of the development of this great common asset. I shall propose to the Congress of the United States, which will assemble in January, that it takes the necessary steps toward completion of this St. Lawrence seaway and power projects, on which so much of our national safety and welfare depend.

Contract Bridge

Here are three questions asked recently of Morrie Elis, who the forecasters say will be voted the best player of 1940, and Lewis Fremont, Detroit master, who will be on hand at the Philadelphia championships to defend one of the titles. See what you would do with the hands, and then compare with the experts' opinions.

You are sitting opposite a comparative stranger in a rubber-bridge game. Your side is vulnerable and the opponents are not. The hand on your right opens the bidding with three hearts. What is your call with:

(1) ♠K4 ♡1083 ♢AK♢J853 ♣7 — (2) ♠9 ♡AJ ♢KQJ84 ♣KQ73

(3) ♠843 ♡QJ963 ♢A42 ♣Q2

Fremont and Elis agreed on all but one hand. With hand (1) they each would say four diamonds; with hand (2) Fremont would bid four hearts and Elis four diamonds; with hand (3) they would both pass.

Burton Holmes Lectures Tonight

Motion pictures of the shores and cities and islands of the eastern Mediterranean, where Greece is fighting for its life, will be shown before members of the National Geographic Society at Constitution Hall this evening in an illustrated address by Burton Holmes. Traveling from Venice across the Adriatic Sea, along the shores of Greece, to its cities, and to such headlined islands as Corfu, Crete and the Dodecanese, Holmes made his pictures in the last prewar summer, 1939.

The National Geographic Society had scheduled a lecture on the Western United States by Holmes, but made the change because of the increasing emphasis in the world news on the strategic eastern Mediterranean.

PUC May Win Phone Charge Reduction

Investigation Ordered to Set New Rate Base

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered an investigation of the properties of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in order to set a rate-base for a possible reduction in local service charges.

A public hearing will be held after the investigation is completed, the commission stated. Under a court order on December 31, 1931, the valuation of the properties of the company was set at $36,098,303. According to members of the commission staff, additions and betterments to the company's properties has brought this rate-base to $40,218,902.

Under the 1931 court decision, the return to the company on its investment, as found by the court was approximately 6 per cent and in a number of minor adjustments of telephone rate schedules adopted since that date. It is said the commission has taken notice of this 6 per cent return allowed by the courts.

Defense Attacks Indictments In Sniper Case

The indictments which accuse John E. Eklund, 25, of the "sniper" murders of three colored men here, were attacked as unlawful by Attorney James R. Kirkland in the District Court yesterday.

One of the grand jurors when the indictments were voted, Kirkland said, was Seth M. MacDonald, 414 Crittenden Street Northwest, accountant at the Federal Trade Commission. That a Government employe should be on a grand jury, Kirkland argued, is so grossly improper that the indictments were invalid.

Kirkland's point will be argued in a few days before Justice F. Dickinson Letts of the District Court before the case is set for trial.

G. W. Host to High Seniors Today

Trio Of Tragedies

Three fatal air-transport crashes since August 31 have cost the lives of 43 persons. That record is a shock to those who had prematurely supposed that the problem of safety in transportation by air had been solved. The recent 17-month period in which there were no fatal accidents on United States air-transport lines appears now to have been largely a matter of good fortune.

No single cause appears to have been responsible for the recent series of accidents, yet unfavorable weather was probably a contributing factor in each instance. The big plane which went down at Lovettsville, Va., with a loss of 25 lives, was flying in a storm. Reports indicated that the liner which crashed into a mountain south of Salt Lake City on November 4 was lost in a blinding snowstorm. Low visibility and ice on the wings of the plane which went down at Chicago on Wednesday night may have been contributing factors to the latest tragedy.

Possibly more important in the Chicago accident was the apparent failure of the motors. The crash came while the pilot was preparing to land at the municipal airport. Motors were reported to have sputtered before the plane struck a house and power lines close to the air field. Both of the most recent crashes may be traced to landing difficulties, but otherwise they seem to have little similarity.

Fortunately, each of these accidents is being studied with the greatest care. Investigators for the Civil Aeronautics Board were unable to fathom the mystery of the Lovettsville smash-up, but it is understood that the wreckage near Salt Lake City has yielded more tangible clews. The cause of the Chicago tragedy is not likely to remain a mystery. Only by thus exposing in detail every contributing cause of failure on the part of both planes and pilots can the hazards of air transportation be minimized. And this task of analysis appears to be a much bigger undertaking than it did a few months ago.

Blow To British Trade

The National Council of American Importers has called President Roosevelt's attention to the adverse effect upon British trade of a Treasury ruling requiring the new British purchase taxes to be included in the dutiable value of imports from Britain. Certain articles of clothing, for instance, are now subject to a British tax of 33 1/3 per cent on the wholesale value of goods for domestic consumption, while other articles are taxed at 16 2/3 per cent. The prices of these articles in Britain's home markets are, of course, correspondingly increased, but goods intended for export are specifically exempted from payment of the excises.

Nevertheless, the Treasury ruling is justified by the instructions laid down in our tariff laws, which state that the foreign value of goods shipped into this country must be taken as the basis for valuation if the foreign value is higher than the export value. The foreign value is then defined as the "market value or the price at which such or similar merchandise is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in the principal markets of the country from which exported." It seems that in this case, therefore, the basis for valuation has to be the value in the home market in Britain as increased by the new purchase taxes. This interpretation is supported by a Supreme Court decision of long standing which constitutes a precedent for the Treasury ruling.

The law was not intended to apply to the conditions now prevailing. The British purchase taxes, as the National Council of American Importers points out, are consumers' taxes intended primarily to cut down consumption of luxury and semiluxury goods, whereas the valuation provisions of our tariff laws are designed to prevent deliberate underpricing of exports for the purpose of jumping United States tariff barriers. It is obvious enough that nothing like that is involved in this matter.

The British are trying desperately to carry on their export trade as usual, since, by selling goods abroad, they increase the foreign balances available to pay for needed supplies and munitions bought abroad. So if we really wish to give them all aid "short of war" in their life-and-death struggle with Germany, we ought not take action which would deal such a gratuitous blow to British commerce. Yet that is undeniably the effect of the Treasury ruling. The only remedy for this situation apparently lies in modification of the valuation provisions of the Tariff Act. Congress should act promptly, therefore, to prevent serious damage being done to British trade with this country, as the National Council of American Importers suggests.

The Seaway And Defense

Long-term and short-term defense needs of the United States are strangely confused in President Roosevelt's message to the Great Lakes Seaway and Power Conference. The President chose this means of announcing that he is "preparing to press for the immediate construction" of the controversial St. Lawrence power and seaway project. His message, read by A. A. Berle, jr., Assistant Secretary of State, declared that this proposed undertaking is "now a vital necessity," and that view was closely linked to the requirements of national defense.

At one point in his message the President appeared to be thinking of possible defense needs of the United States some years hence. "Shipyards on the Great Lakes, with access to the ocean, yet close to the sources of supply of labor, raw and finished materials, further removed from possible attack," he said, "may be a vital factor in successful defense of this continent." His point is well taken. Undoubtedly shipyards would be more effectively sheltered on the Great Lakes than on either the Atlantic or Pacific seaboard.

But the President makes the obvious mistake of connecting the project with our present defense efforts. He writes of sitting "at the center of the national defense effort in Washington" and feeling "the pressure of the National Defense Commission calling for more and more power for our great aluminum plants and for other munitions industries requiring lots of cheap power." This argument helps to support his statement that the project should have been undertaken in 1934, in accord with his advice at that time, but it doesn't strengthen the case for diverting men, materials and money to an immense undertaking of this kind now. The primary consideration now is airplanes, guns, tanks, ships and ammunition. There is a real danger that an order for full steam ahead in constructing the St. Lawrence seaway would actually delay present defense efforts of an emergency character.

Congress will undoubtedly examine the President's proposal to be submitted next January in the light of urgent needs of the day. Mr. Roosevelt has already taken upon himself responsibility for ordering engineering surveys and preparation of plans for the proposed seaway. For this purpose he is using $1,000,000 of the funds made available to him for urgent defense preparations. The fact that he has taken advantage of defense funds to revive a project that Congress once rejected will give his new proposal an unfortunate introduction in the legislative halls.

Despite this fact, the project ought to be considered on its merits. The important thing at the moment is to remember that at least four years would be required to build the seaway and power plants and that all improvements of this character must be subordinated to the more immediate needs for defense weapons.

An Economy Move

Representative Woodrum has revived a plan proposed last year by Senator Harrison for the establishment of a joint Congressional committee to study budgetary estimates, with a view to holding expenditures in check. Nothing came of the Harrison plan, partly because it was offered after work on various appropriation bills had either been completed or had reached an advanced stage. Mr. Woodrum, however, has offered his proposal well in advance of the convening of the new Congress. There is ample time for members of important committees to confer and reach an agreement upon some general plan of action before the submission of appropriation bills at the next session.

If this is done either informally or by passage of a joint or concurrent resolution establishing a committee of the kind desired, the outlook for retrenchment in nondefense outlays will be greatly improved. Congressmen who are forced to consider the budgetary picture as a whole, instead of viewing it piecemeal, can hardly fail to be impressed with the importance of eliminating nonessential outlays.

Representative Woodrum does not hold out much hope of effecting substantial savings in nondefense outlays. "If we can hold the ordinary appropriations down to what they were last year," he says, "we will have accomplished something." He fears that without some preliminary agreement on a general spending policy Congress will, as in former years, embark upon new projects, despite the heavy burdens of the defense program. Under the circumstances, it is especially important to organize resistance to such irresponsible spending drives before it is too late.

Bombing As A Cure

The effect of bombing upon the British people is coming in for study by British psychiatrists. It is an academic study, since, according to the Survey Graphic, their anterooms are now without any waiting clients. Neuroses, apparently, are nonexistent.

This is the starting point of the study, and makes it the study of a phenomenon. Why isn't a person's nervous organism completely shattered by the impact of incessant bombardment? By all the rules the psychiatrists should be doing a roaring business. It is bad enough to endure an air raid; worse to exist under the threat of constant air raids—a threat which makes sleep impossible, and has brought a new use to little coastal villages as week-end sleeping places; worst of all to be condemned to nothing but "taking it," without hope of doing more by way of riposte than vicarious hitting back through the R. A. F. and the Royal Navy. How can they stand it?

Certainly in the last war the casualties in all belligerent countries included a not inconsiderable sprinkling of shell-shock cases and neurasthenics. Some of them lingered on as permanent charges on the community. The contrast between that war and this, consequently, is startling, and though all judgment must be reserved till the war is over, the phenomenon merits at least a few speculations. This is what is attempted by Ralph Ingersoll in one of his PM instalments about his experiences in war-battered Britain. His theory comes from a well-known psychiatrist who had had to close a war-time clinic for lack of patients. In the last war, the Briton says, it was the contrast between the mud and blood of Flanders fields and the pleasant places and warm firesides of "Blighty" that bred neurasthenics. In this war there is no such escape, either in furlough or in dreams, from reality—everybody in the island is, as it were, in the same boat, and must take it.

Maybe. But the reasoning somehow doesn't click and, moreover, sounds too reminiscent of the mumbo-jumbo with which some psychiatrists have hitherto been wont to conceal simple explanations. "Escape" is one of these esoteric words. To be sure, the Nazis have subjected the entire people impartially to the horrors of the war, and have blocked all escape from the harsh reality of it all. Yet the fact that they just have to "grin and take it" would imply, according to Mr. Ingersoll's psychiatrist, merely ah acceptance, a passivity. In our view this explanation leaves the phenomenon still up in the air.

There is, rather, something positive in this spectacle of people cured of old nervous troubles and immune to the new trials of shell-shock. May it not be that the German raider has filled the days and nights of the actual and potential "cases" among the British people with a purpose? It was the lack of any consciousness of purpose, at any rate, that made the tragedy which used to fill the consulting rooms of the psychiatrists. Lives had been emptied of all sense of unity and therefore of purpose by one or more of a variety of circumstances. The spread of agnosticism had given them no explanation of the universe, the home had gone as the norm of society, the falling off in religious practices had robbed the community (international, as well as local) of its nexus, the relative ease of earning a living had dulled the edge of the instinct of self-preservation, line production had deprived workers of the love of craftsmanship, joblessness was rampant, technological revolution had even made housewifery either superfluous or merely boring; and so on.

All that remained to many of these unfortunates was a desire to keep up with the Joneses or to lower a golf handicap. The others simply vegetated. And the end of such barren roads, when they proved neither all-absorbing nor satisfying to the spirit, was the clinic.

THE GLORY WILL NOT YET BE FLED

Historic London Landmark Hit By German Bomb
Westminster Abbey Is Reported Badly Damaged
—News Item.

Not even this will rouse from sleep
The lords and ladies where they lie
In crumbling stone, secure and deep,
Beneath the frenzy of the sky.

Not even this will wake the kings
Or call the queens from ancient dust.
Not even death on gleaming wings
Can summon those whom time has thrust

Beyond all terror and all grief,
Beyond the insolence of men.
Here poet, lady, knight and chief
Take their repose, nor rise again

To dreadful summons, to defend
Their final refuge, when the foe
Roars overhead and sees descend
The seeds of death that burst below

Upon the green and pleasant land,
Upon the edifice where years
Slide by like beads through time's dark hand.
The knights still lean upon their spears.

And though upon the outraged dead
The glorious stones come thundering down,
The glory will not yet be fled
From God's proud house in London Town.

Soviet Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Their eastern front protected by the Nazi-Soviet nonaggression pact of August, 1939, the Germans after subduing Poland have, in 1940, invaded and conquered Denmark, Norway, Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg and France. Victorious, the Reich feels she needs Russia no longer.

The tripartite treaty between Germany, Italy and Japan, and the establishment in Rumania of a formidable Nazi force are significant straws in the wind. Germany is interested in the Balkans, primarily in their bread basket and oil, secondarily, to possess a stepping stone from which to menace the British in the Mediterranean. But Russia, too, is interested in the Balkans for keeping in touch with their brethren in Bulgaria and Yugoslavia and for participation in the Danube trade. Furthermore, in need of a passageway from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean, Russia was steadfastly opposed to Germany's moves toward the Black Sea.

Oddly enough, the Nazis have meantime reached the Black Sea via Rumania.

Ostensibly the Germans and Russians are friends, as witness Molotoff's recent invitation to Berlin. However, in Rumania the Nazis have a springboard from which not only to threaten Britain, but eventually to grab Russia's oil fields in Baku and Batum. Failing in that, the least the Germans could do is to bomb those oil fields from the nearby Rumanian bases. This is apparently realized by the Soviets, who have massed troops, planes and artillery in Bessarabia.

Against that background, the recent friendly action of this Government vis-a-vis Russia, namely, the release of the embargoed machine tools badly needed by the Soviets for mechanizing their armed forces is a far-sighted move on the part of President Roosevelt, fine statesman that he is. It should enhance Russia's further adherence to the British-American stand against Japan in the Far East. Further steps in the same direction may encourage the Russians to throw in their lot with Great Britain.

Dies Committee

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an American citizen fervently devoted to American ideals and the American way of life I cannot help but feel that the methods employed by the Dies Committee and the premature propagandizing of its information are not merely un-American but extremely prejudicial to the effective and efficient administration of justice based upon and consonant with our traditional constitutional guaranty of civil liberties. The American people should not be cowed into silence.

Freedom of speech should not be suppressed upon the pretext of emergency. All Fifth Columnists who are really undermining our democratic institutions and our security can be dealt with by the proper department of our democratic government without childish ballyhoo and useless publicity at the expense of the national treasury.

The so-called white and red papers published by the Dies Committee with so much advance publicity are duds. The red paper is particularly disappointing. Just think of using the people's money to compile and print 1,000 pages of that stuff! Why, there is nothing in the bulky book that most of us have not known for some years.

The American people would be most grateful to the President if he would see to it that no more public fund is wasted by the Dies or any other Congressional committee.

Traffic Again

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with interest your editorial yesterday on traffic conditions here; also the follow-up this morning on your first local page on the same subject. I for one want to congratulate and commend you for giving we the people this much space in your valuable paper on this most vital subject.

It is going to take more than this to awaken that bunch in the District Building to the point of action in the public's behalf to remedy the deplorable traffic conditions so long existent here and so apparent to the outside world. This apathy and "do nothing" policy of our P. U. C. is a crime and disgrace. I speak from experience as one of the 150 citizens who petitioned the District Council and P. U. C. on June 8 last, for any kind of safety control to save life and limb on Columbia Road from California Street to Eighteenth Street.

Not one thing has been done to remedy this condition existent for the past twenty years. It will take more than an inkwell or newspaper article to awaken the Traffic Bureau to the fact that we have something here called streets and avenues requiring attention as well as the alleys.

Now I think it's going to take a firing squad headed by F. D. R. and Jennings Randolph to remedy the existing shameful and uncalled for condition. Outside of this, I can see nothing in the future to change the color of the picture unless it be the passage of the suffrage legislation now pending.

Pennsylvania Politics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I spent the recent Thanksgiving holiday in upstate New York. One morning much to my surprise I read in an Associated Press dispatch (and I know you get them too), that a certain politician was going to fire all public officials not of his own party and replace them, not with Civil Service employes, not with employes who could pass an examination competitive or noncompetitive, but he was going to replace them with members of his own party.

Guess who it was? No, it wasn't Hague and it wasn't Kelly either. I thought to myself—Oh! boy, wait until I get back to Washington so I can watch the fireworks as the editorial columns and our vigilant columnists tear into this juicy morsel. But, lo and behold, nothing was said and though I have read the papers thoroughly I haven't seen it even in the news columns.

Well, here it is—and if it isn't news when the Governor of the second most populous State in the Union says he is going to fire every State employe who can't get the indorsement of his local party ward heeler, especially when that Governor was a candidate for the Presidential nomination, then I am feeble-minded and you can send the wagon around to my address, but if it is news and you haven't anything to say editorially about it, suppose you print it in the Letters To The Editor anyway.

Montgomery Co. Taxes

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently, by reason of the passage of the law by the Legislature of the State of Maryland, various counties and municipalities were authorized to place the levy of real property taxes upon the basis of a calendar year. Thereupon the commissioners of Montgomery County readjusted the machinery of assessment to conform with that law. As a result the collector of taxes has fallen into a state of utter confusion.

Whereas, from time out of mind taxpayers assumed, as apparently did the county officials, that annual taxes were paid to June 30 of each fiscal year, they now find to their dismay that their taxes may be held to be paid for a period ending six months prior to such date. That this fear is not a fancied one has already been cogently demonstrated.

A citizen, a taxpayer of Montgomery County, having sold property on which he assumed taxes had been paid until July 1, 1941, suddenly discovers through an opinion of a title company that his taxes are paid, not to July 1, 1941, but to December 31, 1940. In the readjustment due to such an opinion, his tax obligation was satisfied twice, once to the county, and once to the buyer.

Now to people cynical of orderly government, such an injustice may be laughed off. It may be said, because of an unwillingness to face a difficult situation, that only a few people are hurt; only those in fact who sell their property. But to people who have faith in order and justice such callousness is wholly intolerable.

Unable to receive satisfaction, or an intelligent explanation from the county officials, this citizen, this taxpayer, appealed to the Taxpayers Association of Montgomery County. As it always does, and as it always will, that association interested itself in this question, and it has asked for the safety and protection and peace of mind of the county taxpayers that the officialdom of Montgomery County fearlessly and fairly face the difficulty and take immediate steps to effect a remedy.

Let it be known that the association has not attacked any officials, any party, any group. It chooses to carry on this fight on the basis of principles and not personalities. The commissioners find themselves in an awkward situation, one not of their own making or creation, but that does not affect the present dilemma.

The people are entitled to know and be assured of the period covered by their annual tax payments, and the taxpayers will do all in their power to assist the commissioners in getting that problem settled.

CURTIS J. IRELAND,
President Taxpayers Association of Montgomery County.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I received a note from a friend in London the other day which may be of interest to Americans. It reads as follows:

"I heard the following true story of a conversation yesterday between two dockers on the Liverpool docks on the bombing in Liverpool:

"One docker with wife and about six children said to the other: 'I'm fed up with this; can't work in the day or sleep at neet—I'm going to join the army for a bit of peace.' The other docker replied: 'That's what I told the missus I were going to do and dost know what she said t'me, she said, 'Tha't nowt but a bloody coward tha'art'."

The Shanghai Defense Force

THE EXODUS of Americans, British, and other Occidentals from Shanghai probably means the break-up—temporary, let's hope—of a unique military organization, little known in Europe and the States, but renowned all over the Far East, possessing traditions and "battle honors" of its own. Shanghai is one of the last few remaining Treaty Ports opened to European and American trade a century ago, usually as the result of a persuasive visit by units of an Occidental navy. They are governed usually by a Board of Consuls, or some similar arrangement. Almost always the various interested countries maintained small garrisons of troops or marines; but Shanghai, Queen City of the Orient, developed her very own Volunteer Defense Force.

"The Force," as it was always called by Shanghailanders, was really a small, self-contained mixed brigade, of all arms. It was organized as far back as 1861, by Occidental merchants and their clerks, for the protection of their families—and their business interests. It has waxed and waned during the last 80 years, sometimes shrinking to a handful of enthusiasts during periods of calm, and increasing to more than 1,000 during each of the recurrent crises that have dotted the turbulent history of Shanghai. It was unique in that it was the only purely voluntary international armed force in the world, and perhaps a precursor of the kind of international force that may be all that is necessary in the distant future when humans have learned to inhabit this planet in amity.

Originally only a couple of infantry companies and two or three hand-drawn field pieces, "The Force," when I knew it, between about 1912 and 1921, had become a smartly uniformed, well drilled, efficient organization, proud of its record, and quite swanky. During most of those years it consisted of field-and-staff, field music and really excellent band, signals and engineers, an eight-company infantry regiment, field artillery battery, maxim battery, squadron of light horse, medical and regimental transport. All the auxiliaries and ancillaries were open to any Occidental, regardless of race, and the resultant babel of languages on drill days would make your hair curl. But the infantry regiment was organized on a nationalistic basis, with two companies furnished by local British residents, one each by Americans, French, Germans, Portuguese, Japanese, and, surprisingly enough, Chinese. These latter were merchants and their staffs who preferred to live in the well ordered International Settlement, rather than in the enormous native city which had grown up around it. I don't know much about the systems of drill used by the artillery, light horse, etc., thoroughly mixed in composition as they were, but I suspect the drill was British. Among the infantry companies each adhered to its own national drill regulations and manual of arms. A full ceremonial march-past of the entire Force, of a fine Saturday afternoon on the race course, or elsewhere, with commands shouted in a half a dozen languages, the British at the "slope," the Yanks at the "right shoulder" and the French at the "guardez-vous," was a study in infantry drill-regs.

With an eye to the main chance, the British kindly loaned most of the equipment, including the Lee-Metfords, a fine rifle with a good kick, and they also "loaned" the commanding officer, usually a Lieutenant Colonel seconded from Hongkong or Singapore, who was the only regular. The uniform was gray with red facings, tight-fitting, and very "prewar." In the case of the light horse squadron, the captain, a Dane, had prescribed the little Danish cap with the wee tassel swinging in front. The band, which contained a good many Filipinos, was nevertheless under British leadership, and the field music performed stick-drill as if at Aldershot; bugle calls were British, but the strong-minded Dane imposed Danish trumpet calls for his light horse.

Colors and color-guards were conspicuous by their absence, for obvious reasons, although somebody suggested that there should be a totem pole, or something, to which the troops could rally, and to which ceremonial honors could be paid. But nothing was ever done about it, beyond discussion at the long-bar of the Shanghai Club. When China nominally adhered to the Allied cause about midwar, the German company was disbanded, most of its stiffly-drilled, goose-stepping members, with their families, loaded on a transport, and sent home; I hope they reached there! To keep the eight-company regiment intact, a newer company was organized from among the customs administration, international in character; I remember a globular Hollander who carried gin in his water-bottle.

The force distinguished itself during the Boxer campaign, 1900-01, and again in 1927, and several other times in its long career. During these last troubled years I have seen pictures of armored cars and other new-fangled mechanisms manned by volunteers, patrolling the Bund and Nanking Road, and I suppose the force must have been mobilized most of the time. But the New Order in East Asia seems to be on the way, and I fear there will not be many more occasions for a ceremonial march-past on Saturday afternoons out Bubbling Well way—and it's too bad!

On The Record

The Slump At Washington

AN APATHY has settled down over the public and over Washington since the elections that is disturbing. That the election came this year was unfortunate. It consumed two months of active attention to the exclusion of other things. One hoped that the moment it was over we would proceed more vigorously in the prime question before the Nation today: defense.

But a month has passed, and there are no indications of increased snap and vigor anywhere in Washington. On the contrary, there is the impression that we are tragically behind hand on production of everything, and that things are distinctly "sticky" all along the line.

THE DEFENSE COMMISSION is still without a responsible head—or rather the responsible head is the President, and the President, reports have it, is tired, and in a "down" mood. That the President needs and deserves a rest cannot be doubted, but all of Washington and the whole Nation cannot afford it. Some advisers of the President have sold him on the idea that an independent defense board would constitute a super-government, and certainly the Administration cannot delegate complete authority. Yet someone must have final responsibility for such things as production and priorities, and apparently no responsibility is fixed anywhere, and there is a great deal of passing the buck.

If there is anyone in Washington who keeps the record—a "flow sheet" between all departments, War, Navy, and industrial defense production—how many planes, how many guns, how many pilots, torpedoes, etc.—I have not been able to find that person. There is a lack of integration, a lack of responsibility, a lack of movement.

THERE ARE ALSO differences of opinion between producers, and which one prevails with the Administration is not clear. One set of industrialists will tell an outsider—a journalist like myself, seeking information—that "you cannot telescope time"—and that everything is being produced as speedily as possible. But another set of industrialists, also engaged in, let us say, airplane production, deny this vigorously, point to the fact that they are working only two shifts a day and a five-day week, and that, under authority, the production could be very speedily and notably increased.

Personal interests and personal viewpoints certainly influence such opinions. Men engaged exclusively in airplane production or production of other war materials have a different view from those who are also producing consumers' goods and are balanced between the desire to do all they can as patriots to help the Government, and at the same time to keep "normal" business going as usual.

ONE HAS THE impression that the Government has done pretty well in the placing of orders, but that the national effort, as a whole, is meager. And certainly there is nowhere in the country a sense of national emergency. Neither Washington nor the country is on its toes.

NOW, THIS IS unfortunate and more than unfortunate, because there is a national emergency of quite extraordinary dimensions. The public realizes it. They realize it as they read the newspapers. Despite the censorship, dispatches get through from Britain that are disquieting. Energies unused—and there is a huge amount of unemployed energy in this country—become disgruntled and apathetic. The public morale is slipping, and Washington must take note of that fact.

In the general apathy a defeatist spirit grows—defeatist regarding the Government, defeatist regarding the outcome of the war and defeatist regarding democracy itself. The opponents of the Government make use of that apathy—especially the opponents of the Government's foreign policy. There is a smell of appeasement all over the place.

And when the President's own ambassador to London, Mr. Kennedy, contributes to the general defeatism, and announces that he is "helping the President," the public becomes weary, confused and even more apathetic. There is no reprimand from Washington, and, since the elections, no leadership from Washington.

THE GOVERNMENT should know, and it should hear it especially from those who supported it, believing in the President's great powers of leadership in crisis, that there is immense awareness, immense concern and immense untapped energy in the country crying to be used, willing to make great sacrifices, anxious to be getting on with the business of preserving, building, defending America and aiding swiftly, efficiently and by a huge and truly national effort the last bulwarks of freedom outside our shores.

But unemployed energies, unemployed talents, unemployed resources rust. The energies slacken, the spirit sours. And there are plenty of people ready to take advantage of any slackening anywhere.

IF THE ADMINISTRATION wants to see this country on its toes it should not ask it for something easy; it should ask for something hard. And if Washington is taking things easy it should not expect the Nation to do otherwise.

Rightly or wrongly, that is the impression the country has.

Mr. LaGuardia As Secretary Of War

"Fiorello LaGuardia may be named Secretary of War."—News item.

LaGuardia (bursting into his office)—Good morning. Take an ultimatum!

His Secretary—To whom?

LaGuardia—Don't be so particular!

Secretary—If you're going to send an ultimatum you've got to know where it is to be sent, haven't you?

LaGuardia—Not at all. I won't even know until I finish dictating it. There must be plenty of nations that have become eligible today. Where's the list of insults since yesterday?

Secretary—There are no new insults today.

LaGuardia—You mean to say no nation has done anything to arouse my anger in the last 12 hours?.

Secretary—Not one!

LaGuardia (fiercely) — They can't do that to me!- The punks!

(The phone rings.)

Secretary (to LaGuardia)—It's the President on the wire.

LaGuardia—Again! Ask him what he wants.

Secretary—He says he has had a complaint that three ultimatums from you this week came back marked "Wrong address."

LaGuardia—Tell him anybody can make a mistake in times like these.

Secretary—He hung up.

LaGuardia—Send him an ultimatum. I'm not satisfied with the way he's running the Presidency. By the way, take a note to Hull. Tell him I can't confer with him on that crisis. I've got to go to a fire.

Secretary—This is a very bad crisis.

LaGuardia—I know, but this is a very good fire.

(The phone rings.)

Secretary—It's from the United States-Canadian Defense Board.

LaGuardia—I knew it would never be able to get along without me. Tell 'em I'm busy. Have we heard from Hitler today?

Secretary—Not yet.

LaGuardia—Well, send him an ultimatum, anyhow. How about Mussolini? What has he done to offend me today?

Secretary—Nothing since yesterday forenoon. You sent him an ultimatum.

LaGuardia—Send him a follow-up! And take a note to Joe Stalin, and tell him to keep his nose out of this situation.

Secretary—What situation? There isn't any special situation today.

LaGuardia—Well, make one! And cable the Emperor of Japan and demand an immediate apology.

Secretary—For what?

LaGuardia—I'm not particular. (The office doorman enters.)

Doorman—There's a man here to see you.

LaGuardia—I can't see anybody. I'm too busy.

Doorman—He says it is important.

LaGuardia—I can't spare a minute.

Doorman—He says he is demonstrating a new type of steam shovel and wants you to try it.

LaGuardia—(rushing out gleefully)—Why didn't you say so!

Greeks' Mission

WITH THE DEVELOPMENT of the Greek advance on Rome in the altruistic war for the liberation of the Italian people a statement of the aims of the London-Athens Axis in this field of the great conflict is urgently needed. Up to this time the Greeks have been so busy rescuing Italian soldiers from Mussolini's military slavery that they seem to have given no thought to the important matter of heartening the Italians at home. This program should be obvious, but, nevertheless, the Greeks should take occasion to let the Italians know positively what they intend to do for them. It is a plan which should appeal strongly to the whole Italian nation, for it was borrowed bodily from their own national program, with which every school child in Italy is familiar.

First, of course, the humane Greeks intend to deliver the Italians from the clutches of Nazi Germany—a humiliating condition of national life which has aroused the sympathy of all who respect the Italian character. This means, naturally, that Mussolini and Ciano must go, because they are false leaders who have betrayed the Italian nation to the Fuehrer in return for a few medals and some hours of splendor and personal flattery in Munich and Berlin.

THERE ARE VALID precedents for this war aim in the conduct of the Italian nation under the Duce. He made war on the Negus to liberate the Abyssinians from their false leaders, and he went into Albania overnight in a spontaneous burst of kindness to rescue the people from King Zog, who, of course, had sold them out to the British. In fact, the present war with Greece began as a mission to liberate the Greeks from British domination, and thus it was Mussolini himself who gave the Greeks the idea of rescuing the Italians.

It seems to be agreed that the Italian people are deeply humiliated as a result of the Duce's leadership. They are not a brutal people, and their sense of honor and justice is such that when placed in a false position in war by Mussolini they have been unable to do themselves credit. Not only have they been routed in the field by the ill-armed, unsoldiered rabble in Spain and now, again, by their military inferiors in Albania, but, most of all, some of their best soldiers were compelled to learn and execute the goose-step in Rome before the contemptuous gaze of Adolf Hitler, who observed, incidentally, in common with thousands of other Germans, that they goose-stepped very badly.

The Greeks simply could not permit this degradation to go on. Their chivalry has forced them to take the field on a mission of deliverance, and when they enter Rome to the hysterical applause of rejoicing multitudes they will conduct a symbolic ceremony of great significance on the balcony of Mussolini's palace.

IN THIS SIMPLE but solemn exercise, the Greeks, with a subtle reference to the greater antiquity of their own civilization, will hand to the Duce and Count Ciano each a goblet and bid them drink, not hemlock but castor oil. Thereafter the Duce and Ciano will be turned free to roam at will in Italy, but compelled always to wear their gaudiest regalia, which will make them conspicuous and absurd among their own people, who will promptly put off their monkey suits and resume the attire of civilized human beings.

But, of course, there must be territorial guarantees and concessions. After all, the Italian nation has thoroughly established the propriety of such conditions by recognizing loot as a legitimate reward of war. It was only because the Duce felt that Italy had been cheated of her fair share of the loot of 1918 that he fomented and, finally, joined this war, so, plainly, Greece will be entitled to some acreage in Italy as her pay for the present rescue operation.

IT SEEMS PROBABLE that the Greeks will occupy Italy with an army for some years in order to confer on the people the benefits of their fine old civilization and culture and, by degrees, cure them of the evil teachings of the Duce. This would parallel the Italian program of spreading fascism by military conquest and occupation and exterminating ideas of democracy. It would take some time, for the Italians are pretty far gone after all these years under Mussolini and can't be trusted to govern themselves and respect the rights of others overnight.

Still there is good raw material in the Italian nation, and maybe a hundred years from now the Greeks will think it safe to withdraw their military and cultural protectorate and let them try again. They don't want to harm the Italians. They only want to rescue them and civilize them again.

Photographic Art

"U. S. CAMERA, 1941" (Duell, Sloan & Pearce, $4.85) appears in two handsome volumes, bigger and fancier than ever. Whether it is really better is another matter, but, as always, it is entertaining and alive, a pictorial chronicle of what is probably the most significant and rapidly advancing art form of our time.

Edward Steichen is again "judge" of the pictures, and T. J. Maloney, general editor. In Volume I appear a group of feature series: a "Midland Chronicle," by Wes McManigal, of Horton, Kans., a former farmer, former newspaperman, who has made a successful business of farm photography; a group of color photographs which are as photographically brilliant, as off-color and as essentially vulgar as modern magazine covers usually contrive to be; a biographical series of photographs by W. H. Jackson, the 97-year-old pioneer photographer of the West, whose book, "Time Exposure," was reviewed here last July; a series of poor people by Dorothea Lange, introduced by Pare Lorentz; circus and other metropolitan photographs by Lusha Nelson, who was born in Riga in 1900 and died in New York in 1935 or 1938—the proof-reading of the text of these books is as fantastically bad as any I have met in all my experience; a group of portraits of eight "Typical Americans," beginning with Will Rogers and ending with Jim Farley; a sidewalks-of-New York series by Morris Engel, a 22-year-old Brooklyn lad who is photography-mad; a series of examples of war photography, deliberately horrible, by Carl Mydans, and a revealing illustrated essay on flash photography by Eliot Elisofon. Volume II, is, as usual, a cross-section of American photography in the current year.

The photographers are, themselves, a better cross-section of America than are the photographs. I suppose it is inevitable that specialists in photography should be interested in the tricks of montage, the artfully lighted nudes, angle shots and phony composition of which, to my taste, there are far too many examples in this second volume. I hate the stuff. It is neither art nor life nor honest photography. It is just stunt performance, out of place in such a really superb collection as most of "U. S. Camera" is.

BUT THE PHOTOGRAPHERS: They are America: America, today, is a Nation of photographers. Wes McManigal's story is an almost lyrically "typical" American biography. He was born in Horton, Kans. (population, 4,000, in 1892, and grew up in his father's country print shop, as, successively, devil, printer, linotype operator, advertising manager and managing editor. He was wounded in the Argonne in 1918, returned to the Horton paper, then homesteaded in Wyoming, and "boomed" from Illinois to Texas as an itinerant linotype operator. He was in bad health when he gave up the newspaper business in 1934, and thought he would rest by making photographs for the rotogravures—he had been an amateur photographer since childhood. He photographed his neighbors. A magazine called Successful Farming was long his best customer; he won Liberty Magazine contests for "photographs that tell a story" two years running; now he is a successful professional farm photographer, chiefly for advertising accounts.

You know why he is successful when you look at his pictures and read his Kansas comments on them. A corn-husking contest isn't quaint folkstuff to him; it's his neighbors. He knows combines, silos, alfalfa, Hereford bulls and town election boards by their first names. And he is a good judge of girls who enter the Nemaha County beauty contests, where the cow, the girl and ability as a milker count a third of the scoring points each.

W. H. Jackson, who learned photography in Troy, N. Y., and Rutland, Vt., daguerrotype studios before the Civil War, volunteered in the Union Army in 1862, bullwhacked from St. Joe, Mo., to Wyoming, rode herd from California into Colorado, photographed the Yellowstone before it became the first national park, in the old wet-plate days, operated out of Omaha for decades and is still at work in New York City—that's another great American saga, though hardly typical.

DOROTHEA LANG is still another of the great American photographers; a New Jersey girl, Barnard-educated, now married to a California professor. You know her photographs, whether you know her name or not. Pare Lorentz calls her "the best still photographer I know in the factual field," some of her bitter madonnas—perhaps that here illustrated with the caption, "I haven't nothin' to go back to"—have become nationally familiar. She has a genius at captions, too, which has its background, evidently, in a genius for friendship, which is an essential part of the photographer's art, neglected in the manuals.

Lusha Nelson, Riga-born, was a staff photographer for Conde Nast, but he hated fashion pictures. He had a mania for the circus. The best of his work here illustrated is a Rembrandtesque figure, "From a Wheelchair," taken in the Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx. His portfolio here also includes Mayor LaGuardia, Joe Louis and Dorothy Thompson.

Many of the best pictures in the second volume of "U. S. Camera, 1941" are, as usual by working newspaper photographers. A marvelous strike mass meeting, "Right of Assembly," is by Arthur Siegel, made for a Detroit paper. (Please, Mr. Maloney, give us more details next time; be a reporter as well as a photographer.) An extraordinary series of a plant catching a fly is by Leon Keinigsberg, of the Chicago Tribune.

One of the best decorative designs of the book, "Applesauce," is by Larry Keighley, of the Philadelphia Inquirer. Leo Lieb's grinning cat, "Susie," was probably the most successful circulation feature ever used by the New York Mirror. Not that all newspaper photography is good. The absurd stunt-angle picture of Johnny Hudson, of the Dodgers, is as absurd a sample of what the thirst for oddity can produce as I have ever seen. Inevitably, many of the best photographs in this album were taken by photographers for Life.

New Anacostia Bridge May Be Open Christmas

The Capital's newest span across the Anacostia River, along the line of Pennsylvania Avenue, built at a cost of $2,000,000, will be opened to the public about Christmas, it was announced yesterday by Director of Highways Whitehurst.

In two weeks traffic will be shifted from the downstream half, now in service, to the newly completed upstream half. This will be done in order to permit completion of surfacing along the center roadway of the bridge. The downstream half has a guard railing along the side meeting the new portion of the bridge. The rail will have to be removed and the roadway surfaced.

Hitler's Omelet

WHETHER BRITAIN can win the war is an increasingly moot question. The bulk of opinion in Washington places Britain's chances at about 60-40 against while others contend that the Empire's resources, coupled with American aid, will starve the Axis out, and that the Empire cannot be defeated.

Long-sighted thinkers are asking, what would happen to the shape of Europe and the world if Britain does win?

What would happen if Germany wins has been made apparent. Hitler has a definite plan for a European economic bloc under German domination which was long ago outlined in "Mein Kampf" and has been steadily taking shape as the war, with its progressive conquests, goes on.

THE SO CALLED democracies have no definite plan and refuse to be smoked out. Members of the British government, pressed for a statement on how they hope to shape the world if Britain wins, invariably reply that the present problem is to win the war, and that the realignment of Europe will have to be considered after victory has been achieved.

Hitler's problem is being worked out in the midst of the war. He has shifted populations, subjugated nations and worked out an ethnic and geographic set-up which will be hard to tear down. Under the British blockade, he has made much of Europe dependent for trade on German economy.

His big task is to keep the subjugated peoples in line when and if he wins. The chance of revolt among once free nations made subservient feeders of Germany is great. Yet if Hitler wins, he is in a fair way to wield an economic bludgeon which might keep the "new order" working for years.

The weapon would be the prospect that the small European nations must play Germany's game or starve, if they have not starved before the war ends.

The total population of the countries which Hitler has subjugated is around 75,000,000, which is a lot to control. Yet the Bavarian mystic seems convinced that he can do it.

IF ON THE OTHER hand Britain wins, the problem of restoring Europe to anything like the geographic lines of the Versailles Treaty is next to impossible.

Whole populations have been rooted up and moved elsewhere. Poland, for instance, has been almost completely dismembered. Its people have been moved east, west, north and south, many of them into Germany for forced labor.

From 2,000,000 to 3,000,000 workers and prisoners of war are estimated to have been moved into Germany to produce for the Reich. A large part of them are from Poland. Others come from occupied France, Belgium, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Denmark.

When the time comes to unscramble the omelet which Hitler has made of Europe, if his grandiose scheme is kicked over, it will be a task for the victors which will make the decisions of Versailles seem almost simple and logical.

Time Factor In Aid To Britain

THE TIME FACTOR in getting aid to Great Britain has been reemphasized in conferences in the Administration and with industrial leaders during the last week. Five hundred bombing planes delivered before February 1 may be more valuable than 2,000 delivered in the last two months of 1941.

The war remains in a critical stage, its eventual outcome extremely doubtful. The British are taking terrible punishment from the air. An adequate defense against night bombing has not been developed; and at this time of year the nights are 16 or 17 hours long in England. The new German system of concentrating on one city one night and another the next is causing more destruction than the earlier methods of bombing attack. British industrial production has been falling off, and the damage to port facilities is becoming serious.

At sea the long hours of darkness favor submarine operations. While merchant ship losses on the North Atlantic sea lanes have not yet reached the heights of the spring of 1917, when Great Britain almost lost World War I to the U-boats, they are heavy.

ALLOWING ALWAYS for surprises, the prevailing view in informed quarters here is that the next big German action will not be launched until spring. The three more obvious alternatives are:

(a) A drive through the Balkans into Asia-Minor and Iraq—the drive which seemed about to begin a few weeks ago but now almost certainly has been laid up for the winter.

(b) A drive through the southern part of the Soviet Union.

(c) An invasion of Great Britain.

Both (a) and (b) would have as their main purpose access to petroleum, although (a) might lead also to Suez. Certainly the second, and conceivably the first, would mean war with the Soviet Union.

The third alternative, invasion, remains the one which, if successful, would yield the greatest result. Many observers here believe that when everything is taken into account, Hitler still looks upon invasion of Britain as the best bet—after the British have been worn down by two or three months more of aerial bombardment and counter-blockade.

WHATEVER THEIR strategy, the Germans have the strength left to strike some mighty blows, and many observers here think that what may prove to be the decisive action of the war will be launched in about three months.

On the other hand, the magnificent military feat of the Greeks may be the potential turning point in the war. It is no more than potentially so. The Italians not only are still in the war, but still have large numbers of troops in Albania and perhaps 500 first-line bombing planes which may be used to clear the way for a counter-offensive. If the British had 200 more bombing planes in Greece right now, the Italian defeat might be turned into a complete rout.

Whether used in the Mediterranean or to blast the "invasion" ports on the Channel and North Sea, every plane that the British can get during the winter months may be the one that determines which way the tide of the war will flow.

Despite what the President said at Hyde Park recently, it is believed in well-informed quarters that the manufacture of planes and other implements of war for Great Britain can be expedited, if the managers and workers in the plants which are making them realize the critical importance of the time factor. Secretary Hull has been driving this point home in his recent conversations.

IN EVALUATING our ability to aid Britain, it is necessary to dismiss—or at least to put in perspective—published reports, one of them recently widely circulated through a syndicated article, that the British regard our military airplanes as inferior and of limited usefulness. These reports do not refer to our up-to-date types, which the British have now begun to receive. They refer to planes of earlier vintage, which until now are the only American planes which have seen action. One of these types, the Lockheed-Hudson, originally designed for commercial use, has won high praise from British pilots in the coastal command. It is a combination light bomber, fighter, patrol plane which has proved to be easily maneuvered and extremely durable.

The Brewster fighter was originally released by the Navy to Finland and taken over by the British with the full understanding that it was not up to the minute. The other American types of combat planes, as distinct from training planes, which the British have seen up to now have been of 1938 and early 1939 vintage. They are now beginning to receive our 1940 models, which our military aviation experts believe to be equal or superior in their categories to the best British and German models. Whether this belief is justified cannot be proved until they have been tested in combat. In their own interest, as well as ours, the British will furnish full details as to the performance of these new types.

Whatever the final performance ratings may be, the British are eager to get, as soon as possible, every plane we will let them have.

In the last several weeks, attention in Washington has been concentrated more on the somewhat longer range problems of industrial expansion to handle our rearmament program. Now, under the direction of Hull, the focus is being swung back to the urgent need for getting more planes and other weapons into the hands of the British during the next 90 days.

Inquest Told Crashed Plane Was Icing

Two More Passengers Die of Injuries In Chicago Crackup

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 5.—An eyewitness told a coroner's jury today that "icing conditions" prevailed at the time of a United Air Lines plane crash that resulted in eight deaths.

While the witness, Policeman Thomas F. O'Hara, was relating his account of last night's tragedy, eight survivors were being treated in hospitals. The stewardess, Florence M. Little, of Chicago, was reported to be in a "very critical" state.

O'Hara, testifying at the inquest before a jury composed of six aviation experts, said that he was in the radio control tower of the Chicago Municipal Airport, approximately two blocks from the vacant lot where the Mainliner fell at 5:48 p. m.

He reported that he saw the plane approaching a runway for a landing at what he judged was a normal altitude of about 150 feet.

"It seemed to make a left turn with the nose down and go into the ground," he added. "There was a flash as the ship fell."

Struck Power Lines

He figured that the "flash" occurred when the liner struck electric power lines.

O'Hara testified that earlier the pilot had asked for landing instructions and that the control tower operator had advised a west landing due to "icing conditions."

The policeman added that he did not know whether the "icing conditions" were on the plane or the ground, but that a light snow was falling.

After the inquest was continued to January 8, pending recovery of survivors, O'Hara, the only witness, told reporters that the last broadcast he heard from the pilot was for permission to circle the airport once more to "get the ice off his windshield." He did not elaborate.

U. S. Begins Inquiry

Officials of the U. A. L. and the Federal Government also began investigations. Company spokesmen denied a report that the plane was carrying a heavy amount of ice. They stated:

"Evidence indicated that immediately after the accident there was only a minor amount of ice on the airplane. During the period immediately preceding and following the accident other airliners were arriving and departing from the Chicago airport without interruption because of icing."

Two men—Keller F. Melton, of Chicago, and Charles W. Manville, of Cleveland—died this morning. Killed last night were Capt. Philip C. Scott, Chicago, the pilot; George S. Young, Oak Park, Ill., copilot; Stuart W. Moore, Cleveland; Wilbert J. Austin, Cleveland; Miss Jane Selby, Akron, Ohio, and Lee F. Haneline, Downers Grove, Ill.

Ruhland Begins Drive to Curb Pneumonia Cases

Health Officer George C. Ruhland Wednesday began a city-wide pneumonia control program as statistics from the Bureau of Vital Statistics revealed an increase in the number of respiratory ailments.

There are now 33 reported cases of pneumonia under treatment in the city as compared with 28 last year this time.

Dr. Ruhland asked the public to take care of colds and other respiratory illness in the beginning because they are often forerunners of pneumonia. A motion picture entitled "A New Day," dramatizing the modern methods of pneumonia control, will be exhibited on local screens. Free serum for physicians having indigent patients, laboratory service for physicians to determine the type of pneumonia so that proper treatment can be given immediately, and the appointment of two pneumonia consultants from the medical profession to aid local physicians round out Dr. Ruhland's program.

Air Disaster Inquiry Is Urged in House

An investigation into causes of the three major airline disasters since abolition of the Air Safety Board was demanded in the House yesterday by Representative Hinshaw (Republican), of California.

"Since the effective date of Reorganization Plan No. 4 and the abolition of the Air Safety Board and the transfer of the Civil Aeronautics Authority to the Department of Commerce, three major airline disasters have occurred—airline disasters in which the passenger fatalities have been something terrific," Hinshaw said.

The three crashes were at Lovettsville, Va., on August 31, when 25 persons including Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota, were killed; near Salt Lake City, Utah, on November 4, when 10 were killed, and at Chicago December 4, when 8 were killed. Reorganization Plan No. 4 took effect July 1.

Representative Hinshaw suggested that the proposed investigating committee could, before the next session, "obtain all the necessary information to present to the House in order to aid in stemming this tide of accidents."

Wife and Salesman National Contract Pairs Champions

Philadelphia, Dec. 5 (INS).—A 100-pound Philadelphia housewife and a home insulation salesman tonight won the National Contract Pairs Bridge Championship by one of the narrowest margins in history.

The winners were blonde Mrs. Ralph C. (Sally) Young, rated last year as America's best bridge player, and Sidney Silodor, who has never won a national title before.

In second place, only a point behind, were Mrs. A. M. Sobel and Robert McPherran, both of New York.

Third position went to Mrs. Stuyvesant Wainwright, New York socialite, and the famous bridge master, Oswald Jacoby, of Dallas, Tex. The defending champions, Miss Florence Stratford, of Cleveland, and Lewis H. Fremont, Detroit, ranked twenty-sixth in a field of 36 pairs.

King Pays Visit To Southampton During Air Raid

Southampton, Dec. 5 (U.P.).—An enemy bombing plane flew over Southampton today while King George was inspecting the damage caused by air bombardments, touching off a barrage of antiaircraft fire in full view of his majesty.

The raider swept over this southern port just as the King was leaving the docks. Batteries in all parts of the town burst into an intense barrage. Their shells could be seen bursting around the bomber as the royal car rolled along the thoroughfare.

The brief appearance of the enemy plane was the only incident marring the King's tour of this hard-hit city, where he received an enthusiastic welcome.

Tall Girls Can Be Long On Glamour

Expert Advises Them Not to Stoop, but To Be Proud of Height

IF YOU are tall, you're in the minority, but that doesn't help to minimize your height? So perhaps you stoop to take off half an inch. And what does that get you? A very bad figure and a posture that stamps you as mediocre.

It doesn't pay to stoop—even when dating a man who is short. You can't cut off enough inches to make up for the poor impression you make. You will get further by capitalizing on your height. If you do that, the tall men will come running for introductions.

Whenever you feel an inclination to belittle your extra inches, you can bolster your self-confidence by reflecting that many of the movie stars are 5 feet 7 inches in their bare feet. This list includes Hedy LaMarr, Kay Francis and Rosalind Russell. Gail Patrick is 5 feet 8—and so, by the way, is the current Miss America!

A good number of the stars stand 5 feet six: Greta Garbo, Eleanor Powell, Marlene Dietrich, Vera Zorina and Virginia Bruce. All these girls would tell you the worst thing you could do is stoop, and that applies to sitting, standing or walking.

Many of the tall beauties have tricks—not to make them look shorter, but to make them appear more graceful. To keep from looking all knees when you sit on a divan, let the knees go slightly to one side in a long line. When crossing the legs, cross them at the knees and for goodness' sake point the toes in the same direction! It is fatal to twine the legs. Or to sit with knees apart.

Try Walking Like a Greyhound

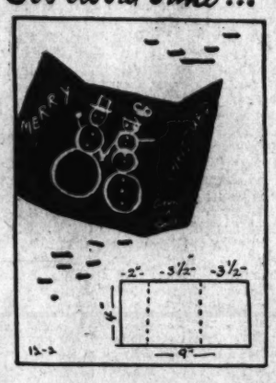
When walking, keep yourself pulled up to your full height. Try to walk like a greyhound, not like a camel or a duck! Move smoothly, with steps that are neither mincing nor a stride but easy and graceful. Walk in a fairly straight line, and let the swing of the legs come from the hips. And use those muscles on the backs of the hips. Clench the hips together and keep them pulled down and under. Any tall girl who learns to walk beautifully is bound to stand out from the crowd.

If your neck is long, think of it as a column meant to carry your head erect. You can keep from over-accenting neck length by avoiding V-necks or necklaces that drag the lines of face and neck downward. The most flattering hair style is the long, soft bob—and, incidentally, it's the least expensive to keep up.

With long arms, the problem is to have sleeves that are long enough so that you don't feel a constant urge to tug at them, or to try to conceal your bare wrists. Also allow plenty of shoulder room for freedom of movement.

The girl who thinks she is too tall and makes up her mind to be attractive in spite of it usually finds in the long run that she is more attractive because of her height. If you were not "too tall" you might never give your looks a thought, and you might go through life just average looking.

It's About Time . . .



It's about time to make a Christmas card that is it's own envelope. Cut medium blue construction paper 4 by 9 inches. Fold as indicated. White ink and haphazard circles form snow-man and wife. For writing noses, hatbands, etc., use red ink.

The Willowy Type

Rosalind Russell, who is 5 feet 7 inches tall, is an example of a tall girl who makes the most of her height. Note her proud carriage and her clever selection of clothes

Women's Styles Reveal Change In Etiquette

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 5.—Fashion etiquette is as changeable as a woman's mind and just as unpredictable. What might have been taboo once is in excellent taste today.

Grandma, for instance, would have been a fine target for gossip had she stirred from her home in a nightgown, but many Hollywood girls are going dancing in beautiful gowns too lovely for slumber. In printed, flowered, plaided and striped taffetas, satins and chiffons they make elegant dancing frocks.

And this year a girl may show a bare knee on the street and not have her manners criticized. She resembles a little girl with deliberately shortened skirt and 2 inches of knee exposed between skirt and heavy knee socks. This theme is Brenda Marshall's favorite for around the house. She's adopted it in peasant frocks in pastel shades with matching socks. And for the street Brenda has a Scotch plaid suit, above the knees, and heavy green socks.

According to Olivia de Havilland, it would have been considered cheap to wear anything but genuine jewelry in 1857, background year for "Santa Fe Trail," her latest picture.

But today, adds Olivia, "junk" jewelry is in the polished class. For every piece of the real thing a girl has two of the imitation.

Holly and Mistletoe Christmas Decorations

When selecting greens for Christmas decoration, don't forget that there are other things besides pine and spruce, holly and mistletoe that are traditionally appropriate today as this old English Christmas verse relates:

"With holly and ivy
So green and so gay
We deck up our houses
As fresh as the day.
With bays and rosemary
And laurel compleate
And every one now
Is a king in conceite."

A Woman's WASHINGTON

D. C. Girl Takes Stenographic Course And Wins Role as Dancer in Comedy

ONE WAY to get on the stage is to take a stenographic course, then sit back and wait for your career to come looking for you. That's what Helen Hoyem did, and as a result she's making her debut tomorrow night in Philadelphia in "DuBarry was a Lady."

Helen Hoyem

When she was graduated from George Washington last June, she wanted to carve out a career as a dancer. But her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Hoyem, of 3000 Connecticut Avenue, objected to her going to New York on the grounds that she might spend weeks hunting a job that wasn't there. So she took a business course and kept up her dancing as an avocation. Her most recent appearance was at the Bundles for Britain benefit held this fall at the British Embassy.

Then "DuBarry" came to town, a member of the chorus had to leave the company and Marian Chace was asked if any of her pupils could fill the spot. Helen could and did. Kissing her typewriter goodby she sped to Philadelphia and started rehearsals. Her parents will see the performance tomorrow. How does it feel to have your daughter run off and join the road show? "It's a shock—but an amusing shock," says Mrs. Hoyem.

A girl at the Army-Navy game last week amused herself before the kickoff by spelling out the advertisements towed by airplanes circling over the stadium. Those around her paid no attention as she read aloud the plugs for a make of automobile, a razor blade and a local restaurant. But they jumped a little, and she did too, when she spelled the next one: "H-O-T S-E-P-I-A S-H-O-W N-I-G-H-T-L-Y 1-3-0-9 W-A-L-N-U-T."

A new "charity" racket has come into being in time for the Christmas season, according to the Rev. John L. Mixon of the Federation of Churches.

He warns housewives who receive telephoned requests for Christmas basket funds not to let the holiday spirit run away with them. "The group asks for $3, the price of one basket," he explains. "We have found that there is no organization by the name they use; in fact, I know of no bona fide charity that solicits funds by telephone. The best way to handle such a call would be to ask for a letter stating the group's name, address, purpose and board of directors. I think the letter will never arrive."

Woman Loves Husband Who Merely Endures Her As a 'Bad Bargain,' or So She Believes; She Asks Help in Improving Their Relations

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Until now, I have made all sorts of excuses (in my own heart) for my husband—because I haven't wanted to face what I know to be true. The truth, I believe, is that he doesn't love me. How could he love me and treat me as he does?

We live in a small town and he runs his own business, which yields a good income—out of which I am allowed only $5 weekly to feed the two of us. That's all right. I can do it. But when I need wearing apparel, I have to plead for the money, which always brings on an argument about "the high costs of living."

I'm allowed so little for clothing that I am forced to buy the cheapest garments. Consequently, my husband is always finding fault with the way I look. And he is forever telling me I should "go to work." I would be willing to—if I could find work. But in a small place, there's nothing to do; and I'm not experienced. Also, my health isn't good, and I have wanted to consult a doctor, but my husband says I don't need a doctor.

Now he has two men working for him, which isn't necessary, because half the time he is playing pool. Last summer, when I was at death's door, I was sent home to mother (18 miles away), because we couldn't (so he said) afford a nurse. Yet he went to dances during that time. I like to dance, too, but I never get the chance. My husband buys what he wants and goes where he likes, but I never nag. I just keep my feelings locked in my heart.

I love my husband and can't rouse the will to leave him. But I don't see how I can be happy with him. I don't think there is "another woman." His attitude toward me is that of a man enduring a bad bargain. Yet I want to be a real companion to him. Can you help me.

LOST SOUL.

Wise to Follow Husband's Suggestion

DEAR L. S.: You might rekindle your husband's interest if you took his advice and found a job. You aren't helping yourself by dismally declaiming (without investigation) that "there's nothing to do in a small place." If the town is of sufficient size to afford your husband a business that yields a "good income" and permits him to employ two helpers—it surely holds some job possibilities for you.

As one well acquainted with small towns, I know there are job opportunities in such places for persons who cannot be idle; for those who enjoy "meeting the public" and having "money of their own" (be it ever so little) to spend as they please. I know that few towns are so small that they don't boast one or more beauty shops, grocery stores, dry goods stores, drug stores, restaurants, dry cleaning establishments, notions shops, millinery shops, bakery shops, motion picture theaters, hotels (such as they are), etc., etc.—where others besides the proprietor and his kin are on the payroll.

In urging you to get a job, your husband's motive may be purely selfish. But I believe it is a sound prescription for what ails your marriage. Firstly, your appearance is against you. But your supplications for money with which to improve it only widen the estrangement which already exists (partly because of your unattractive looks). So, money of your own to spend on yourself would probably make your husband sit up and take notice—as he hasn't done for quite a long time.

Then, the fresh food-for-thought that a job would supply would get your mind off your husband's neglect, at least intermittently, and thus provide the antidote for that mental morbidity which undoubtedly is largely responsible for your ailing health. As your looks and health improved; and your outlook, interests and contacts widened—a more cheerful self sufficiency, a refreshing independence of mind and action would begin to irradiate your personality.

You would no longer be a shabby, wan-faced, neglected nobody, but a bustling young business woman with her own schedule and appointments to keep—and perhaps friends of her own to step out with, if or when her husband had engagements with cronies. You would be, once more, as attractive as you were when your husband fell in love with you. Or perhaps even more attractive, as most wives are who combine "emotional seasoning"—that poise and understanding which life's buffeting brings to the gallant soul—with chic appearance and alert, usefully occupied mind.

You should proceed on the theory that your husband isn't entirely out-of-love with you, but rather, extremely bored by the sameness of your conversation and appearance; by the dead-weight dullness of your dependency upon him for support, companionship, entertainment, contrast that if you were to pull yourself home, etc. You should believe that if your were to pull yourself out of your dispiriting domestic confinement, and proceed—entirely on your own power—to go on growing and changing and improving, you could recapture and continuously sustain his affectionate interest and respectful attention.

Too many wives make the mistake of thinking they can afford, after marriage, to go on being the same old person, year in and year out, with never an effort to reflect—in their appearance, activities and conversation—the life-of-their-times, as their husbands continuously see it, outside the home.

FAST ACTION HELPS PREVENT MANY COLDS

At the first sign of a cold, put a few drops of Va-tro-nol up each nostril. Its stimulating action aids Nature's defenses against colds.

. . . and remember—when a head cold makes you suffer, or transient congestion "fills up" nose, spoils sleep, 3-purpose Va-tro-nol gives valuable help as it (1) shrinks swollen membranes, (2) relieves irritation, (3) helps flush out nasal passages, clearing clogging mucus. Follow the relief it brings. VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

I used to be a radical,
(At one time I was quite red)
That was before Aunt willed to me
Her big four-poster bed.

I used to laugh at "notables"
Especially the more antique,
That was before the Pelfs and Swaggs
Admitted me to their clique.

I used to scorn all social codes
Until I changed from red to pink,
Now I'm still broad, but a little more "sound"
Since I got this coat of mink.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Truthtown's upper crusters are in a dilemma about their winter vacations. Approximately 1,000 of them who are close friends or relatives of the Duchess of Windsor had planned to go to Nassau. Now the report that the duke and duchess may visit Truthtown in the near future has caused a general cancelling of plans.

Naturally the friends of the duchess want to be here to entertain her if she comes. And if her visit is delayed they may have to remain here in cold—even zero—weather, and also suffer the accompanying lack of social prestige. A few are compromising on short trips to Palm Beach from which resort they can return here by plane should interesting developments arise.

"The whole indecision about the matter is typical of the way things are done by democracies," said Mrs. Wynkoop Bigwigger yesterday.

The Deb Whirl

Glamour deb Mimi Doolittle, daughter of the Ditherton Doolittles, has left for Ritz Springs to recuperate from her coming out party last week. Mimi, wearing a simple white tulle dress and carrying a single large white lily, was presented by her parents at a tea Saturday afternoon at the Plush Sofa Club.

Saturday night her grandmother, Mrs. Absinthe-Brown-Flitterjig, gave a dinner dance for her at the Hotel Swank. The event did not get well under way until midnight and ended with a breakfast at the country estate of the deb's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Atterbury Husk. A buffet luncheon at noon for the deb and her friends was given by Mrs. Boxwood Maze and later a cocktail party by Mr. and Mrs. Juniper Bounce. A buffet supper followed at the home of the Alexander Rhumbas, after which the guests visited Spanish Loft night club.

Monday morning business was virtually disrupted in Truthtown banking circles because of a shortage of clerks and office boys as many of the stags were too overcome to report for work.

Stag Line Notes

Members of the younger set are rejoicing that stag lines will retain some of their more dependable members despite the draft.

Buzzie Bellwether, it is reported, failed to pass the mental test for the service and will be on hand as usual this winter for the rhumba and the conga. Several perennial members of the stag line, Huntington Rhinestone, Carrington Stepp and Chauncey Penguin failed to pass the physical tests and will serve their country by attending the war relief parties.

Philander Plunkette, who is paying alimony to three wives and supporting two minor children, obtained exemption and as usual will be giving all the debs a rush.

Woolie Washing Time Is Here

Here's a tip about washing woolies. Make a rich suds of mild soap flakes in lukewarm, normalized (rain-drop soft) water. Squeeze water through garment several times. Do not rub. Rinse thoroughly in soft or normalized water. Squeeze, do not wring. Rinse again in tap water. Lay over smooth bar or line away from artificial heat.

If your city water is hard, get the name of normalizer that is safe for woolies and your hands. Do not use water softeners that make your hands smart . . they are just as hard on wool as on your skin.

Learn Dress Design at Home

ALWAYS a fascinating field, dress designing. Now, since America is becoming the new style leader, it is an expanding field, with many chances for women with a knack for clothes.

Turning this knack to professional uses, of course, requires some training, but you can learn much in home study.

Charts and diagrams show you the porportions of the figure, how to flatter it with the right use of curved, perpendicular, horizontal or diagonal lines. Then you learn how to work out your style ideas. One widely used method is first to make sketches and, in turn, translate these into patterns.

In making a pattern you first cut from muslin what's called a basic pattern. For a straight-front waist, for instance, fold a piece of muslin lengthwise, then unfold and pin the center crease down the center of your dummy, placing material about 4 inches above the neckline.

Designing clothes for yourself, your friends, you soon develop, are ready for professional work.

Our new 40-page booklet, "Dress Designing for a Smart Career," gives diagramed instruction in principles of design, figure drawing and pattern making. Has pointers on fabrics, colors; explains style trends, historic costume periods as style sources. Discusses modern designers; gives advice on job getting, designing for the stage.

'Bishop From Spain' Calls on Dutch Children

Fat Old Gentleman in Red Robe Probably Is Santa to You and to a Few on the Inside It Was Dr. Boon That Visited Van Houtens

By Hope Ridings Miller

IF THE PERSONABLE Dr. H. N. Boon, Second Secretary of the Netherlands Legation, could have found a sure-footed horse shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, you could have seen him galloping over the Westmoreland Hills on his way to the Van Houten house. You wouldn't have recognized the diplomat, however, for he was dressed to the teeth in a long red robe and a towering turban over a snowy wig that matched his long beard.

Hope Ridings Miller

The type of horse he wanted was not available at the moment, so he rode in an automobile; but his colorful costume attracted much attention along the way. You see, he had become one with the good Saint Nicholas, the storied "Bishop from Spain," who calls on Dutch children every December 5; and yesterday afternoon he paid his visit to several of them assembled at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. R. van Houten at 1 Wetherill Road.

Eagerly awaiting the jolly old gentleman were small Yetta Loudon, 2-year-old daughter of the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon; little Peter and Dirk van Houten; Elizabeth and Talitaa Boon, Anne Peter, and several of their young British, American and Norwegian friends. Accompanying Saint Nicholas was his faithful blackamoor, "Black Peter" (the Van Houtens' chauffeur, dressed especially for the occasion), with a large sack swung over his shoulder.

"Here Comes the Steamer That Brings Saint Nicholas," sang the children as the aging Dutch Santa Claus and his attendant entered. Every small guest had been told, as Dutch children are each year, that the merry old man comes up by steamer each December from Spain and must be greeted with this song. The company knew well ahead of time, too, that if they had been good, there would be candies for them in Black Peter's bag; otherwise, before the party was over they would be inside it themselves . . . and on their way back to Spain.

GEETINGS went the rounds after Saint Nicholas entered. Some of the very young guests had never laid eyes on him before, and hardly knew what to make of his tall hat, rosy complexion and beard that blanketed his chest. Some of the older ones (around 5 and 6) were slightly perturbed when he began reading off a list of complaints about their behavior the last few weeks; while others were wreathed in smiles as he expounded their virtues.

Before the get-together was over, the children who had been naughty promised to be good; the good ones, even better. Then, Black Peter dipped into his bag and brought forth a variety of candies which he tossed out to the company. And pretty soon the party was over and Saint Nicholas was on his way.

For several days, Dutch children have carefully placed a shoe by the fireplace, knowing that each night Saint Nicholas has been riding his horse across the house tops, and stopping occasionally to listen down the chimney to find out if little boys and girls are as good as they should be. Now and then a couple of carrots, a slice of bread, or several lumps of sugar have been left in the shoe—for the old gentleman's horse; and once in a while Saint Nicholas has dropped a gift down the chimney into the shoe for any child whose behavior has been above reproach. This, of course, has been in keeping with the old Dutch custom, which also dictates that naughty boys and girls have found small switches instead of gifts in their shoes.

Speaking of the Dutch—there's a very interesting visitor from the Netherlands in town now. He's Dr. Adrian Pelt, chief of the Netherlands Government Information and Press Bureau. Just returned from a tour of the Netherlands East Indies, he is here briefly before going on to New York tomorrow. This evening, the Netherlands Minister will fete him at a stag buffet supper at the Legation.

SOCIETY-GO-ROUND: Mr. and Mrs. Armistead Peter, jr., have taken the Grant Mason house at 1224 Thirtieth Street and yesterday had a few friends in for tea . . . Mr. Mason has moved to 1513 Twenty-eighth Street, the house occupied by the former Lilie O'Donnell . . . Incidentally, Mr. Mason's name is not listed in the current Washington Social Register; while, for the first time, John D. M. Hamilton is . . . I understand the Hamiltons are planning to stay in Honolulu for several weeks longer, and that when they return, John is to be Washington representative of a big-league Pennsylvania oil company, at a much larger salary than he got from the Republican National Committee.

ON THE CALENDAR: Mrs. Roosevelt will entertain at a luncheon for ladies of the Cabinet on Monday . . . Mrs. Roberta Barbee Martin has cards out for a tea on Sunday, December 15, in honor of Frances Parkinson Keyes. The party will take place at 706 South Pitt Street, Alexandria . . . Mrs. Horace Williams has invited a number of friends for cocktails at the Wardman Park Hotel after the British benefit fashion show on December 12.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

DESPITE warnings that "you mustn't do too much in this altitude," Miss Vera Bloom writes from Mexico City that the American guests at President Camacho's inaugural haven't stopped once, except to sleep. But no one has keeled over, though the number of parties in their honor has been epic.

DUDLEY HARMON

Each American guest has not only his own car, but two motorcycle escorts, all put at their disposal night and day by the Foreign Office. The visitors were guests of honor at a stupendous fiesta, where Indian dances and pageants from the new President's home State were staged. They also attended a special performance at the National Opera, which boasts the only Tiffany glass curtain in the world (cost, half a million dollars!).

"WE MIGHT almost have been in Washington at the recent luncheon Ambassador and Mrs. Daniels gave," Vera writes. "Around the table were Vice President-Elect and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Senator Downey, Senator and Mrs. Chavez, Representative and Mrs. Martin Jones, Mayor and Mrs. Maury Maverick, of San Antonio, the Patrick Hurleys (he, incidentally, is an honorary Mexican general); Chip and Evie Robert and the Counselor of the Embassy and Mrs. Pierre Boal, who were in Washington for several years. Former Senator McAdoo and George Creel are also here.

"Our embassy in Mexico City is more magnificent than any we have in Europe. By the way, I've worn out that word 'magnificent' during my stay. Not one of the books on Mexico I tried to devour on the day down gave any real hint as to how superb the place would be."

WASHINGTON'S first modern office structure, the Longfellow building, now nearing completion, has a balcony at each window on the Connecticut Avenue side. An average of ten passersby a day stop in to ask the superintendent what they're for. The other morning a man entered, explained he lived opposite, and that as he got dressed for breakfast he had been asking himself for the past two weeks, "Why the balconies?" Finally he couldn't stand the wonderment any longer.

The well-known architect, William Lescaze, is doing the building. In town yesterday from New York, he explained that the balconies will cast a shadow on the glass windows, cooling them and making it less warm in the summer. Mr. Lescaze arrived at their design after a study of the effects of sun heat on glass with a special "sun machine."

KNOWN throughout the country, Mr. Lescaze is particularly famous in New York. On East Forty-eighth street he and his wife occupy the first modern home ever built in Manhattan. When the architect designed it in 1934, glass bricks weren't then being manufactured, and the Building Department put up quite an argument as to whether they were safe. Mr. Lescaze won out and now this type of material is almost commonplace in modern design.

The Lescaze home aroused such curiosity that people were always ringing the doorbell to ask what it was all about. Finally the architect and his wife said, "Well, we'll move out and the public can come in." So every Monday they left their home early and all the curious trooped in, to be shown around by the butler.

MR. LESCAZE was a pioneer in trying to rid the layman of the impression that modern architecture is just a series of chromium zig-zags. He doesn't go in for gadgets and things weird. A Washington friend who has visited his New York home describes it as so subdued and restful that after about ten minutes she began to feel sleepy.

Born in Switzerland, Mr. Lescaze was educated at the famous School of Architecture in Zurich. Mrs. Lescaze, incidentally, is the sister of Commander James Hughes, who was commander of the Panay, and who is married to the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wrisley Brown, of Washington. Commander Hughes was retired from the Navy as the result of a leg injury at the time of the Panay disaster. He is leaving for the Pacific Coast in charge of an oil tanker, and his wife is expected to join her parents here during his absence.

Fashion Show To Aid Britain

Mrs. Walter Tuckerman and Mrs. Frank James Morrow are working on plans for a unique fashion show—a collection of originals will be shown—to be given on December 12 in the Shoreham Hotel. Proceeds will go to the British-American Ambulance Corps. The show is being sponsored by the Washington Chapter, of which Mrs. Tuckerman is president and Mrs. Stewart Richardson, vice president.

Miss Ellerbe Wood will present the show. On the working committee headed by Mrs. Morrow are Mrs. Charles Bromwell, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Miss Virginia Hunt, Lady Bradford Leslie, Mrs. Arthur McArthur, Mrs. John E. McClure, Mrs. French Myers, Mrs. Kenneth Watson and Mrs. Horace Chapman Young.

Madame Chairman

By SUZANNNE

WASHINGTON FRIENDS of Mrs. W. Taylor Smith, wife of Capt. Smith, U. S. N., retired, will be interested to learn of the success of an auction she directed this week as chairman of the Annapolis Chapter of Bundles for Britain.

The affair was arranged in the mirror room of Carvel Hall, with Commander O. C. Laird and Capt. "Happy" Hartigan as auctioneers, dressed as though they were officiating at a country fair . . . and money collected filled a bushel basket on the floor beside them.

The room was packed with buyers and everything from heirloom rose point lace to handsome Chinese vases, was contributed for the sale. Probably the rarest treasure was one given by Mrs. Smith herself. It was a cameo brooch, set with lapis and pearls that had belonged to Betty Washington Lewis, wife of Col. Fielding Lewis and sister of George Washington. The pin was handed down to Mrs. Smith from her grandmother, Ellen Byrd Lewis, a direct descendant of the original owner.

Mrs. Smith now resides in Annapolis but has lived in Washington for several periods while her husband was on tour of duty here. Before his retirement, Capt. Smith was naval attache at the American Embassy in Berlin. When they first returned from there an autographed picture of Hitler stood on the mantel of historic Acton House, which is now their residence in Annapolis. The picture is no longer on display.

MRS. W. TAYLOR SMITH

Acheson Explains War Finance Plan to Club

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor.

Formation of an American corporation to take over direct British investments in this country and, instead of selling them, issue bonds against them, the proceeds to be used for the purchase of armaments, was suggested yesterday by Dr. Edward E. Acheson. Addressing the Twentieth Century Club at its December meeting at the Y. W. C. A., Dr. Acheson suggested this plan as one that would provide complete security for the bonds in this country and eliminate the chance of breaking the market by the immediate sale of the properties.

Speaking on "How Good Is as Good as Gold?" he asserted, "Gold is as good as the American dollar and the dollar—the soundest currency in the world—will hold its value as long as Americans wish it to."

He does not view with alarm the size of this country's gold reserve. The danger lies in the possible change in the value of the American dollar, he said. If our policy in regard to this is not carefully guarded, inflation can take place even with a 100 per cent gold-backed currency. The increase of the number of "monetary counters" would automatically decrease the value of each unit, he explained, and thus would result in inflation whether the "counters" were gold coin or paper. The one grave danger in the accumulation of gold in the United States is this potentiality for increasing the amount of money in circulation, he said, with a false feeling of security because of the gold behind it.

The possibility of other countries leaving us holding a $24,000,000,000 bag of gold and using some other medium of exchange he did not consider serious.

"The gold standard is a modern invention," said Dr. Acheson, "not yet 100 years old, but gold has had value for thousands of years. Even the Russians, who have thrown out all capitalistic ideas, can't throw out that of keeping up the value of this one thing that they produce quite easily."

The United States, he pointed out, produces only one-fifth of the fold and the fact that there are larger quantities in other countries means that it will continue to have value.

In answer to a question as to the movement to make large noninterest bearing loans to other countries, Dr. Acheson said the plan of tying their economies to ours would have value only if theirs were controlled in accordance with ours. Otherwise it would mean simply that they would use the gold to buy our goods, thus sending it back to us and netting this country only the loss of its goods plus the cost of sending the gold to those countries and bringing it back again. If the gold stayed in the countries to which it was sent a "dollar bloc" could be established in this hemisphere similar to the "sterling bloc" of the British Empire, he said.

Dr. Acheson was introduced by Mrs. Lawrence Martin, president of the club. After his talk, Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, who represented the club at the Herald-Tribune conference, reported on the conference sessions.

Bride's Plum Pudding Launches Her in Trade

Her Yule Delicacy Is Now Famous Throughout World

Started Making Them 'Like Mother Did' To Please Husband

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor.

Martha Ellyn

An English husband asked his American bride of one month to make a plum pudding for Christmas. The bride said that she had never tasted a plum pudding, much less knew how to go about making one. But being eager to please her new husband, she suggested he write to his mother in London and ask for her recipe, and the exact procedure for making the pudding.

When the recipe arrived the proportions were such that it made 15 puddings. The English husband, very pleased with his wife's success, proudly distributed 10 of the puddings to their friends. When Christmas time came next year, the recipe was doubled, and twice the number of puddings were given away to friends. And the friends, highly praising the puddings, insisted that they be made for sale.

Mrs. George N. Mathews, also known as Dorothy Mathews, who sends thousands of puddings over the world every Christmas, started making plum puddings "like mother made" so as not to disappoint her husband. Now she is busy making them so that she will not disappoint her customers. That means that she must make about 7,500 of her delicious "olde tyme" plum puddings this year.

The fame of these puddings has traveled further than Washington. Not only does Mrs. Mathews ship puddings to virtually every State, but also ships them to Honolulu, Aruba, Curaco, and many other foreign places.

The recipe she uses has long been famous in the Mathews' family in England, and has been handed down for generations. For centuries plum puddings have been made in pottery bowls and covered with pudding cloth. Pudding cloth is unbleached muslin. Because of the steaming process in the pottery bowls tied up with the pudding cloth, the fruits and nuts used in the puddings retain all their natural flavor. The pudding is a blending of 40 items—spices, fruit, nuts and a host of other ingredients. Mrs. Mathews thinks that the thing that contributes most to their success is the long steaming or boiling, which makes them mellow, light and easily digested.

Not only does Mrs. Mathews think of the excellence of her products, but she packages them in an attractive way. Last year at the Packing Exposition in Pittsburgh, she won the award for the most attractive package.

In serving the puddings, Mrs. Mathews puts the pottery bowl containing the pudding into a water bath for about 1½ hours. When thoroughly steamed, she turns the pudding out on a serving tray and garnishes it with halves of English walnuts and red cherries and places sprays of holly or other greenery around the base. When the pudding is brought to the table, rum or brandy is poured over the top, then a match touched to it and a blue flame envelopes the pudding and a delightful aroma invades the room.

"A sauce should always complement the pudding," says Mrs. Mathews.

"Hard sauce is most favored. I find that many of my customers prefer the hard sauce when I tint it a light green. My family likes the English custard sauce the best."

Mrs. Mathews has given me the recipes for making several sauces. So if you want to dress up your Christmas puddings, you will want to try some of the following ones she suggests:

English Custard Sauce

Beat slightly, 3 egg yolks, add ¼ cup sugar and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Scald and stir in slowly 2 cups milk. Place the custard over a slow fire. Stir it constantly. Take care that it does not cool the custard. Add to it some Drambuie liqueur to flavor. Chill it thoroughly. This is not a firm custard.

Hard Sauce

Cream ½ cupful butter; add gradually 1 cupful powdered sugar. Beat until light. Add 3 tablespoons Aperti sherry. Pile on dish and grate nutmeg over the top.

Sherry Sauce

Cream ½ cupful butter; add gradually 1 cup sugar, 1 beaten egg, ½ glassful pale dry sherry, and a little nutmeg. Cook over boiling water until thick.

Rum Sauce

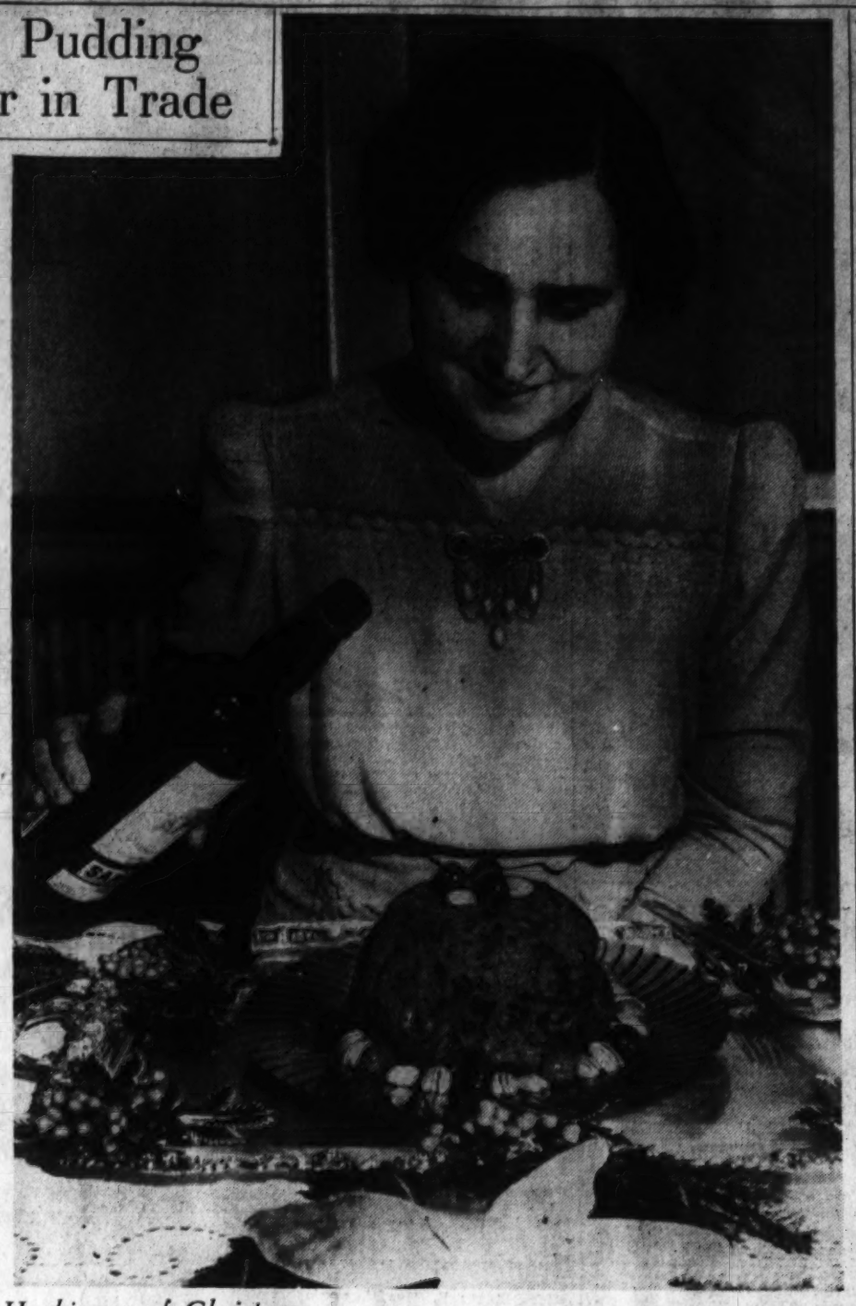
Cream ½ cupful butter; add gradually 1 cup sugar, ½ cup heavy-bodied rum and ½ cup boiling water. Heat over water, stirring until very light. Add, 1 at a time, the unbeaten whites of 2 eggs and beat again until very light; then add 1-3 cup dry sherry and ½ cup hot water. Heat over boiling water, stirring constantly until foamy, and serve immediately.

Wine Sauce No. 1

Cook 1½ cups white Port wine, ½ cup water, ½ lemon sliced, a few whole cloves, a piece of whole cinnamon, and ½ cup powdered sugar. Strain slowly into beaten yolks of four eggs, stirring constantly to prevent curdling; then remove from heat and add the beaten whites of 4 eggs.

Wine Sauce No. 2

Mix 1½ cups Port wine with ½ cupful water; add ½ cup sugar, 2 slices lemon, 1 teaspoon flour dissolved in a little water and the yolks of 2 eggs, slightly beaten. Cook in double boiler, stirring slowly until mixture thickens. Remove from heat and add 2 stiffly beaten egg whites.



Harbinger of Christmas

Mrs. Dorothy Mathews is one who thinks that the traditional plum pudding is the way to end a holiday feast. Here, Mrs. Mathews is preparing for a flaming pudding that she has baked from an old English recipe.

Mince Meat Roll Delectable Dessert

When there's a chill in the air and the trees are taking on brighter colors—that's when we like to have the aroma of spices in our kitchens and desserts of richer flavor are in demand. There is a hue and cry for good old-fashioned mince meat pie. The following recipt is one you will want to prepare on many occasions this fall.

Mince Meat Roll—Mix together 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup sugar and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Cut in ¼ cup shortening. Add milk to make a soft dough—about ½ cup. Roll to ½ inch thickness and spread thickly with 1 medium (1 pound) tin or jar mince meat. Roll up like jelly roll and cut in one-inch slices. Place in baking pan, cut side down. Pour sauce over rolls, then bake in a hot oven, 425 degrees for 25 minutes. Make the sauce this way:

Combine 1 cup water, 1 cup sugar and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Heat to the boiling point.

Mushroom Shortcake

Browned mushrooms and asparagus combined with a savory cream sauce and poured over hot biscuits make a shortcake for luncheon or supper. Dress it up with grated egg yolks and minced parsley.

Husband Plans Gift of Room For Christmas

But He Doesn't Know Whether to Pick Pieces Or Let His Wife Do It

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

The gift of a pretty room would certainly be the grandest gesture of all in the way of a home gift. Even if it's a modest room, it would still be very grand! A more ambitious gift of furniture could not come at a more appropriate season.

One of the husbands in "our crowd" confided that he's planning just that kind of a gift for his wife—asking us whether we'd advise that he attempt to surprise her with the new living room full blown on Christmas eve if such a miracle could be accomplished. Or whether to let her have a finger in the pie—at the expense of the surprise element. We are not long on that sort of surprises so we suggested that he buy a miniature piece of furniture, a really nice little treasure, and put it on the tree for her with the generous check attached for the amount to be spent on the room. That way she'll have her surprise, along with a charming small symbol of the gift and the fun of "doing" the room herself.

Another friend who is giving a room to her daughter is going ahead on her project, since it won't be by benefit of checkbook but by her own work and ingenuity. That's a different situation, of course. And in this case we think the recipient will be even more delighted than if she'd had the job of making the few pennies go such a long way. This room is a bedroom with walls painted white and an assortment of old furniture painted white to match. The old bed, with footboard eliminated and the low headboard slip covered in flowered chintz on a white ground, has an underspread of this same chintz with an overspread of white organdy made with a full flounce finished all around with a 6-inch ruffle. Window shades of the chintz overhung with ruffled organdy curtains, a dressing table with a chintz skirt and the white organdy over it but caught back at each side, lamp shades of stretched chintz with white organdy petticoat flounces . . . all carry out the same fluffy young effect.

MEAT?

This Seal means that all statements made in this advertisement are acceptable to the Council on Foods and Nutrition of the American Medical Association.

—even the tiny tummy digests it easily

There are a lot of fallacies, questions and old wives' tales about many of the foods we eat.

One of these questions is, "Is meat an easily digested food?"

A statement approved by the Council on Foods and Nutrition of American Medical Association contains the direct and forthright answer:

"Meat is very digestible. The protein, or body-building material in meat, is almost entirely digestible and about 96 per cent of the fat is digested. Few foods can equal or pass this record."

Babies get meat juices as early as five months, and meat soups and chopped meat soon thereafter. Even before the child is a year old many child specialists put bacon on the menu—and how the baby "goes" for it! When you consider that the delicate digestive apparatus of a year old baby can digest meat, it is easy to understand that meat is one of our most digestible foods.

At the other end of the line, we find meat prescribed for convalescents and people in the sunset of life to build back strength and to retain it.

There are two other important characteristics that go hand-in-hand with meat digestibility as beneficial to the body.

Satisfaction Value. This is the "stick-to-the-ribs" quality of meat. A meal with meat gives you a satisfied feeling for a longer period of time between meals.

Savory Value. The flavor, appearance and aroma of well-cooked meat stimulates the flow of gastric juices and actually aids in the movement of foods through the digestive tract. Even the salivary glands, important in digestion, are stimulated.

In other words, the happy promise of eating meat gives digestion a head-start.

To eat meat is one of the strong desires of the human race.

That's why we say, with scientific and medical authority: Eat Meat and be Merry—it's good and good for you! American Meat Institute, Chicago.

"Plum pudding is fine, So are cookies and sweets; And it wouldn't be Christmas Without holiday meats."

Meet Your Holiday Meats

Your meat market is a Christmas shopping top, too—for instance, plenty of pure pork sausage and bacon for holiday breakfasts, or lunch. Whole hams—to have in the refrigerator for "late-night" prowlers and snackers. Tongue, salami, frankfurters and liver sausage—for "dropper-inners." A good old-fashioned roast—beef, pork, lamb or veal for "dorm-eaters," starved for home-cooking, and for the mid-holiday Sunday dinner.

P. S. Gift Idea. Meat (canned meats, too) makes a wonderful gift for the family which has everything or for the family which has little.

Excluding Migrants Illegal, Inquiry Told

Miss Hoey Calls Barriers to Indigents An Invasion of Rights

By James D. Secrest

States which bar indigent migrants at the border while advertising their tourist resorts are violating the Constitution, Miss Jane Hoey, director of the public assistance division of the Social Security Board, told the House interstate migration investigating committee yesterday.

Stepping in where Jack Tate, general counsel of the Federal Security Agency, and lawyer-members of the committee were treading softly, Miss Hoey said:

"I think it is a denial of constitutional rights for a State to bar indigents. But of course I'm not a lawyer."

She said that "ridiculous" occurences had been brought to her attention, due to the long-term settlement laws of some states. One State refused to admit a person for relief aid even though he had been born and reared there because he meanwhile had lived in the Philippines.

Several members spoke of Florida as an example of a State which spends thousands of dollars in advertising to lure the well-to-do and places police at the State border to keep out indigent migrants in search of jobs.

Chairman Tolan (Democrat), of California, recalled the fight of three States over the right to the inheritance tax on the estate of Col. Edward H. R. Green, son of Hetty Green, and commented:

"Did you ever hear of three States fighting over which one would pay a migrant relief?"

Witnesses heard yesterday were in agreement that Federal grants-in-aid are needed for destitute migrants. On the share to be paid by the States they differed.

The Right Rev. John A. Ryan, director of the Catholic Welfare Conference, expressed the opinion that direct or work relief should be furnished jointly by the States and Federal Government, with the latter bearing the larger share.

Msgr. Ryan said that migrancy cannot be abolished and that no law should be enacted in an attempt to hinder it.

Asserting that farm owners are becoming tenants at the rate of 40,000 a year, he suggested a $1,000,000,000 annual appropriation for rehabilitation loans and ownership loans and a "super-tax" on large land holdings.

Miss Hoey told the committee that it is a mistake to believe that defense industries will absorb all employables, not to mention unemployables. The national defense program, she added, has aggravated rather than solved the migration problem because of the mass movements of men and their families looking for jobs.

"Studies of migrants indicate that in general they are a young age group," she said, "and would be an asset to any community if given an opportunity to become self-supporting."

While recommending Federal grants-in-aid for migrant relief and the grouping of resident and non-resident relief, Miss Hoey said she is opposed to 100 per cent Federal grants.

Miss Hoey and other witnesses pointed out that State settlement laws might be made uniform, if not abolished, as a condition for receiving the Federal grants-in-aid.

The committee will resume its hearings at 10 o'clock this morning with the session devoted to means and extent of Federal aid to migrants.

Trinidad Governor Here for Base Parley

Sir Hubert Young, governor of the British island colony of Trinidad, off the northern coast of South America, arrived in Washington yesterday for a conference with the British Ambassador, the Marquess of Lothian, regarding development of a United States naval base at Trinidad.

Trinidad is one of a chain of eight naval and air base sites recently leased from the British.

JAN KUBELIK
Czech Violinist Dies

By the Associated Press

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 5.—Franklyn L. Hutton, father of the Woolworth heiress, Barbara Hutton, the Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, died at his plantation 30 miles from here today after an illness of several weeks.

He was 64 years old.

Private funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. Saturday at Prospect Hill, Hutton's 5,500-acre estate on the Edisto River near here. Burial plans were not announced, but it was presumed the body would be sent to New York.

Hutton, who was a retired New Yorker broker, was ill when he came to Charleston from Atlantic City about two weeks ago. At the time, he was said to be suffering from a severe cold.

Shortly after his arrival, Barbara was summoned from the West Coast to be at his bedside. She arrived here Tuesday of last week.

Besides the countess, other members of the family were at the bedside when he died at 12:30 p. m. They included his wife, the former Irene Curley Bodde, of Detroit; his brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, who have a winter home near here, and a sister, Mrs. Thomas Middleton, of Pleasantville, N. J.

Hutton's first wife, the mother of his titled daughter, was Edna Woolworth, whose father founded the 5-and-10 cent store chain that made his name a household word and brought him millions. She died in 1917, and nine years later Hutton married Mrs. Bodde, a Detroit divorcee.

Berlin, Dec. 5 (AP).—Jan Kubelik, 60, renowned Czech violinist, died in Prague today of an undisclosed ailment.

Born at Michle, near Prague, Kubelik won world renown almost upon graduation from his musical studies at the age of 18. He traveled more than a million miles for concerts on five continents. He last appeared in the United States in 1935.

60 Years of Crime

Death Takes First Convict To Escape From Devil's Island

By the Associated Press

Manchester, England, Dec. 5.—A pauper's grave was dug tonight for Eddie Guerin and in it will repose the shadowy symbol of the theme he often preached but failed to heed through at least 60 of his 80 years:

"Crime doesn't pay."

The incorrigible jail-bird and one-time consort of "Chicago May," ran the gamut of crime from purse-snatching and pocket-picking to safe-blowing and bank robbery and won his greatest notoriety 35 years ago as the first man to escape from the French penal colony at Devil's Island.

He died in poverty Tuesday in Lancashire County Hospital.

Eddie Guerin was born "Fox," but where he picked up his alias is as little known as the place of his birth. He was reputed to be the "black sheep" of a respectable Chicago family, but he once escaped extradition to France by swearing that he was a British subject, born on a British ship at sea.

Certain it is that one of his earliest recorded big-time jobs was the $10,000 robbery of a Galesburg, Ill., bank in 1882. Chicago police already knew him as a pickpocket of great skill, and he first fled to England after wounding a Chicago detective.

Guerin soon was followed here by a friend, blonde May Vivienne Churchill, who won notoriety as "Chicago May" when she "worked" the Midway crowds at Chicago's 1893 World's Fair.

Accused of a variety of crimes, Guerin finally caught one of the toughest raps of all—a sentence to the French Guiana penal colony of Devil's Island for robbing the American Express office in Paris of $50,000.

In 1905 he escaped, reputedly with funds supplied by "Chicago May." Six convict companions died of starvation in the Caribbean, but Guerin got to England.

By 1907 he fell out with Chicago May, and she and a male friend were sent to prison for shooting him. May is reported to have died 11 years ago.

In 1936, he got an unexpected windfall, claiming one-fifth of the $67,000 estate of a half-sister, Mrs. Harriet A. Mitchell, wife of a Chicago broker. He is said to have received $3,500, but whether he ever got the remainder is not known here.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, and bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal regularly, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

A group of well-known women who know good food became a "meat-testing jury." For one whole month each woman purchased all her meat from the Sanitary nearest her home. Here's what Mrs. J. W. Bulger said: "I expected to buy at least one or two cuts of Guaranteed Meats that wouldn't please us—we're fussy about meats. But it didn't happen once! 1889 Inaugural Fund To Help District Poor

$6,814 Interest Has Accrued On Trust Account

The Commissioners yesterday revealed their intention of playing Santa Claus to local needy with interest money on a 51-year-old trust account "discovered" by Acting Auditor A. R. Pilkerton.

A sum of $6,814.98, representing currently accrued interest on an original surplus of $26,000 surplus from the inauguration celebration of President Benjamin Harrison, March 4, 1889, is available for the purchase of fuel and clothing for the District's poor, under the terms of the Centennial Inaugural Relief Committee, set up in 1889. One of the few inaugurals to show a profit, the surplus money, which has since grown to $42,750, was used in part prior to 1936.

A committee of citizens will meet today at 11 a. m. with the Commissioners to decide how and how much of the amount available is to be spent.

Along with the centennial relief fund, Pilkerton "found" seven other trust accounts, which together with the relief fund, total $75,250.

Under the terms of the $26,000 trust account, the Commissioners were authorized to spend only the interest.

Invited to the Commissioners meeting today were Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Prof. Charles Thomas, president of the Federation of Civic Associations; Lewis Barrett, District coordinator of recreation; James E. Colliflower, president of the Board of Trade; C. Melvin Sharpe, member of the Board of Education, and L. Bert Nye, president of the Rotary Club.

The William Hauer bequest amounting to $2,500 was set up for the benefit of the Home for the Aged and Infirm. Pilkerton said $562 in interest was available for the inmates at this home.

The William Galt legacy amounts to $2,000, interest on which is to be used by the schools for the purchase of medals and other suitable rewards. At present, an amount of $365 is available.

The Mathew Wright legacy, totaling $21,400, was set up in 1847, is being used to carry out the terms of the trust by the payment to the Ebenezer Station Sunday school and to two orphan asylums.

A policemen's and firemen's coffee fund, amounting to $2,000 has now accrued $392.05 which is used for the purchase of coffee and sandwiches for the members of the Police and Fire Departments while engaged in fighting fires. It consists of donations made from time to time by residents of the District.

The George M. Kober legacy, totaling $1,500, is used for prizes in domestic science and for prizes for nurses training at Gallinger Hospital.

Women's Anthropological Society Fund, amounting to $1,000, is used for the public libraries.

The Henry Pastor Memorial Fund represents a $1,000 bond of the Washington Railway and Electric Co., donation of James T. Dubois to the Henry Pastor Memorial Fund of the Free Public Library. The income from this investment is paid periodically to the librarian for the purchase of scientific periodicals.

Capital News In Brief

Driver Tagged $10 On Wrong Tag Charge

A man who asserted he was the Mayor of Vienna, Va., spent a half-hour at Seventh Precinct Station last night, but not on official b[illegible].

Jam[illegible]seph Davis, 46, forfeited collateral on a charge of driving with dead license plates after he was involved in a minor collision at Bank and M Street Northwest.

Asked to exhibit his permit, Davis, police said, showed one which did not tally with the car's license plates. A conference at the station house, in which Davis identified himself as the mayor of the nearby Old Dominion township, ensued.

Firemen Give 'Whisky' A Warm Reception

"Whisky" was home yesterday after spending a night in the station—a fire station.

The little Irish terrier trotted into Engine House No. 1, 1643 K Street Northwest, Wednesday afternoon, and the firemen there gave him a warm reception. They played with him, and he did tricks for his supper. Late at night they bedded him down with warm blankets.

But they didn't know his name, or his owner, until The Post arrived yesterday morning. In it one of the men read a story about "Whisky," the missing Irish terrier of Italian Embassy Counselor Marquis Albert Rossi-Longhi. "Whisky" had begun an afternoon walk through the open gate of the envoy's home at 2425 California Street Northwest.

Private H. L. Hooper put down his Post and called up the marquis. Then he took "Whisky" straight home.

Gold Lace, Etiquette Bow to Modern War

Modern war, with its dependence on machines, has hit the Army squarely in the gold lace.

Already the Army has discarded its sabers and its dress uniforms; its drill has been adapted to combat rather than parade. Now comes a War Department order regulating respect to the National Anthem by troops in motor vehicles.

Those in passenger cars or motorcycles, reads the order issued yesterday, must dismount, face toward the music, color or flag, and salute. Those riding in trucks need not clamber down as heretofore. They will remain seated at attention, while the person in charge of the vehicle dismounts and salutes, except tank commanders, who will salute from their tanks.

More than 500 North Carolinians attended a reception and dance last night at the Willard Hotel, where Governor-elect J. Melville Broughton was guest of honor.

The affair, a victory celebration, was sponsored by the North Carolina Democratic Club, headed by John K. Slear, president.

Members of the executive board of the club attended a dinner preceding the reception. Afterwards Governor-elect Broughton, presented by former Gov. O. Max Gardner, gave a brief address before a seated audience of some 300. Also speaking were Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Mrs. May Thompson Evans, assistant director of the women's division oof the National Democratic Committee.

Mrs. Broughton was in the receiving line with the Governor-elect at the reception. Broghton was presented a large turkey wishbone as a token from the club.

Kingman Park Civic Unit Runs Co-op Grocery

Association Head Expects Increased Membership in Spring

This is the sixty-eighth article in a series about associations of citizens in the District.

A cooperative grocery store at 1916 Benning Road Northeast is now paying dividends to members of the Kingman Park Civic Association, who began the venture last month.

Association members have hired two clerks to handle the normally active business of the store and take turns in helping during rush hours, Ernest F. Harper, president, said yesterday.

Other activities of the 12-year-old civic unit range from publishing its own monthly newspaper—with a circulation of more than 1,500—to sponsoring improvements in school playgrounds and streets.

The Kingman Park body serves an area bounded by East Capitol Street on the south, Fifteenth Street Northeast on the west, the Anacostia River on the east and the District Line on the north.

The active membership now numbers 350, Harper said, and he expects the total to reach 500 by spring. They plan to sponsor their annual Christmas carol bus and community Christmas tree this month.

Chief aims of the association this year are to obtain a colored teachers' college for their area, which now has an elementary school, a vocational school and a junior high school, and to have unpaved streets in the area improved.

Meetings, which are usually devoted to discussions of community problems and occasionally to speakers, are held on the second Tuesday of the month in the Charles Young School, at Twenty-sixth Street and Benning Road Northwest.

Welfare work is carried on by the organization through contributions to the colored Police Boys Clubs, the Community Chest and the group's ladies' aid.

Besides Harper, who is serving his third term, officers include W. A. Autten, vice president; Miss Esther Jones, recording secretary; Mrs. Geneva F. Edwards, financial secretary; Charles J. Quander, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Martha Simpson; the Rev. A. E. Shadd, chaplain; William L. Whittington, sergeant at arms; Mrs. Mary E. Pope, floor delegate, and Mrs. Helen T. Harper, editor.

Delegates to the Federation of Civic Associations are Mrs. Dorothy Miller, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Edwards, Miss William Miner and Mrs. Thelma Thomas.

Snake dance music shrill last night. The tom-toms beat a prayer for rain and the diners feasted on red man's food.

It was the annual Indian dinner at the Cosmos Club, home of Washington's scientists and intellectuals.

But the 200 members and their guests went fanciful last night and scientific papers and weighty tomes were cast aside for a venture into a civilization old when the United States was new.

The tuxedoed men, and women in evening gowns, turned back the clock in a literal way. From tortillas and pecan butter to scuppernong sauce, every article of food was such as had been included on the diet of Indians who roamed the land when the Pilgrim Fathers arrived.

Emphasizing the care with which the dinner's planners had adhered to historical, gastronomic fact, Dr. William J. Humphreys, meteorologist and physicist, addressed the meeting, verifying for the company a "Cherokee cocktail" whose ingredients included maple sugar and pineapple juice.

He was followed by Dr. Harry B. Humphrey, plant pathologist, who discussed the wild rice, served in one course of the banquet. He pointed out the vegetable is neither wild, being cultivated by growers, and is not rice, technically, but a type of grass. Yet that it had been Indian fare was undisputed.

Capping the climax for the dinner's historical accuracy was one of the facts pointed out by Dr. Pumphrey: The wild rice for the dinner actually had been collected by 1940 Indians from a reservation in Minnesota.

Between speeches and afterward a phonograph was turned on and the throb and cry of the "Snake Dance," the "Bean Harvest" and the "Eagle Dance" swept the hall.

Sanitary Store Meat Employes Win Pay Rise

A strike of 500 meat department employes of the Sanitary Grocery Co., whose stores in Washington and suburbs were closed by a walk-out of clerks during the Thanksgiving holidays, was averted last night when workers agreed to a contract granting wage increases to journeymen butchers and two classes of apprentices.

A meeting of 400 employes, members of Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union, last night voted to accept a contract negotiated by a union committee and the management. The contract, effective December 2, increases the pay of journeymen butchers from $32.50 to $35 a week; of apprentices with less than one-year experience from $21 to 22, and of apprentices with less than three years from $28 to $30.

Time and a half for overtime, one-week vacation with pay and full holidays on George Washington's Birthday and Armistice Day are other contract provisions.

Fire Damages Servants' Quarters At Navy Yard

Fire of undetermined origin yesterday damaged the roof of servants quarters attached to the first floor rear of married officers apartments at the Navy Yard. The blaze was brought under control before it spread to the three-apartment building.

Lieut. Comdr. A. A. Burke, who discovered the fire upon returning home from duty about 4:45 p. m., attempted to quench it with a hand fire extinguisher. When he realized the flames had gained too much headway, he called the station fire department.

Before the fire eventually was brought under control, apparatus from the District Fire Department and the fireboat were summoned.

Airline and Travel Executives See Movie

"By Air to the Land of the Incas," a sound and color movie dramatizing aerial travel opportunities in Latin America, was previewed last night by approximately 100 airline and travel executives at the Mayflower Hotel.

The presentation, which followed a buffet supper, was shown under auspices of Pan American-Grace Airways, Inc.

Musicales Are Planned For Inaugural

'Court of Freedom' Erected in Front Of White House To Be Feature

Additional plans indicating that the Presidential inauguration on January 20 will be different from any in the past were revealed yesterday by Joseph E. Davies, arrangements chairman.

Following a meeting of the executive committee, he announced:

An open space on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House will be decorated and given the name of "Court of Freedom" or "Court of Free Americas." Here may be held one or more of the musical concerts or other events tentatively scheduled for Sunday, January 19.

Attendance promises to be the greatest in history, according to the advance demand for grandstand tickets along the parade route and at the inaugural ceremony itself on the east front of the Capitol.

A mass religious ceremony is being planned for the morning of January 19. Also under consideration is a series of city-wide entertainments for the particular benefit of the tens of thousands of visitors who will come here for the quadrennial event.

Meeting at lunch at the Raleigh Hotel after the formal opening of inaugural committee offices in the District Building, the executive committee heard from Melvin D. Hildreth, ticket chairman, that a record-breaknig attendance is indicated.

Already, he said, he has received applications for 1,600 grandstand tickets from Chicago alone. Present plans call for installation of 16,000 seats along the parade route from Capitol to White House, but this number will be far from adequate if the demand to date is any criterion, he declared.

Ticket headquarters will be opened Tuesday morning, said Hildreth, at 727 Fifteenth street Northwest—local Willkie headquarters until November 5.

It was revealed that New York's Mayor LaGuardia has volunteered several thousand municipally-owned chairs, should they be needed, and a similar offer has been received from John Ringling North, head of the Ringling Bros., Barnum & Bailey Circus. The latter will ship 5,500 circus seats up here from Florida winter quarters if they are needed.

Commissioner David McCoach, jr., a member of the executive committee, announced yesterday he is sending a representative to New York to scout the seating situation. Formerly the grandstands have been constructed, but shortage of lumber and high prices have induced officials to consider the advisability of using second-hand seats.

"One of the greatest musical concerts ever given, presenting America's greatest instrumental, operatic and concert musicians," is in the planning stage, accordiny to a committee statement.

While admitting that the weather was bad on Inauguration Day, January 20, 1937, Ticket Chairman Hildreth optimistically pointed out that fair weather has previaled on that date for seven of the last ten years.

Meeitng with Chairman Davies yesterday were the following members of his executive committee:

Chairman Robert V. Fleming, Corcoran Thom, James A. Councilor, Commissioners David McCoach, jr., and J. Russell Young, Alfons B. Landa, Earl Godwin, Stanley F. Richardson, Mrs. George R. Holmes, Mrs. Arthur D. Condon and Hildreth.

Ignoring a Republican suggestion that the inaugural be carried off without "show," the House yesterday joined the Senate in approving additional funds to bring total seating accommodations up to the same figure as in 1937.

While approximately 15,000 seats were provided four years ago for $35,000, the same sum this year permitted construction of less than 12,000 because of increased cost of labor and materials, it was said at the Capitol. An estimated $7,000 was needed to provide some 2,800 extra seats on the East Plaza and the steps of House and Senate wings.

The expenditure, provided for on a 50-50 basis out of contingent funds of House and Senate, was authorized by both houses yesterday.

Columbia Light Opera Co. Pleases in 'Florodora' Revival

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Community Center Department presents the Columbia Light Opera Company in "Florodora," a play by Owen Hall, with music by Leslie Stuart, in Roosevelt High School auditorium on Thursday night. Cast of principal characters:

Frank Abercoed....Eugene Kressin
Dolores .....Jeannette Bittner
Cyrus W. Gilfain....Howard Moore
Lady Holyrood....Margaret Ogden
Anthony Tweedlepunch
Florenz Hinz
Arthur Donegal....Henry Andrews
Angela Gilfain.....Ruby Arnold
Leandro.....James Magill
Director: Ethyl Manning.

Adding one more to its list of vivacious productions, the Columbia Light Opera Company revived last evening in Roosevelt High School auditorium a musical play which was known from the Atlantic to the Pacific during the first decade of this century, Leslie Stuart's "Florodora." One of its numbers, the double sextet, has made its name famous even to those who have never heard any of the other melodies, and this fact alone assures it a measure of immortality. Hearing it again after a lapse of 30 years, I was reminded of the time when there were many false claimants to the distinction of having been one of the original "pretty maidens" in the sextet. On the authority of Harry B. Smith, the names of the six beauties who first sang that flirtatious song at the Casino in New York were Margaret Walker, Vaughn Texsmith, Marie Wilson, Marjorie Relyea, Agnes Wayburn and Daisy Greene.

Ray C. B. Brown

Last night the sextet was composed of Mary Ella Bostick, Amelia Shorday, Mary Bassett, Margaret May, Louise Hart and Thelma Donaldson, and their attendant squires were Dick Sykes, John Starr, Louis Baskin, Norman Sims, Samuel E. Dowdy and Lauren K. Denison. Their ensemble singing, as well as the admirable work of the chorus, was a tribute to the training of their indefatigable director, Ethyl Manning.

Jeannette Bittner impersonated the rightful owner, Dolores, and did so with both vocal and personable charm. She was romantically paired with Eugene Kressin, who sang the role of Frank Abercoed, manager of Florodora Island, where the perfume was manufactured to enrich the scheming and dishonest Cyrus W. Gilfain. Howard Moore carried off with aplomb the unpleasant part of the millionaire villain of the piece.

Margaret Ogden as Lady Holyrood, who angles for the matrimonial capture of the villain, showed a natural instinct for acting that gave her part an easy distinction. Paralleling her characterization was Florenz Hinz, in the comedy role of Anthony Tweedlepunch, the detective who "discovers all" by posing as a phrenologist.

'One Night in the Tropics' Proves Almost a Blackout, at the Earle

Nonsensical Musical Lacks Comic Punch Of Biggers' Original; Lively Stage Bill

"ONE NIGHT IN THE TROPICS." Universal picturization of an Earl Derr Biggers story, adapted to the screen by Kathryn Scola and Francis Martin, with music by Jerome Kern, featuring Allan Jones and Nancy Kelly, with Abbott and Costello, Robert Cummings, Mary Boland, William Frawley, Peggy Moran, Leo Carrillo, Don Alvarado, Nina Orla and Richard Carle. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland. At the Earle Theater.

BELL

As an old every-nighter in the warm countries in an earlier incarnation, we seem not to recall ever having encountered anything quite like "One Night in the Tropics," the new screen fol-de-rol at the Earle. There were young lovers pretty thickly strewn around, to be sure, but so far as memory serves none of them was mixed up in any "love insurance" business involving $1,000,000, contingent, on a certain marriage on a certain date.

In his story of "Love Insurance"—if that was its name—Earl Derr Biggers found an ample outlet for his brittle humor and frivolously sapient dialogue, but in adapting the screen play by Gertrude Purcell and Charles Grayson to the uses of the cinema, Kathryn Scola and Francis Martin were unfortunate in permitting practically all of the Biggers fun to elude them. Theirs is a pretty dreary script that follows the general pattern of "Down Argentine Way," with all of the sharp edges dulled to the point of boredom.

Cynthia and her Aunt Kitty, slightly overstuffed with Steve's inspired blundering, take ship for San Marcos to get away from it all on the eve of the day the two youngsters were to have been married. So do Steve, "Lucky" Jim, who has insured Steve's love; the "other girl," Jim's night club partner and his two balmy stooges. In San Marcos there is vast lashing about and much muddled talk designed to roll the audience in the aisles. What it does is roll them into the arms of Morpheus.

Jerome Kern has sprinkled a few songs here and there among the wreckage of the comedy, but they are of only momentary assistance and not even that unless sung by Allan Jones, who was in exceedingly fine voice when the sound track was made.

Mr. Jones, by the way, is cast in the role of "Lucky" Jim and wages a lusty battle with a part that it would take a Titan Among actors to whip. Robert Cummings, as the ostensible groom, with too many gals around, finds himself in the same predicament. With even a moderate excuse, Mr. Cummings can be an ebullient and engaging light comedian—but not in the face of the claptrap with which he has been bogged down by Universal in this one. Nancy Kelly, on the other hand, contrives to make something a trifle less insipid out of the character of Cynthia, and Mary Boland, as Aunt Kitty, manages a laugh or two with the aid of a comic lap dog. Peggy Moran is the feminine menace with most of the threat left out. Bud Abbott and Lou Costello are the life of the party—if it has any. Making their debut in the gelatins, they rely for the most part upon the bag of gags they have made popular in burlesque, vaudeville, musical comedy and radio. Their stuff was funny the first time out.

The "Fun on the Loose" stage revue is plenty loose but still fun. The resounding hits at yesterday's first performance were scored by Patricia Norman, the diminutive songstress with the dimensional voice, and Jimmie Shea and Guy Raymond, in their grotesque dance caricatures. The deceptively fragile Miss Norman tossed over "Boogie Woogie," a neatly arranged medley, "Night and Day" and one or two other telling numbers with explosive effect. Willard Cary inaugurated the goings-on with some agile tap dancing and the Walkmiss, two girls and a ground-man, wound them up with a skillful display of gymnastic pole and trapeze balancing. In between, the Roxyettes interlarded their tricky routines, not entirely without mishap in the roller skating number.

An auxiliary screen feature this week is the Warner Brothers "March On, Marines," a Technicolor short subject that pays tribute to a hitherto neglected branch of the Nation's armed forces, with Dennis Morgan heading the cast in a semi-fictional story of the Marine Corps and Annapolis. It is idealized to a degree that ought to prove helpful to the recruiting stations. Eileen Ritter's "Sing-a-Song-With-Mike" is devoted exclusively to Irish ballads that probably had Phil Regan's ears burning yesterday. The news events complete a "show" that is only one short leap ahead of the Christmas shopping windows, the theaters' major competition at this particular season.

The Tropics Must Be All Right!

BUD ABBOTT AND LOU COSTELLO

making their debut in the celluloids, seem to be doing very well for themselves in "One Night in the Tropics," the new week's feature on the screen at the Earle Theater. Allan Jones, Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings, Mary Boland and Leo Carrillo are among the foremost principals in the cast

Judy Garland Grows Up As Capitol's 'Little Nellie Kelly'

By Richard L. Coe

"LITTLE NELLIE KELLY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the musical comedy by George M. Cohan, starring Judy Garland, with George Murphy, Charles Winninger, Douglas McPhail, Arthur Shields, Rita Page, Forrester Harvey, James Burke and George Watts. Additional music by Arthur Freed and Nacio Herb Brown. Directed by Norman Taurog. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Capitol Theater.

That ingratiating youngster, Judy Garland, becomes a young lady in her new film at the Capitol, "Little Nellie Kelly." She plays a dual role in M-G-M's rather lengthy adaptation of the George M. Cohan musical comedy; the first, that of a solemn colleen new to America; the second, the colleen's daughter, a happy, natural sprite.

There is a plethora of platitudes for the engaging star to overcome; paeans for Ireland and the Irish; the Statue of Liberty; the Declaration of Independence; "The Land of Opportunity" and the New York Police force. A goodly excision of this trite, time-worn breast-beating would have benefited the film immensely. Once the familiar phrases are done with (they come, for the most part, early in the film), the snappy Miss Garland hits her stride and all's well.

A Trio From Ireland

And when all's well with "Little Nellie Kelly," the film achieves that lovable charm it so openly strives to capture. The early portion of the piece finds Miss Garland and likeable George Murphy in Ireland and in love. But Charles Winninger, as her doughty father, will have no more of him than he will of work. Consequently, when the two sail for America, father goes along for food and shelter, but he'll have nothing to do with the upstanding young husband who aims to get on New York's police force of twenty years ago.

Of course what such a critter deserves in real life is what should never happen in the realm of fancy. Winninger is allowed to seem quaintly humorous, hiding his candle under a bushel of bluster. When Nellie Kelly dies in childbirth, she urges father and husband to make up. But father remains stubborn until his granddaughter, "Little Nellie Kelly" is grown into young womanhood and his ignored son-in-law is a highly regarded police officer. Need one add that at long-looked-for last the Pax Eire is reached?

Miss Garland's Songs Click

Miss Garland, as was hinted broadly at the beginning of this recitation, is unbeatably charming and invigorating as her own daughter after having had little to do but listen to perorations in the first half of her dual role. Her "It's a Great Day for the Irish," swinging along Fifth Avenue, would certainly please George M., himself. She has several other pleasant songs, among them "Nellie Kelly, "I Love You," a happy, dancing number that is the best thing in the picture.

George Murphy, whose dancing legs are confined to but one offering (with "daughter" Judy), is both natural and pleasant in his straight role. Winninger is apoplectic and predictable, as ever, as the stubborn oldster who causes all the trouble. Douglas McPhail and Arthur Shields complete the pivotal characters.

The Capitol stage revue is nothing out of the ordinary. Gautier's dog and pony act remains one of the finest in the business, despite visual surroundings of the year 1902. Johnny Burke has a few new "jokes" for his doughboy of 1917 monologue. Harrison and Fisher offer two ballroom specialties. Belett and the English Brothers break no bones in their knock-about routine—very routine. Conductor Sam Jack Kaufman and his boys get a good hand for their triple-barreled overture.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Dec. 5.

FAME: Last week-end Oscar Levant met Marc Connelly and Paul Robeson in a train bound for Chicago. They went to the dining car, seated themselves at a table and ordered their dinner . . . After the meal had been served one of the Pullman waiters approached their table, presented a piece of paper to Robeson and asked for his autograph . . . The singer obliged, and the pleased waiter left—without requesting autographs of Levant or of Connelly . . . Robeson smiled and told his companions: "No defense—it's just racial solidarity."

DISAPPOINTMENT: The first New York volunteer for Army service, after registration, but before the order numbers were drawn, was a Manhattan cab driver named Hyman Better. He was so certain that he would be accepted that he sold his cab, moved from his apartment and completed all arrangements for a year's service . . . Better also was the first to be rejected, because of his poor eyesight . . . He was interviewed Tuesday, in preparation for his appearance on the "Song of Your Life" program, and confessed his disappointment at being rejected. "I could've made a great tank driver," said Better. "If I asked a general 'Where to, Buddy?' and he said 'Berlin,' I'd have no trouble taking him there" . . . "What makes you so sure you could do that?" the hackie was asked . . . "Listen," he assured. "Any hackie who could get through Times Square traffic during the theater-hour rush wouldn't have any trouble getting any place."

CRIME: A member of the Broadway squad told a group of listeners that, despite the vigilance of the Police Department, many perfect crimes have been committed in this city . . . "I never heard of any," one disbeliever insisted . . . "Neither did I," replied the detective. And that's what makes 'em perfect."

AGE: During the early rehearsals of "Delicate Story," the new Molnar play, the author watched a young actor perform, and shook his head . . . "What's the matter with him?" Gilbert Miller asked . . . "There's a mixup of ages," Molnar replied . . . "I don't think so," said Miller. "He's 26, and the part he takes is that of a young man of 19" . . . "Yes," said Molnar, "but he acts like 12."

RECEPTION: A few weeks ago J. Edgar Hoover went to Alcatraz and accompanied the warden in a tour of the prison . . . They walked past the rows of cells and then through the courtyard, where some of the prisoners were exercising . . . One of them hissed. Hoover turned and recognized him. He was an old acquaintance—"Machine Gun" Kelly, the criminal who introduced the description "G-Man."

GREETING: Ernest Truex and Billy Rose, each slightly over 5 feet tall, were in a restaurant where they learned that the 6-foot-7 Robert E. Sherwood was expected . . . "He's meeting a group of important people from Washington," they were told . . . "Is that so?" said Truex, impressed. "What do we have to do just to shake his hand?" . . . "What we'd have to do," suggested Rose, "is get a stepladder."

TRIUMPH: Ruth Weston, who now is featured in "George Washington Slept Here," was in the Stork Club Sunday night discussing the theater. "Last year I worked only three weeks," she confessed. "After 49 weeks of unemployment I felt that the theater was no fit place for a human . . . Well, this week our two matinees were sellouts. And once you step out on the stage and see every seat taken, including the boxes—you forget all about the 49 weeks."

'Elsie' and a Competent Cast Enhance 'Little Men' at Keith's

"LITTLE MEN." RKO-Radio picturization of the novel by Louisa M. Alcott, adapted to the screen by Jack Kelly and Arthur Caesar for Gene Towne and Graham Baker, with Kay Francis, Jack Oakie, George Bancroft, Jimmy Lydon, Ann Gillis, Charles Esmond, Richard Nichols, Casey Johnson, Francesca Santoro, Johnny Burke, Lillian Randolph, Sammy McKim, Edward Brophy, Anne Howard, Douglas Rucker, Donald Ruckerby and "Elsie." Directed by Norman Z. McLeod. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Right in the midst of the juvenile romping and easily dissolving troubles of "Little Men," you'll be transfixed by the most beautiful eyes that ever arrived in Hollywood. They're bigger than Eddie Cantor's and Betty Boop's, but minus the poached egg or flirtatious effects. They beam like a gentle madonna's from under a pretty little flowered straw hat of the '60's ,and remind you vaguely of Luise Rainer in her sweetest moments. Yes, Elsie, alias "Buttercup," the glamour cowgirl (or do we mean girl cow?) of Hollywood, is just the sweetest thing that ever shook a horn coquettishly at a farm hand.

Getting away from the entrancing Buttercup-Elsie, "Little Men" is a pleasant, wholesome and diverting dish of celluloid. It's packed with kids, ranging from sub-kindergarten to high-school age, given a smidgeon of healthy wickedness by George Bancroft, as an oldtime patent medicine salesman and retired forger, and Jack Oakie, who's taking sabbatical leave from the profession of burglary to act as Bancroft's stooge. The Louisa M. Alcott atmosphere of the original book is gently diffused over every angle of the picture. While "Little Men" is relaxing and enjoyable film fare for adults, it's going to be a great help to folks who've taken their young folks downtown to see the Santa Claus exhibits, what to rest their feet and keep the youngsters quiet before starting home.

That Mortgage Again

"Lifting the Mortgage," that prime diversion of novels of the '90's, provides the plot pivot. Jo, of "Little Women," and her Prof. Bhaer, are proprietors of Plumfield, an ideal school. The good Professor invests their savings with Maj. Burdle (George Bancroft), who's sashaying around representing himself as a visiting financier. About this time the mortgage falls due. Maj. Burdle-Bancroft is off peddling his "alcoholic cure" in parts unknown and Jo, and the Professor comes to the reluctant conclusion that they've been swindled. How the Major graduates from a gold brick peddler to the "heart-of-gold" class; how he and Stooge Oakie return to save the school from the demon mortgage holder; how they leave Plumfield in a blaze of glory, even though they're en route to the penitentiary—all this is part of an adeptly developed story that will bring pleasure to countless neighborhood theater audiences and their managers.

Kay Francis is both charming and characterful as Jo, while Bancroft and Oakie polish off their parts in great fashion. All of the juveniles are natural and good. But some people are going to find fault with Charles Esmond as Prof. Bhaer. He's more like a Parisian boulevardier than Louisa Alcott's original character.

"Power and the Land" is a worthy successor to "The River" and "The Plow That Broke the Plains." It has the same great photography, the same authentic flavor of America. The accompanying comment, written by Stephen Vincent Benet, is in his best vein, adds clarity and savor to this exposition of the part that electric power is due to play in emancipating the American farmer, his wife and family from such drudgery.

This week the newsreel manages to give an especially cutting picture of happenings in this mad world. There are the pretentious inauguration of President Camacho in Mexico City, the mine disaster at Cadiz, Ohio, with all its implications of misery, the Army-Navy football game and echoes of Europe's war. When Walt Disney's "Goofy" gambols out, he seems sensible and sane by contrast.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Pittsburgh, Dec. 5 (INS).—Teaming Clark Gable and Lana Turner is certainly one for the books. Looks as if M-G-M is going in for "oomph" in a big way, announcing Clark and Lana for "uniform" (which they tell me does not mean a sweater for Lana). To the contrary, the uniform referred to is a British officer's. The original story by Hans Kafka is about an English captain in the Orient(Gable) who is dishonorably discharged for cheating at cards. He falls in love with a Hongkong show girl (Lana) and together they steal everything but the Chinese wall. But in order to pull his biggest deal he needs to "borrow" an officer's uniform and, presto, reformation accidentally sets in when he dons his old clothes.

Richard Arlen returns to his old stamping ground. Paramount, to star in "Power Dive," which will be produced by my two old friends from the publicity field, Bill Pine and Bill Thomas. It's been some time since the two Bills have been telling me news tips, for they've both been concentrating on production. However, the organization of their own company, Pictures Corporation of America, is their most important venture. The first picture, "Power Dive," which will be released by Para, has a commercial aviation background and since Dick Arlen has been getting a lot of publicity with his aviation school they selected him as the logical star. Besides Dick was a Para star for 11 years.

Jack Warner and Harry Cohn are in a huddle today discussing the deal Warners are offering for half of Rita Hayworth's contract. She is definitely set for "The Bride Came C. O. D.," with Jimmy Cagney when and if Columbia will permit Warners to have half interest in their glamour girl. Warners aren't too eager to build Rita with big roles in important pictures if they can't have at least part time call on her services

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Hedy Lamarr, who had a little spat with John Howard, attending the "Comrade X" preview with Janet Gaynor and Adrian. She wore black velvet hostess slacks with high neck and a long red fox coat; has Margaret Sullavan ever admitted she's expecting a third child; everyone working with her on "Back Street" says it's true; Martha Scott and groom, Carleton Alsap, have gone on a belated honeymoon to a ranch near Palm Springs; apparently Elizabeth Bergner intends to settle in Hollywood. She has bought herself a home in Coldwater Canyon.

Hear that neither Myrna Loy nor Arthur Hornblow wants the house they lived in happily for so many years and that it will be put on the market after the community property settlement; Vic Orsatti's new heartbeat is Lucia Carroll; all the stars who are not on the stage for the examiner's Christmas show Friday night will be in the audience; Maureen O'Sullivan, who visits Johnny Farrow in Canada every chance she gets, left last Sunday—even though the studio notified her she would have to be back Wednesday to start "Billy, the Kid"; Lloyd Pantages opens at the La Conga this week-end for a return engagement of his popular Friday night shows, which went over so well last year.

Lewis Howard, Universal's new hopeful and Lois Ranson are seeing eye to eye; everyone in Hollywood seems to have the flu: Warner Baxter had to be carried off the set yesterday and taken home. Irene Dunne tried to come back to work on "Penny Serenade" but she felt so miserable she had to go home again. In spite of the blizzard weather back here, we've all been lucky in escaping bad colds; Buck Jones will be a grandpa around the first of the year when his daughter, Mrs. Noah Beery, jr., welcomes a little stranger.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

Hollywood, Dec. 5.

At a recent benefit I saw as dramatic an incident as was ever flashed on any screen, and since you know the people—you might like to hear about it. Harry Davenport, that grand character actor, and Wally Reid, jr., were to appear. And though Harry is the boy's grandfather, they'd never met. Wally walked over and offered his hand. "I think we two should know each other, sir," he said. "I'm Wally Reid, jr." Harry shook hands, said, "How do you do? I'm very glad to meet you"—and walked away.

Here's the story: Years ago, Harry Davenport was divorced from his first wife, and lost touch with that branch of the family. His daughter, Dorothy Davenport, after the death of her famous husband, Wally Reid, has brought up her son, Wally, jr., without any help from anyone—and how she's worked to do it! She's been one of the most courageous women in this or any other town. She's written, directed, and acted—and has been successful in each.

She did it so quietly that few people knew what a struggle she's had. But it's all been worth while, when you look at Wally, jr. He's 21 now, works in pictures (he's just been cast in "The Outlaw")—and when he's not before the camera, he sells insurance. Here are three swell people who should be proud of each other.

Joel McCrea and Albert Dekker were working in the same picture "Reaching for the Sun" and drove the identical model station wagons which were parked side by side at the studio. After working the other day Dekker dashed out and hurried home for a party he was giving that night, and discovered when he arrived that McCrea had driven off in his car and had all the goodies Dekker had bought for the party.

That sandwich Preston Sturges named "Long Distance" is made of limburger cheese and sliced Bermuda onions.

When Fred Spencer, who's been made assistant director on "Hop-Along-Cassidy," shouted "Luncheon! One hour, please," the cowboys stared open-mouthed, the script girl dropped a stitch in her knitting, and Bill Boyd said, "Yep—they've upped the budget on this one. He used to just say, 'Chow!' and we'd all come a-running."

Incidentally, Bill, for the first time in his 20 years on the screen, will make a personal appearance tour—through the West and Midwest—starting after the first of the year. His wife, Grace Bradley, will go along but won't appear.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 6, 1940

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

That was an unsavory piece of business by the Redskins the other day when they voted their pal, Andy Farkas, only a half-share of the playoff game spoils. Washington's football heroes proved to be O, so mortal, when the dollar sign reared its important head among them.

POVICH

It would have required no great burst of generosity and even less of propriety for his Redskin colleagues to serve a full share to Farkas. As it now stands, Farkas is cut off with at least $300 less, perhaps $400 less than the 32 other Redskins will draw from the title game. By voting Farkas a half-share, each Redskin saved himself $10, perhaps $15.

That's what Farkas gets for committing the great crime of throwing himself into the pre-season practice with such zest that he tore apart the ligaments in one of his knees. All season he has been hobbling on the sidelines in a useless state. He broke into only one game, and that for only two and one-half minutes. The Redskins did rather well without Farkas, and apparently they aren't forgetting it.

But they are very conveniently forgetting their great good pal of only a year ago, the same being Farkas. Andy was tantamount to the Redskins' backfield of 1939, when Sammy Baugh was having a poor year. He was the Redskins' running attack, the fellow who made 'em move. He was the league's leading ground gainer, too. But these seem to be short-memoried Redskins.

Now pardon us if we permit our imagintion to get unharnessed and plot what we think would be Andy's perfect revenge, if he were the spiteful sort.

Farkas is ready to go again as the game with the Bears for the championship nears. He may still be the best running back on the Redskins. So consider this picture, please:

It is the last minute of play on Sunday with the Bears leading by six points, or less, Andy Farkas, in his own territory, take a punt, or a pass, or comes into possession of the ball somehow. He finds himself in a broken field, in his element. It is not too far-fetched to visualize Farkas breaking into the clear. Just beyond midfield he is loose, only the goal line in front of him.

In this situation, Farkas is sprinting goalward with the Bears in futile pursuit. Twenty-five yards from the goal, he becomes inspired. He stops, puts the ball down on the 25-yard line and refuses to run any farther. Then he turns to his Redskin pals and says:

"Okay, my friends. You only voted me a half share, so I'm only running half way to the goal today. You cost me 300 bucks, but this is costing you plenty."

It couldn't happen, of course. If he ever found himself in a clear field, Farkas wouldn't know how to start to stop. And out there on the field Sunday there won't be a Redskin with a more burning desire to win than Farkas. But shame on the Redskins, anyway.

Incidentally, the owners of the Bears and the Redskins have what amounts to a $25,000 side bet on Sunday's game. They don't put up a dime, but they stand to profit to the amount of almost 25 grand if they win the game. Because to the winner will go the assignment to meet the College All-Americans at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, next August, and $25,000 is what the Chicago Tribune, sponsor of the game, guarantees the pro champions.

A close inspection of the recent performances of the Bears and Redskins scarcely justifies the gloom that seems to have surrounded the Redskins' chances of winning. The Washington team has been none too impressive in three of its last five games, but the Bears have not been exactly sensational.

In fact, the Bears have demonstrated that they don't like the last-half going. It was in the last half that the Redskins fought them off to win, 7-3, and against Green Bay, the Bears spent the entire second half in their own territory trying to protect a 14-point lead they piled up in the first 30 minutes.

Against the Detroit Lions, the Bears collapsed completely in the final quarter and were licked by the Lions on a pass in the last minute. In New York, the Bears rolled up 30 points against the Giants in the first half, and in the second half they were outscored, 14 to 7.

The Bears' weirdest exhibition was last Sunday when they rolled up 31 points against the Cardinals in the first half and fans began to speculate whether the score would be 50-0 or 60-0. It ended up 31-23, with the Cardinals scoring all 23 points in the last quarter and threatening to wipe out completely the Bears' 31-0 lead.

Free Agent Makes Terms With Griff

Pitcher, 34, Won 5, Lost 4 With Pittsburgh in '40; Calls From Atlanta

The spare, bespectacled figure of 34-year-old Danny Macfayden will wear a Washington uniform next season, it was announced yesterday by President Clark Griffith, of the Nats.

Macfayden, veteran right-handed pitcher, was signed as a free agent following his unconditional release by the Pittsburgh Pirates. He accepted terms with the Nats in a telephone conversation with Griffith from Atlanta, where he was attending the minor league meeting.

Griffith revealed that Macfayden had talked terms with him in Washington earlier in the week while he was en route to the Atlanta meeting. Offered a 1941 contract by the Nats at that time, Macfayden obtained Griffith's permission to consider other offers that might be made him by teams represented at Atlanta.

Harris Is Pleased

Manager Bucky Harris was pleased with the news that Macfayden would be a member of the Nats. "I recommended that Mr Griffith sign him," said Harris, "and I visualize his as a help to our pitching staff.

"Macfayden has always been recognized as a smart pitcher. He frankly admitted that he no longer could turn in a good job every fourth day, but he said that with four or five days rest he was confident he could be a consistent winner. I am inclined to agree with him."

Macfayden last season figured in 35 games with the Pirates, mostly as a relief pitcher. He had a record of 91 innings pitched, and finished the season with five victories against

Giants Buy Bob Bowman From Cards

$50,000 Believed To Be Price Paid; Hurler Beaned Medwick Past Year

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Dec. 5.—Just when the winter baseball meetings were about to die of melancholia, the New York Giants tonight purchased Pitcher Bob Bowman from the St. Louis Cardinals for a sum estimated at $50,000 and set the lobby gossips back on their heels again.

Until this happened it had been a dull day, so listless in fact that representatives of several major league clubs packed their satchels and went home.

The minor league club owners and league presidents held a long, argumentative session in which they voted on more than a score of proposed amendments to their working rules and the major league owners and managers milled around admitting, for the most part, that the trading outlook was hopeless.

Paul Warner Released

The Pittsburgh Pirates performed a sad but necessary duty and released their veteran outfielder, Paul Waner, outright. Other clubs fooled around with small functions, sending excess players to minor league farms, fixing up working agreements for the 1941 season and making last futile attempts at trades of importance.

The one oasis in this desert of northingness was Room 1056 of the headquarters hotel where Manager Bill Terry, of the Giants, hid away to bargain from early in the morning until late at night.

At the time the Giants broke the Cleveland, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Cleveland chapter of the Baseball Writers Association today named Shortstop Lou Boudreau the most valuable Indian of 1940.

Boudreau will receive a motion picture camera from the writers at a dinner this winter. This is the fourth year the chapter has selected a most valuable Cleveland player. Pitchers Johnny Allen, Mel Harder and Bob Feller were previously honored.

Redskin Star Considering Job as Coach

Forward Passing Artist Ends Reports He'll Quit Football; Wants Another Year

By Al Hailey

Regardless of the outcome of Sunday's world's professional championship football game between the Redskins and the Chicago Bears, the Skins' most potent scoring factor will be back in his burgundy and gold uniform with the familiar "33" on it next year.

Slingin' Sam Baugh, who was the main cog in the Redskins' seven-game winning streak, yesterday put to rout the usual early-season rumors that he would hang up his helmet and retire to his ranch in Texas.

But there's a catch to it. There must be a "good contract" involved, or Sam won't play. In other words, if the Redskins' chief stockholder, George P. Marshall, wants to have his big drawing card back in 1941 he will have to bear the pain of loosening up the purse strings a trifle.

Baugh has been offered an attractive college football coaching position, and the question of whether he will or will not play next year rests strictly on the willingness of the Redskin management to meet his terms.

Contract Ends This Year

The former Texas Christian University forward passing star who has broken three all-time National Pro League records this season and who probably could have broken more if he had maintained his early-season pace, terminates a three-year contract this season.

His contract called for between $10,000 and $15,000 per year.

Georgetown Five Upset By Loyola

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 5.—Loyola College won its most satisfying basketball victory in many a campaign tonight by coming from behind to conquer Georgetown University, 36 to 32, before a packed gymnasium at Evergreen.

It was a fast, hard-fought battle in which the Greyhounds obtained a lead, lost it, regained it, were caught again and finally won in the last five minutes. The struggle kept the crowd in a constant roar of excitement.

The Greyhounds were paced in scoring by Bernard Thobe, and three of his field goals came within the last three minutes when they counted most heavily. Vic Bock was close to him in total, with 9 points, while Ed Barczak, lower in scoring, held the team together.

Loyola Leads

Loyola found the range quickly and raced into a 5-to-1 lead. But the visitors came back with a rush and Pajek dropped through a field goal that earned a lead at 9 to 8. The scoring pace was maintained on this level until in the last three minutes of the first half, Georgetown pulled away to a lead of 5 points at 18 to 13.

Georgetown sustained a scoring sag in the face of a very determined defense in the second period, and in three quarters of the session was held to a single field goal. Loyola took advantage of this to race into a deadlock.

Vic Bock made the five points that were needed his own personal affair, tallying two field goals and a free throw to tie the count at 22-all. His last field goal in this series was

Bowl Choices Place Men on All-Eastern

By Bill Boni
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 5.—Boston College, Fordham and Georgetown, which will represent the East in three of the New Year's Day bowl games, each won representation today on the 1940 Associated Press All-Eastern football team.

Boston, as befits a team which came through 10 games without defeat or tie to win the mythical Eastern championship, led the way with three men—Chet Gladchuk, 6-foot-5-inch 242-pound center; George Kerr, guard, and 138-pound Charley O'Rourke, who looks like a drug clerk in his street clothes but becomes a punting-passing-running triple-threat once he dons his cleats and pads.

Besides B. C., which will play Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl, only one other team gained more than one place. Cornell put Tackle Nick Drahos and blocking back and signal-caller, Walt Matuszczak, on the first eleven.

Lio Is Picked

Georgetown, which will play Mississippi State in the Orange Bowl, and Fordham, which will play in the Cotton Bowl, each placed a lineman. The Hoyas' Agostino Lio, 215-pound guard and expert place-kicker, is a holdover from the 1939 team (the only one besides Drahos) while Fordham's Joe Ungerer was named to team with Drahos at the tackles.

Rounding out the line are Ends Loren Mackinney, of Harvard, and Alan Bartholemy, of Yale, both juniors and the only nonseniors on the team. With O'Rourke and Double-z Matuszczak in the backfield are Francis Xavier Reagan, of Penn's Ivy League champions, a one-man gang on his good days and consistently the best punter in the East, and George Kracum, 195-pound fullback who helped keep

Georgetown's Lio Named to Collier's All-America Team

Georgetown's senior guard and kicking expert, Augie Lio, was named on Collier's All-America football team, released yesterday. Collier's team is now picked by the All-America Board, headed by Grantland Rice, and is a carry-over from Walter Camp's original eleven.

Robert Suffridge, of Tennessee, was named to the other guard post.

The honor climaxes the awards for the 215-pound Hoya, who also was named to the New York Sun All-America, the United Press second team and the Associated Press All-Eastern for the second straight year.

ENDS—David Rankin, Purdue, and Gene Goodreault, Boston College.
TACKLES—Robert Reinhard, California, and Alfred Bauman, Northwestern.
GUARDS—Agostino Lio, Georgetown, and Robert Suffridge, Tennessee.
CENTER—Rudy Mucha, U. of Washington.
QUARTERBACK—Frank Albert, Stanford.
HALFBACKS—Tom Harmon, Michigan, and George Franck, Minnesota.
FULLBACK—John Kimbrough, Texas A. & M.

Paul Waner Given Release By Pirates After 15-Yr. Term

Holds Many Records; Club President States Parting Is Friendly

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Dec. 5.—Outfielder Paul Waner was given his unconditional release today by the Pittsburgh Pirates, ending a remarkable 15 years career with that one club.

Waner came to the minor leagues meeting here from his home in Florida and was given an opportunity to make a deal for himself, but nothing developed.

Club President William E. Benswanger said the parting was entirely friendly, and that Paul realized that his place now had been taken by younger players.

Waner came up as a youngster to become a National League hitting sensation for the Pirates in 1926 and the record books are studded with marks he set. Three times he was the batting champion of the league, with marks of .380 in 1927, and .363 in 1934, and .373 in 1936.

He played in 80 games last season,

Eagles Host to Rovers Tonight in Benefit Hockey Game

Tom Harmon Says:

By Bob Considine

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

What wouldn't any coach in the Nation give to line up these three in one backfield? Left to right—Davey O'Brien, of the pro Eagles; Tom Harmon, Michigan, and Frank Reagan, Penn. They met at a grid banquet in Philadelphia recently

This is the fifth of a series of interviews in which Tommy Harmon, of Michigan, America's No. 1 gridiron star, tells behind-the-scenes anecdotes about his outstanding games of the 1940 season.

Tommy Harmon finds it difficult to talk about Michigan's loss to Minnesota. It was Michigan's only loss of 1940, but it was a costly one. For it knocked them out of the Western Conference title.

He sits back in his chair in genuine anguish and moans at the very mention of the game. When he trusts himself to talk about it he says, "It makes me sick to think of the chances we blew that day. We should have beaten them by four or five touchdowns. They're a good club, but we're better. So is Northwestern."

The blunt facts of the Michigan loss are now well known. The Gophers won by a score of 7-6, in the rain and mud of Minneapolis. Bruce Smith, great Minnesota back, ran 80 yards from scrimmage to score Minnesota's touchdown, and Joe Mernick, a sub, kicked the extra point. Michigan scored on Harmon's pass to Capt. Forrest Evashevski. And Harmon missed the crucial extra point.

Lost 31 Yards

It has also been plentifully publicized that Harmon was stopped that day. For the only time during the season, he failed to score a touchdown. He was thrown for losses aggregating 31 yards, and was able to make only 59 yards aside from that. He trudged unhappily off the field, with Red Grange's 31-touchdown record still three touchdowns out of his grasp, and with the bleak prospect of facing Northwestern and Ohio State thereafter.

"On a dry field, Smith never could have gotten away. As fine a back as he is," Harmon says. "Three of us had cracks at him, during those 80 yards he ran. They said later that I was hit by two blockers, Franck and Sweiger, when I came up to take a crack at him. But I think I just slipped in that confounded mud.

"And then Mernick came along to make one of those million-to-one kicks. Franck fumbled the pass from center on that one, and never did get the ball planted right. But Mernick kicked it anyway, and you never saw a prettier kick. You've got to give him credit. The kick I missed was something like that. The ball was wet and muddy and it wasn't planted just right. But, hell, I missed it when I should have made it."

Harmon was lauded after the game for completing nine of his 14 passes, although he was throwing a bar of slippery soap. Four of his remaining five passes were perfect, but were dropped. "The guy who deserved the credit for those completed passes was our end, Ed Frutig," Tommy says. "He made some catches that day that nobody could believe. On a dry field they never would have caught him, particularly on that lob-pass play of ours, where our linesmen let everybody come through at me, and I lob it over their head to Frutig, who comes around on a kind of end-around run."

Tommy probably never will forget Michigan's scoring opportunities. "We went 88 yards in the first period and got a first down on their 5-yard line. In the second period, Frutig blocked one of Franck's punts and Rube Kelto, our guard, flopped on the ball on their 3-yard line. In the third period we went 83 yards to a first down on their 5. Another time, Bob Westfall recovered a fumble on their 4-yard line. But we couldn't score. Once our line opened up a big hole for me, almost on the goal line, and just as I started through it I slipped." The statistics of the game show that Michigan scored 15 first downs to Minnesota's five.

Wants Another Crack

"I'd train two months to get another crack at them," Harmon swears. "There was some talk about replaying it for charity, and all of us were all in favor of that. But Bernie Bierman (Gopher coach) said 'Sorry, boys, Minnesota's season is over.' Funny thing, we haven't beaten Minnesota for seven years. They beat us 7-6 when I was a soph, 20-7 when I was a junior and then 7-6 again.

"I think they were lucky to win, and some of the Minnesota players told us later they thought so, too. But, one way you look at it, they had to play on the same bad field we did. And gosh knows they were in there fighting every minute of the game. We were a little primed up to stop Franck before the game, but I figured the fellow who would give us trouble would be Smith. He's the best back I saw all year."

(Tomorrow's article deals with the Northwestern and Ohio State games, and how Harmon finally broke Grange's record, to conclude one of the great all-time college careers.)

four defeats. His earned run average for the season was 4.57 per game.

Daniel Knowles Macfayden has been known to the trade as Danny ever since he broke into the big league 14 years ago, fresh from Somerville (Mass.) High School. The major part of his career was spent in the American League with the Red Sox.

Met Johnson in Debut

In 1926, young Macfayden found himself pitted against Walter Johnson in his major league debut, losing a close game to the Big Train. He rapidly developed into a star with the Boston team, winning 16 games and losing only 12 for the lowly Red Sox in 1931.

During the 1932 season, the Yankees bought Macfayden from Boston for a price reported to be $50,000, but with the Yankees he never justified that purchase price and was later sent back to the Red Sox on waivers. Before joining the Pirates last year, Macfayden was a mainstay of the Boston Bees' staff for several seasons.

Macfayden's prime assets has been his clever curve ball which he throws with a variety of deliveries. He has never weighed more than 170 pounds during his big league career.

"My greatest feat in baseball," he once told an interviewer, "was beating the Yankees, 5 to 0, in 1930. In that game I struck out Ruth, Gehrig and Lazzeri with the bases full."

Harris does not intend to use the veteran Macfayden as a relief pitcher, he said. "We'll give him plenty of rest in the hope that he can give us a good starting job at least once a week."

a beauty, a one-handed pivot shot from the side.

Thobe passed to McDonough for the latter's only field goal, and Georgetown never regained the lead thereafter, though the Hoyas managed to gain a tie on O'Grady's shot that made the score 27-all with five minutes to go.

Loyola called a time out here, and afetr the rest Barczak counted a free throw when fouled by Miller. Vic Bock dribbled all the way through the Georgetown defense, which had been effective in forcing the Greyhounds either to take outside shots or risk loss of the ball by split-second maneuvers on the way in to closer range. He had an easy shot from beneath the basket.

When, with less than three minutes to play, Thobe counted one from the corner, Loyola held a 32-27 lead, apparently quite enough.

But Pajak dropped a field goal for the visitors and was fouled by Vic Bock in so doing. He added the single point and Georgetown was very much in the game. The Washington team's rooters raised loud whoops when O'Grady passed to Engels for an easy shot and his field goal tied the score. Less than two minutes remained.

Here Thobe took command. He shot from the outside to break the tie, and after a very rough minute of floor play, in which Georgetown battled desperately to get possession of the ball within scoring range, he added another to clinch the triumph.

Ernie Dusek Loses at Arena

The Dusek boys—Ernie and Emil—came out of last night's wrestling wars at Turner's Arena on the short end.

Ernie, in the longest match here in several years, lost to Warren Bockwinkle in 65 minutes after a four-month absence from the local mat, and Emil was disposed of by Joe Cox in the semiwindup in 25 minutes.

The feature attraction had the 1,500 customers sititng on the edges of their chairs, most of the time yelling for a disqualification of Dusek for eye-gouging activities.

His sixth straight triumph was registered by Milo Steinborn with a 12-minute victory over Whitey Gorvo with a bear hug. Lou Piummre defeated Tommy Rae in 15 minutes, and Paul Boesch used one less to exterminate Herby Freeman.

W. J.'s Roark Quits to Seek New Position

By the Associated Press

Washington, Pa., Dec. 5.—Resignation of George W. Roark, head coach of track and football at Washington and Jefferson College for four years, was announced today by Dr. R. C. Hutchison, president of the school.

Roark told newsmen he was seeking a position of "wider responsibility" but did not elaborate on his plans. He will remain at W. and J. until the end of the term.

Dr. Hutchison, who said trustees had accepted the resignation but had taken no action on a successor, expressed "appreciation of the college for work Roark has done, for his skill in coaching football, his good record made against great odds and his remarkable record in coaching track."

A four-sports star at Bethany (W. Va.) College, Roark came to W. and J. after a year at Westminster College. In the last four seasons his football teams won 16, lost 14 and tied two games. Under his guidance the track team last year swept all its dual meets—the first track victories for the school in six years.

Schedule
Tonight—New York at WASHINGTON, Boston at Atlantic City.
Tomorrow—Baltimore at River Vale, New York at Atlantic City.

One of the crucial matches of the young Eastern Amateur Hockey League season is scheduled for Riverside Stadium tonight when the league leading Washington Eagles entertain the high scoring New York Rovers at 8:30 o'clock.

Probably the largest crowd ever to attend a hockey match here, capacity 4,500, is expected to attend this match which donates 10 per cent of its gross receipts to The Washington Post's Needy Family Fund.

By way of making tonight's match an unqualified success, special novelty features are being planned to supplement the match itself prior to the game and between periods. Musical numbers and other surprises will be offered.

The colorful rivalry involving the Eagles and Rovers hit its peak locally a year ago on a similar occasion when some 4,200 fans found their way into Riverside for one of the best matches of the year. The Needy Family Fund realized nearly $240 on that occasion and indications are that this figure will be substantially topped tonight.

High Scorers to Play

Fourteen of the Eastern League's first 22 leading individual scorers will take the ice tonight. Eddy Dartnell, right wing, and Frank Dotten, center, were Rover boys who were tied for individual honors when statistics were released last Monday while Norm Burns, Washington's popular pivot man, was runner-up and the leader in goals scored with 13.

Burns since has substantially bettered that figure, scoring his fifteenth goal as the Eagles mowed down River Vale last Wednesday night in River Vale, N. J., 4 to 2.

Len Burrage, Washington's cagy defenseman, is another scoring leader in that he has compiled eight assists in matches extending through last Monday. Burrage, the Eastern League's leading scorer among the defensemen last season, has hit his hottest stride in recent matches and will be ready for some inspired hockey tonight.

Handed Rovers First Defeat

The Rovers proved the first Eastern League club to dent Washington's winning streak this season when they turned back the Eagles after five consecutive victories in Madison Square Garden, 4 to 3. In a more recent match at Riverside the New Yorkers just fell short on a last-period rally while losing a desperately fought match, 5 to 4.

The Rovers currently are tied for second place, six points behind the pace-making Eagles, with the champion Baltimore Orioles. They entered this deadlock this past Wednesday when they lost an overtime match to the Orioles in Baltimore, 7 to 5.

The Rovers will enjoy an edge in physical condition tonight inasmuch as the Eagles still are bearing the scars of a marathon schedule recently. They are all the better for a two-day rest, however, and should be set for their best effort tonight.

Grand Old Lady Is Redskins' Most Ardent Radio Follower

Sammy Baugh, the Redskins' forward passing wizard, introduces Mrs. Clara Glaze to the art of field goal kicking. Mrs. Glaze, who'll be 85 this Sunday when the 'Skins meet the Bears, has listened to every Redskin game since 1937

Now, Mrs. Glaze will never be a co-ed kicker, but she no doubt would have achieved more fame than American University's field goal artist a few years back. She has that much spirit.

Mrs. Glaze, you see, is a grand old lady of 85—at least she'll celebrate her eighty-fifth birthday Sunday when the Redskins trot out on the turf at Griffith Stadium to meet the Chicago Bears for the National Pro League championship.

She hopes that the Redskins will make her celebration complete with a victory, for the Redskins are her favorite people.

So ardent a fan is Mrs. Glaze that she follows every game religiously—in fact, she has sat by her radio at every game since the Skins first moved to Washington in 1937 and won the pro championship.

She knows all the players by name, and she was so intent on having them win that hair-raising November 17 game with the Bears that she sat for the entire second half with her fingers tightly crossed.

Did Not Complain

When the game was over and the Skins had pushed back the Bears' final threat from the 1-foot line, she couldn't untangle her 85-year-old fingers for some time. But she didn't complain—she just laughed and said, "wait until next week."

The Brooklyn defeat the week before sent her to bed.

Mrs. Glaze lives with her daughter, Mrs. Frank A. McNeill, at 1368 Newton Street Northwest, and every Sunday at kickoff time she takes over the household.

"I don't hear or see so well now, but my spirit's all right, and when my boys get out on the field I want everybody in the house to keep quiet," she laughed with a twinkle lighting her eyes.

Sammy Baugh went out to see Mrs. Glaze yesterday when he heard what an ardent fan she was, and he was just as thrilled at meeting her as she was at seeing her favorite player.

"But they're all my favorites," she said. "When Andy Farkas was hurt last year and operated on this year it hurt me just as much as if he had been my own son. I like them all—Masterson, Wee Willie, Turk, Johnston, Dick Todd—well, they all must be a fine group of boys."

Became Football Conscious

Mrs. Glaze, whose son, the late Robert Glaze, was a baseball player, became interested in sports by going to the baseball games with her son. It was only when the Redskins took Washington by storm that she became interested in football

But since then she hasn't missed listening to a game. Forced to take it easy because of a weak heart, she wouldn't think of not being at her radio and suffering or exulting as the progress of the 'Skins reaches her ears.

She's never seen a game. Until yesterday when Baugh visited her, she had never seen a football. She marveled at the shape of it and said she had always pictured it as a much larger, round ball, loosely filled with air. But she is no lubber when it comes to following the game.

Her grandson, William M. McNeill, graduate of Carnegie Tech and an ardent football fan himself, says that she has her own visual picture of the gridiron, but that she has enough knowledge of the game to talk football with any fan.

Asked to Pose

The tip-off on Mrs. Glaze's great enthusiasm came from a friend of hers who happened in one Sunday while Mrs. Glaze was listening to the Redskins play. Embarrassed at being asked to pose for a picture, Mrs. Glaze consented after being assured that she wouldn't be made to appear comical.

"I'm a very old lady, but I still have my pride," she smiled. Mrs. Glaze yesterday when he heard what an ardent fan she was, and he was just as thrilled at meeting her as she was at seeing her favorite player.

She said she's going to cross her fingers again this Sunday. And what's more, Sammy told her the Redskins will be thinking of her sitting at her radio when they take the field on her eighty-fifth birthday.

Mustangs Rated Over Rice In Conference Tomorrow

Victory for S. M. U. Gives Them Share of Title With Aggies

By Paul B. Williamson
Noted Football Selector

The Mustangs of S. M. U. get the system's nod to beat Rice at Houston in the most important match of a few straggling games this weekend.

If they come through, the Mustangs, our preseason favorites for the Southwest championship, will share the title with Texas Aggies. S. M. U. goes into the game with a rating of 94.7 against 90.7 for Rice.

We'll take Texas to beat Florida in a closely rated match, and Notre Dame to topple Southern California; also Texas Tech over San Francisco U., despite Tech's surprising loss to New Mexico last week.

On Saturday, December 28, we'll ride with the Georgia Tech Yellow-jackets to beat a mighty good California Bruins outfit. Both teams are better than their losses would indicate. Tech has a very small squad and injuries have defeated them this year more than anything else. California has only part of one good team.

The second best State teachers' college and perhaps the second best minor team on the Pacific Coast is Fresno State with a rating of 83.1. They're rambling all around durplay the Arkansas State Teachers ing December. Next Saturday they at Conway, Ark., and should win by two or more touchdowns. Then, they cruise to Hawaii for games with the Healani Athletic Club on Christmas Day and the University of Hawaii on New Year's. Knowing little about Hawaiian football, we'll still tentatively take Fresno both times.

The same goes for Denver over University of Hawaii at Honolulu on December 12.

New Women's Golf President Bids for National Tourney

Mrs. Weible Elected to D. C. Body

Mrs. Lacey Retires After To Terms; Changes Planned For 1941 Season

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Walter L. Weible was installed as president of the District Women's Golf Association in the nineteenth annual meeting yesterday at Columbia Club, and in her acceptance speech the new president promised to start the ball rolling toward getting the Women's National Championship for this city.

Mrs. Weible, a member of Army and Navy who served as Handicap committee chairman last year, asked the local players to cooperate in bringing the District closer to the United States Golf Association, in manner of team play and also in a strong bid for the big tournament.

The National is slated for Brookline, Mass., next fall and the Chicago Women's Association is working on the 1942 tournament. The new president hopes to have the tournament working this way, at least by 1943.

Mrs. Lacey, retiring after two years as head of the organization, was presented with a beautiful pin by the member clubs. The past season was the biggest and most successful in its 19-year history.

Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, Manor tournament chairman in 1940, was moved into the first vice presidency, and Mrs. F. Dickinson Letts, captain of the championship Chevy Chase team, was installed second vice president. They replaced Mrs. Gale E. Pugh and Mrs. Oscar Coolican, respectively.

Succeeds Mrs. Hutchison

Mrs. Harvey J. Cooper, Kenwood, succeeds Mrs. Robert L. Hutchison, Washington, as secretary, while Mrs. Patrick J. Winkler, Congressional, will serve another term as treasurer, the only holdover officer.

Several recommendations were included in the various reports, the most important being the new-team plan, whereby first, second and third teams would be composed of six players each, and the latter two played with handicaps. Others included one by Mrs. Lacey to make the Lady-Pro tournament a part of the schedule, and others to cut the Keefer Cup back to Class A players only; to start the spring team matches later in the month and have the field day follow immediately; to remeasure the courses and place women's par on a stricter basis; and to have tournaments extend through July and August to take the strain off the heavy spring and fall cards.

By a unanimous vote the 130 members present decided that all clubs shall have a hand in the nominating committee next year, instead of just five member clubs deciding on the slate, as in the past. The growth of the association was given as the reason.

The Belle Haven club was officially admitted to membership, making the thirteenth member club of the organization.

Reports read by committee chairmen were: Mrs. Hutchison, secretary; Mrs. Winkler, treasurer; Mrs. Kramer, tournament chairman; Mrs. G. E. Stratemeyer, the team captain's report in the absence of Mrs. J. C. Dale; Mrs. W. R. Stokes, intercity team, in the absence of Mrs. Bishop Hill; Mrs. Weible, handicap chairman; Mrs. F. L. Williams, yearbook; Mrs. Ed Widmayer, nominating committee, and Mrs. Lacey's president's report. Mrs. R. L. Rose, of the rules committee, was absent.

Mrs. Kramer reported that the A and B class division of the tournaments was satisfactory and will be continued next year, when by a little revision there will be an evently divided total of six medal play trophy tournaments, each for the low and high handicapped members of the association.

Mrs. Lacey will take over an honorary position on the executive committee as past president, replacing Mrs. Ralph W. Payne.

Mrs. Weible will call various committee meetings in the near future, but her first big get-together will be around January 15.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 5.—It is too much to expect, of course, but the symptoms are that the A. A. U. suffered a mild attack of reason. Dan Ferris, its fall guy, announced from Denver, where the brass hats are trying to attract a little attention to their comically unimportant convention, that the A. A. U. had reconsidered and had now magnanimously agreed to let Tommy Harmon play in the East-West game.

CONSIDINE

Earlier in the day, Ferris had been ordered to make an announcement which the pompous nobodys of the amateur group apparently hoped would either erase this most worthy charity game, or keep its greatest attraction on the sidelines. The announcement read that any player who stepped on the field at San Francisco January 1 would be contaminated. And would suffer the loss of his A. A. U. card. Such a calamitous bereavement would result in the contaminated players never being able to compete again in A. A. U. competition.

The original announcement was a little vague about just which sort of amateur competition the East-West football players would want to engage in hereafter. From the looks of them, there does not seem to be many 60-yard sprinters among them, or two-board skullers, or weight-lifters. Somehow, we think all of them might have struggled along through life, bearing up under their punishment, since most of them will be pros as soon as somebody shows them a buck.

The first announcement from Ferris was so typically offensive to common sense that it hardly deserved abuse. Everybody knows Harmon is a pro. Tommy told Michigan authorities that he would not report for basketball or baseball long before he came East to get paid for a broadcast with Eddie Cantor. His school was all in favor of his move. But the tone of the A. A. U. proclamation was that he had just been caught red-handed in the act of cashing in on his rep.

Then, without warning, the mild attack of sanity set in. But we could be mistaken. Perhaps the brass hats realized that if they got tough with Harmon, who was giving up his Christmas vacation to play for charity, a lot of persons in the know might get too inquisitive about the fact that several of the A. A. U.'s choicest track stars demand as much as $800 for a single night's race, in meets which have the fond blessing of the be-derbied badge-wearers.

With or without the A. A. U.'s belated "permission" Harmon would have played in the game. The day he agreed to play 8,000 tickets were sold. He personally represents at least $30,000 of this game's gate, and because of that happy fact, hundreds of crippled children in the

A. A. U. Threatens to Crack Down on College Athletes

Officials Gather in Denver for 52d National Convention; Harmon Is Issue

By the Associated Press

Denver, Dec. 5.—Talk of disciplinary measures against certain college athletes for violating amateur codes was heard today as delegates checked in for the fifty-second National A. A. U. convention.

Between tomorrow and Sunday, the A. A. U. will pass on 1941 championship sites for amateur sports as different as basketball and bobsledding, track meets and horseshoe pitching. The delegates also will be asked to ratify 322 new athletic records, highest number in history.

Players on Spot

Along with discussions over whether college players would risk their amateur status by playing in East-West grid game with Michigan's Tom Harmon, it was reported unofficially that the A. A. U. plans to "crack down" on 12 college basketball players who played a professional quintet in Chicago recently.

Daniel J. Ferris, A. A. U. secretary, said Harmon, for receiving a radio fee, made himself "ineligible" for possible A. A. U. competition unless he applied for and obtained reinstatement.

All players competing with or against Harmon in the January 1 charity game at San Francisco, Ferris said, would be threatened with the loss of amateur standing in A. A. U. sports unless each one wrote to the board of governors for permission to play in the grid contest.

Two Players Alright

The basketball players facing A. A. U. suspension were those on the All-Star team which defeated the Harlem Globe Trotters, National Professional League champions.

"When the college stars asked for permission to play against the pro team, they were told the A. A. U. could not sanction their participation," Ferris said.

"Two of the All-Stars, Ralph Giannini, of Santa Clara, and Jim McNatt, of Oklahoma, heeded the A. A. U.'s stand and sat on the bench. Their future amateur standing, therefore, will not be questioned."

5 Texas Aggies On Conference All-Star Eleven

Brumley, Rice Star, Fails by Single Vote To Win Position

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Dec. 5.—Dominated by veterans of the great Texas A. and M. team, the 1940 edition of the Associated Press' All-Southwest Conference team rolled out today with one beacon-light omission.

Coaches and sports writers tossed their ballots into the hoppers and a final tabulation showed that Robert Brumley of Rice Institute, a magnificent fullback and leading scorer of the conference, failed by a single vote to edge into the first string.

Five Texas Aggies, headed by John Alec Kimbrough, the All-America fullback, rated the team by comfortable margins. Cowboy Jack Crain, of Texas University, a first team selection last season, slipped back to the second eleven.

The All-Star selections:

Lafayette's Offense Best, Figures Show

Texas Aggies Only Repeater In Final Roundup of Team Statistics; Defense Falls Off Slightly

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Dec. 5.—Most late season leaders held their pace to finish first in various team statistical rankings for 1940 in the American Football Statistical Bureau's final weekly roundup released today.

Here are the 1940 yardstick champions, with 1939 leaders—lest we forget—in parentheses:

Total offense—Lafayette. (Ohio State).

Rushing offense — Lafayette. (Wake Forest).

Total defense—Navy. (Texas A. & M.).

Rushing defense—Texas A. & M. (Texas A. & M.).

Punting—Texas Mines. (Auburn).

So Texas Aggies are the only repeaters, and they share defensive honors with Navy and Harvard. The Aggies ranked behind San Jose State last year defensively, but topped the major teams.

The Leopards of Lafayette depended on a strong running game to move through an undefeated season. Lafayette gained 2,758 yards on the ground and 556 in the air for 3,314 yards for an average gain per game of 368.2.

Indicating the strong trend to offense this year after 1939's defensive tendencies is the fact Ohio State led the Nation with a mark of 309.3 last year, while this season boasts nine teams which better that average, and the tenth, Duke, is only a whisker under at 309.2.

Defense Lags

The same offensive trend is noted in the defensive statistics. The Texas Aggies led in total defense last year by holding the enemy to 76.3 yards per game via rushing and passing. This year Navy assumes leadership with a mark of 96 yards per game yielded.

First in punting last week, Auburn's Plainsmen dropped to second this week behind Texas Mines, which boasts Owen Price, the Nation's leading punter, who spiraled 30 for an average of 48 yards even.

The figures:

Total offense (gains rushing and passing)—Lafayette, 368.2; Cornell, 364.9; Texas Tech, fourth last week, 337.6; Detroit, eighth last week, 322.3; Boston College, third last week, 318.7; Navy, fifth last week, 316.7; Mississippi, ninth last week, 314.7; Missouri, eleventh last week, 311; Texas Mines, 310; Duke, 309.2.

Rushing offense—Lafayette, 306.4; Texas Tech, 261.6; Detroit, 242.6; Michigan, 240.9; Tennessee, 239.4.

Forward passing offense—Cornell, 186; Manhattan, 151.5; Georgia, 150.3; Texas Mines, 142.2; Missouri, 138.7.

Total defense—Navy, 96; Santa Clara, 109.5; Boston College, 115.7; San Jose State, 126.4; Mississippi State, 127; Penn State, 134.1; Tennessee, 136.5; Alabama, 138.4; Detroit, 140; Nebraska, 144.3.

Rushing defense—Texas A. & M., 44.3; Navy, 49.2; Mississippi State, 50.5; Santa Clara, 53.6; Arizona, 54.2.

Forward passing defense—Harvard, 33.3; Utah State, 38.9; Indiana, 43.4; West Virginia, 44.8; Richmond, 45.4.

Punting—Texas Mines, 42.15; Auburn, 42.11; Richmond, 41.03; Stanford, 40.76; Colorado, 40.61.

Table Tennis Champ of D.C. Speaks Up

Fields in Defense Of Local Paddlers Against Outsiders

Washington's table tennis champion came to his own defense with a vengeance yesterday.

Accused of ducking a chance to meet National Champion Lou Pagliaro and high-ranking Sol Schiff, Bernie Grimes and Doug Cartland in an exhibition Tuesday at Heurich Gym for fear of having his title cheapened, District Champ Stanley Fields came forth with:

"I am not afraid of facing any of these players. I was offered a place in that exhibition, true, and I turned it down. But that wasn't because I thought my game was inferior to theirs. The fact of the matter is that the D. C. Table Tennis Association, which will sponsor the event, could not give me as much of a guarantee as I wanted."

Further, Fields revealed, he has met Champion Pagliaro three times in official tournaments and lost out only 2-1. That, he contends, would hardly indicate a radical difference in the type of table tennis he and the rest of Washington's best paddlers use and that of the national stars.

That Fields can play table tennis comparable to Pagliaro's is also testified by the fact that the two have played in several tournaments as doubles partners.

President Carl Meininger, of the District of Columbia association, expressed regret that Tuesday night's exhibition would not have the Washington champion in action, but seconded Fields' explanation of the reason.

EDITOR, BOWLERS' DIGEST

1. First Step—starts with right foot; ball, held in both hands, pushed away from the body toward the pins. 2. Second step—ball swings backward, continuing in its natural arc; the left arm moves outward for balance; knees bend, body inclines forward. 3. The ball; continuing its backswing, reaches the height of its arc at end of third step.

4. Fourth step—the ball is brought down and forward. 5. Left foot slides toward foul line and ball is released; right foot crosses to anchor the slide. 6. The follow through as the ball starts down the polished lane.

7. Notice how the perfectly-delivered ball reaches its goal, the pocket between No. 1 and No. 3 pin, touching off the fuse for (8.) the explosion of sound and action that says, "Perfect Strike!" Nice going, Joe Falcaro!

BOWLING TIPS. Remember that proper direction is more important than speed. Select a ball that fits the hand. Beginners should walk, not run, to the foul line. Correct footwork is vital. And at all times, stay relaxed!

Berwyn Wins Charles Town Feature Under Jockey Taylor

Furr Buckle Runs Second, Harebell 3d

Port Wales, Favorite, Is Out of Money; Winner Pays $8.60, Scores by 3 Lengths

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 5.—W. L. Taylor, America's second-leading rider, gave one of his better saddle exhibitions here today and pushed Berwyn, a sprinter owned by Mrs. F. L. Karnow, to a three-length victory in The Marshall Purse. The consistent son of Westwick outran his field to the first turn and was not seriously threatened for the remainder of the distance. At the finish line, Mrs. V. L. Black's Furr Buckle was closest, a half length in front of Mrs. I. K. Mouras' Harebell.

Mrs. Dion K. Kerr's Port Wales, installed the favorite for the second time here, proved unworthy of the honor again. He just couldn't find speed enough to keep up with Berwyn and when placed to the whip in the stretch he folded like the well-known accordion. With the rush to get down on Port Wales, Berwyn pain an $8.60 mutuel.

Running Surface Good

The snow came last night, just enough to add a mantle to the infield, but it did not injure the track. While many fans coming from Washington and Baltimore expected to find mud, the running surface was good for the early races and, after being worked between events, was fast for the feature.

Berwyn proved the track was not off by going the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than 6 furlongs in 1:15 3-5, two-fifths of a second over the track mark shared by Lady Buck, Consistent and Blablah.

Jockey agents, who have not been allowed to work at this track during several meetings, were reinstated today. The Jockeys Guild, represented by Jockeys Buddy Root, W. E. Taylor and Sammy Palumbo, as well as Col. Lewis Landes, of New York, the guild's legal adviser, met with the members of the West Virginia Racing Commission today. The action followed.

Jockey Is Injured

One jockey was slightly injured and another was unhurt in accidents on today's program. Jockey V. Bush, making his first saddle appearance here, fell from the back of Jungle Moon in the third race and suffered bruises to his shoulder and leg. Jockey Henry Claggett, the star of the meeting, was tossed to the track when Scarlet O. fell in the fourth race. Claggett not only escaped injury, but he caught Scarlet O. and rode the mare back.

Claggett rode the winner in the first half of the daily double which paid $22. He climbed aboard Mrs. G. Van Ree's Suburbanite and kept the son of Haste going to beat Abbotts Lark and Sandy Belle. In the third race Jockey B. Fels piloted Bide Your Time to victory. Singing Steel and Kin Mag followed the winner to the wire.

The temperature during the day was well above the freezing mark, making it a comfortable day for the customers.

Brewer Coach Improves, May Face Sphas

No sooner had he been declared physically unable to play in the Washington Brewers' clash with Philadelphia's Sphas Sunday than Mack Posnack, coach-player of the District of Columbia American Basketball League representatives, began a sudden and unexpected improvement that may see him in competition after all.

Injured in a smash-up with Whitey Wilson, reserve guard, Posnack's loss was expected to decrease the Brewers chances greatly. If he is able to return, however, the Brewers will be almost an even choice to turn last year's titlists.

The game at Riverside Stadium should give an accurate indication of whether the Brewers will be able to snag the 1940-41 title. Last year they finished a close second to the Sphas.

So far the local five has split even in two games, beating the Baltimore Clippers in their local inaugural last Sunday and dropping a close decision to the New York Jewells.

Numerous features will again mark Sunday's engagement at Riverside, not the least of which may be public dancing to Leon Brusiloff's orchestra. Arrangements have not been completed as yet, but the chances are good that local jitter-bugs will be able to do their stuff after the game.

JINX BUSTER, within striking distance from start, came around horses to reach serious contention on backstretch, raced between horses approaching stretch to get to front and held on with good courage. STOP SCOUT ran MAETAKE into defeat to get to front, saved ground and barely missed getting up. REBUTTAL worked way to contention in opening half and weakened right at close. TIME BEATER was in trouble early and closed a gap.

HOT MAN was slow to begin and came with bold rush at end.

EUROS, permitted to drop back from the lead when reaching the backstretch, responded stoutly when placed to a drive, overhauled EASTER HOLIDAY when ready, and then holding on gamely in the closing stages, outstayed YARN SOX. The latter, as usual slow to get into full stride, worked his way to contention at the final turn, then closed resolutely while saving ground. EASTER HOLIDAY, breaking rather slowly, was sent up rapidly after a half mile to reach the leaders. MOLASSES JULIA, steadied off the pace for the first three-quarters, rallied when shaken up, but could not reach the leaders.

On the Line With Considine

United States will receive medical care their parents otherwise could not afford.

The East-West game is the only postseason football game which justifies itself. Everybody wants to see it played, whether it is played by pros, amateurs, or the hybrids which the hypocritical A. A. U. harbors. The curious fact is that the A. A. U. had intelligence enough to realize that if it blundered again, and hurt this wonderful charity, the public then would have ample grounds to call for the silly outfit's complete eradication.

By the time this appears, prominent behaviorists informed us, the attack of lucidity will have safely passed, and the A. A. U. boys will be back on their old solid-ivory standard.

NEXT!

Billy Soose, who holds decisions over Ken Overlin and Tony Zale, the respective middleweight champions, finally will make his debut in the Madison Square Garden January 3, according to a message from his manager, Paul Moss. The former Penn State boxing star will meet Tami Mauriello.

Jack Doyle, whose "line" on the National League baseball race worked out just the way the race turned out, says that if he were making the 1941 odds today he'd still pick the Reds to win, even though Brooklyn unquestionably is strengthened by the acquisition of Higbe.

"I read some criticism of the Reds because they won about 40 games by one run," Doyle says, "but in my book that is the mark of a fine team. It happened too often to be luck."

Doyle is up in the air about his "future book" prices on the American League race, but probably will make Cleveland his favorite when the time comes. He opened the Tigers at 15-to-1 at the start of last season, rating them behind the Yanks, Red Sox and Indians. "I still haven't recovered from that," Doyle chuckles.

Coin Flip Gives Grid Play-Off Spot

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—The toss of a coin sent the Newark Bears into the American Football Association playoffs today after their game with the Long Island Indians tonight had been canceled because of bad weather.

The teams ended the regular season deadlocked for fourth place in the standings. They failed to reach a decision last Sunday, when they played a 0-0 tie in the mud at Newark, and were re-scheduled for Freeport, Long Island, tonight. The Bears will meet Jersey City at Roosevelt Stadium Sunday. The other game will send Wilmington against Paterson with the winners meeting for the title December 15.

Mel Ott Signs 1941 Giants Contract

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

The ups and downs of jockeys are sometimes amazing. I can remember when Harry Richards, contract rider now for Widener and president of the Jockey's Guild, could not get a mount at a Bowie meeting. He went to the West Coast, rode some winners and got back in the big time. There are several good riders here, capable boys who will boot and kick any man's horse in an effort to win, who just can't get a chance. But they may be the saddle sensations of tomorrow and some of the boys who are now riding the crest of the wave will be down in the rut. Let any rider get lucky and the good horses will come his way, regardless of his ability. There's nothing like a winner at the race track and that goes for horses, jockeys, trainers and customers. After talking with a representative of the Jockeys' Guild, President A. J. Boyle announced that in the future, on days when the temperature is low, the post parades will be shortened. This move was made to protect the riders, as much as possible, against exposure and cold. Jockey Beverley Backer, my friend, had his first mount of the meeting yesterday. He expects to go to California to join the Bedwell Stable after the meeting. Hubert (Dynamite) Kerr has been suffering from a heavy cold. He reported here today for the first time. He is the owner and trainer of Dizzy Dame and others. An effort by the local businessmen, who want the Christmas business, to have the meeting extended a week did not meet with approval of this State's racing commission. A light, wet snowfall during the early hours followed by a brief downfall of sleet and rain, failed to do any appreciable damage to the racing strip. Number of horses worked halves in as good as :48, and one or two were reported to have turned in even faster trials. The plant was pretty to look at early in the day, as it lay mantled in snow. Cinders were applied early to the track roads, and to entrances to the plant. This district's weatherman has predicted clearing weather, rising temperature and a fair, warm week-end. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Questre has worked well and appears nicely placed in the day's opener. The abbreviated sprint route seems right and I'm going to string along. Dinamita always has been partial to this track and should be the runner-up. Vendor's Lien for the minor award.

Second race—Bob's Pass has too much speed for this gang, it is my belief. Should take the top and never look back. Delhi Dan is speedy and likes the track. Should be in the thick of contention. Ballyhaunis is said to be a fair sort.

Third race—Time Passes may be the right one in this rather open race. Is the best of the eligibles and probably will win it even if War Scare and Broomoria, two fair ones, get into action.

Fourth race—Miss Maker is far down the list but belongs with these and probably will win if sent postward. Westing likes the distance and the track and won here opening day. Mulatto Girl has good workouts.

Fifth race—Warlaine must carry 119 pounds but has a class edge on those gathered for this distance test. I see no reason for mistakes. Agnes Knight won on the milers and is dangerous. Third Try rated consideration off big track form.

Sixth race—Roman Boy gets his favorite route of four and a half furlongs. Has been rested and should take it all. O Play showed enough form on the milers to be a keen factor but is a doubtful proposition around the turns. Dora May for the show money.

Seventh race—Voldear and Bright Chance performed creditably with better horses at the big ovals. I prefer them in the order named. Clymene has been away a long time. She works and eats well, but may need a race.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Frank H., Conville and Sun Sweep.

Challedon Heads List of 92 Nominated for Santa Anita 'Cap

26 Candidates Boast Major Stake Victories During Past Season; Kayak II Entered

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Dec. 5.—Ninety-two top flight thoroughbreds, headed by the mighty Challedon,, were nominated today for the seventh running of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 1.

The number of nominations fell short of the record 107 made in 1939, but turf experts looked over the roll and predicted one of the strongest fields in the history of the event would race for the purse—largest in the world—three months hence.

No less than 26 of the candidates have triumphed in 52 major stakes during the last season.

Challedon Heads List

W. L. Brann's Challedon, "the horse of the year," in 1939 and 1940, leads the challengers and will campaign during the winter in an effort to surpass the all-time turf money winning record held by Seabiscuit.

Five prominent derby winners of 1940 were named: Gallahadion, victor in the Kentucky Derby; Sweepida, the Santa Anita Derby; Mioland, the American; Big Flash, the Hollywood, and Woof Woof, the Flamingo Stakes.

Other famous turf youngsters nominated were Porter's Cap, winner of the Washington Park Futurity, and the outstanding filly, Fairy Chant.

Back in the running for the third time will be Charles S. Howard's Kyak II, the Argentine-bred winner of the 1939 Santa Anita Handicap, and every other starter in the 1940 handicap with the exception of Seabiscuit, the winner, now retired, and War Plumage, which ran fifth in the field of 13.

International flavor was added with the nomination of nine South American horses and eight from Europe, including the highly touted Hunter's Moon IV and Saint Andrews of England.

Weights for the handicap will be announced next week.

The Santa Anita season opens December 28.

Nominations for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap:

Whichcote, Chalsion, Shantytown, Don Mike, Ra II, Don Juan II, Don Lin II, Don Bingo II, Chief Onaway, Justice M., Challedon, Aethelwold, Challephen, Specify, Masked General, Porter's Mite, Merry Knight, Welcome Pass, Regent, Sun Ezrel, He Jabbers, Hellopolis, Wise Father, Hysterical, Healfly, Sir Blenheim, Red Chin, Roush Pass, Stalking, Aristotal, Big Flash, Fairy Chant, Fairyman T., Hard Way, Total Eclipse, Wedding Call, Comet II, Sweepida, Wee Toney, Kayak II, Mioland, Porter's Cap, Strong Arm, Son of War, Blue Suit, Handy Tom, Time Alone, Great Union,

Arlington Hall Horse Show Set Saturday

10 Classes and Three Exhibitions Lined Up For Student Action

Ten classes and three exhibitions make up the program for the Arlington Hall Riding Club's indoor horse show, which will be held Saturday afternoon and night on the campus of the nearby girls' school.

Restricted to students, the classes include four horsemanship events, three jumping sessions with horsemanship again the deciding factor, and additional classes for student hunters and student hacks.

The exhibitions will be put on by two of the school's regular drill teams, with a tandem ride as an added feature. For something new under the sun, Dr. Herman Ostermaier will present two dressage horses for the evening performance, both European champions. Dr. Ostermaier will ride his mare, Dorothy, in the high school movements and then will put his white stallion, Doehos, through his paces on a long rein, without a rider.

Life Insurance Firms Lauded By Jesse Jones

Says U. S. Regulation Unlikely if Houses Are Kept Clean

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—Jesse H. Jones, secretary of commerce and Federal Loan Administrator, complimented the Nation's life insurance companies today on their methods of operation and suggested to them: "Keep your houses so clean there will be no reason ever to require Federal supervision."

He spoke before the Association of Life Insurance Presidents in their thirty-fourth annual convention outlining the business position of the United States.

"The economics of the country is sound," he said. "We have no boom, and I hope we never will have one with its attendant depression.

"Remember, this is 1940 we are living in; not 1920 or the 30's. We are living in an era of change, and we must adjust ourselves to it, whether we like it or not.

Income Rise Cited

"We have been thinking too much of the New Deal, of the budget out of balance, of the mounting Federal debt. We are prone to forget the national income is rising. It must advance still further before the budget can be balanced."

Turning to the question of insurance, Secretary Jones said: "The institution of life insurance is regarded almost as confidently by the American people as is the Government itself.

"It is because of that belief in the integrity and stability of life insurance companies that you have been permitted to conduct your business with so little Government supervision. Although there are State regulations, no Federal agency supervises life insurance.

"This must not be taken as hints that the Government contemplates any supervision, but you would do well to keep your houses so clean there will be no reason ever to require Federal supervision.

The Federal Loan head said of Government loan rates: "We have been considering reducing the rate on railroad loans from 4 per cent. The railroads have been having a hard time in view of their competition from airlines and motor transportation. The railroads are a vital necessity."

New Record Is Near

Insurance on American lives is approaching a total of $117,500,000,000, the highest amount in history, the association learned today.

Leroy A. Lincoln, chairman of the association and president of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., estimated in a report prepared for the thirty-fourth annual convention of the executives that the new high mark would be reached by December 31.

The year's gain in policies issued by all United States legal reserve companies, he said, would be $3,500,000,000, an increase of 3.1 per cent over the 1939 total.

Lincoln estimated the companies would pay $2,700,000,000 to policyholders and beneficiaries this year, with 64 per cent of that amount going to living policyholders and the remaining sum disbursed in death claims.

Touching on governmental financial problems, the insurance executive belittled any likelihood of dangerous inflationary tendencies in the United States.

"One of the reasons for this view," he said, "is that our country luckily possesses productive capacity, national wealth and other economic resources sufficiently strong to make it far more resistant to inflation than, for instance, some European countries.

"Another reason for that view is that the Government of this country has available much stronger positive controls against inflation now than were ever before available to it."

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP).—Wheat prices bobbed above and below previous closing levels today, fluctuating within a range of ⅞ cent, narrowest in some time, and closing unchanged to ¼ lower compared with yesterday.

The market's sluggishness was blamed on hesitancy due to uncertainty regarding settlement of outstanding December contracts as well as the war and the deadlocked domestic supply and demand situation. Much of the trade came from dealers erasing up accounts or switching hedges from December into May or July contracts.

December wheat closed at 90@90¼, with May at 86¾@86⅞. Corn was ⅜ to ⅝ lower, December 61¼. May 60⅛@60¾, oats ¼ to ⅜ off; soy beans ⅛ to 1¼ lower; rye ⅝ down, and lard 2 to 5 lower.

Chicago December wheat closed 7¼@7⅝ cents over Kansas City, or within about 2 cents of a full shipping differential, but there were no signs of any grain being brought here for delivery purposes. The premium over Minneapolis December was 8⅛@8¾. Approximately 1,000,000 bushels have been tendered at Kansas City but no wheat has been offered for delivery here so far this month. Contracts involving slightly more than 2,000,000 bushels remain to be settled either by delivery or by pit operations.

As a result the reserve ratio dropped to 19.4 per cent, lowest point since mid-October, despite a decrease of £5,901,000 in deposits, both public and private.

Crude Oil Cut As Gasoline Prices Climb

By the Associated Press

Houston, Tex., Dec. 5.—A new development in the oil industry's tumultuous price situation today was the announcement by Republic Oil & Refining Co., of a cut in crude-oil prices averaging 20 cents a barrel in ten southwest Texas fields, all in coastal areas.

Meanwhile oilmen watched the gasoline price situation. Following the Texas company's lead Monday of increasing gasoline prices, an average of 2 cent a gallon, most major companies announced they were meeting the Texaco increase.

The Republic crude price cuts were effective today and affect about 28,000 barrels of oil daily or more than 600,000 barrels a month.

Some oil officials said they believed the cut would spread to the adjacent upper Gulf Coast.

Gasoline Price Boosted

Oklahoma City, Dec. 5 (AP).—The Continental and Sinclair Oil companies announced today an increase of 1 cent a gallon in the tank-wagon price of gasoline. Other major companies were expected to follow suit during the day.

Rail Loadings Show 6.3% Gain Over Year Ago

By the Associated Press

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 728,525 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ending last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 4,963 cars, or 0.7 of one per cent, compared with the preceding week, an increase of 43,029, or 6.3 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 79,991, or 12.3 per cent, cmopared with 1938.

A big drop in ore loadings, now in their seasonal decline, more than offset gains in miscellaneous freight and less-than-carlot merchandise. The decline in total loadings below the previous holiday week was contra-seasonal.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of lodaings, based on 1929-30 as 100, declined to 76.1 compared with 77.5 the previous week, and 75.5 a year ago.

London Stocks

London, Dec. 5 (AP).—Several sections of the stock market came under mild pressure in late dealings today after a fairly steady opening.

One of the factors mentioned in brokerage offices as causing the dull and slightly backward behavior of the market was recent heavier than usual shipping losses and attacks by the Germans on provincial towns.

Department store stocks were offered on prospects of increased rationing resulting from intensification of the war effort. Brewery shares were likewise in supply as were some of the electric supply and equipment shares.

Turnover in the high-priced section was smaller than in the general run of stocks and the trend was more resistant despite some profit-taking. British Consolidated 2½s and the war 3½s were about unchanged.

Exceptional Profits Declared Nonexistent in Arms Program

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 5.—D. C. Everest, of the national defense advisory commission staff, said today that "no one should get the idea that there are exceptional profits to be made from the unfortunate situation which compels us to spend in such gigantic amounts for national defense."

"Excessive profits will not be popular," he said in a speech prepared for a meeting of the National Fibre Can and Tube Association. "Our job is to maintain allegiance to our country, and I doubt if any other attitude will be tolerated."

He said the pressure on industry created by the defense program "may prove a blessing in disguise," since "pressure operation will get industry out of the "slow bell" operation of the last 12 years.

"It means that American industry will be put to the test of producing maximum defense needs, plus the civilian requirements which are bound to increase through added employment," Everest said.

"I think we will find that in actual performance industry will demonstrate that it can out-run the so-called 'rated capacities' as we have known them."

He added that "the whole defense program will move along smoothly if we have the cooperation of people in industry—and by that I mean management, labor and all other concerned."

Stocks Work Unevenly Lower in Dull Deals; Fears of 1941 Tax Blight Grow in Street

New York, Dec. 5.—Intermittent feeble rallies bogged down in today's stock market and irregularly lower trends prevailed at the close. Declines generally were in small fractions and scattered favorites managed to finish with modest advances. Isolated issues were off 1 to 2.

The list did fairly well at the opening but prices slipped before midday and never made much progress from then on.

Except for liveliness of a handful of low-priced issues, dealings were light throughout. Transfers totaled 598,600 shares compared with 651,170 the day before. Two 10,000-share blocks each of Lehigh Valley Coal and Columbia Gas were recorded. The former was unchanged at 4½ and the latter dipped 3-16 to ½, a new 1940 bottom.

Handicaps cited by brokers included: Continued selling to establish income tax losses, a little more peace talk in board rooms despite today's heavy House of Commons vote against a settlement proposed by labor members, and growing fears that 1941 taxes might blight corporation profits.

Wall Street gloom was accentuated by announcement, after the close, that another stock exchange seat had been sold for $33,000, duplicating recent transactions which established new lows for memberships since 1899.

Business news continued on the bullish side. Construction awards registered a sharp upturn, automotive sales were reported being maintained at a high level, steel output held to near-capacity figures and Christmas retail spending volumes were expected to exceed 1929.

Rails held to a slim groove. While last week's freight loadings were off contra-seasonally, Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones revealed consideration was being given to cutting the interest rate on railway lending.

U. S. Steel ended unchanged but Bethlehem, Youngstown and Republic were off a shade. In the losing bracket also were General Motors, Chrysler, Consolidated Edison, Sperry, Market Street Railway preferred, Loft, New York Shipbuilding, Southern Railway, New York Central, Anaconda, U. S. Rubber, Eastman Kodak and Allied Chemical.

Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck were up ⅛ each. Both companies disclosed a brisk expansion in October business over a year ago. Grumman Aircraft was ahead a point on a pleasing dividend. American Woolen preferred was up 2⅛ as the company declared a ¾4 payment on accumulated dividends. Improved were American Smelting, Pennsylvania, American Telephone and duPont.

Commodities were uneven. Wheat at Chicago was unchanged to off ¼ of a cent a bushel and corn down ⅜ to ⅝. Cotton was up 20 cents to off 5 cents a bale.

Modest curb advances were posted for American Gas, Bell Aircraft, Humble Oil and Bath Iron Works. Creole Petroleum skidded, along with Gulf Oil and Phoenix Securities. Volume here was around 145,000 shares versus 157,000 Wednesday.

High-priced corporate issues and some foreign dollar bonds especially affected by news developments moved higher in todays market as the general list loafed in slightly lower territory.

Announcement at Washington that the Treasury Department and the Import-Export Bank would provide Argentina with a credit of $100,000,000 brought immediate response in obligations of that republic and some of its political subdivisions. The Government 4½s ended up 4 points at 78½; Santa Fe Province 4s ended up 1 at 59 and major fractions were tacked onto Buenos Aires 3⅜s and several others. Other foreign dollar bonds did little either way.

In the domestic corporate group most changes were small and the trend was mixed. Edging ahead were, among others, Missouri Pacific 5s at 17¾; St. Louis-San Francisco, 4½s, at 10½; Walworth 4s, at 79½, and Erie 5s, at 17¾. Reading-Jersey Central 4s and Third Avenue Adjustment 5s were up more.

Unchanged to lower issues included Shell Union 2½s, Pacific Telephone 3¼s, Northern Pacific 4s and New York Central 5s.

United States governments firmed in late dealings and ended up 1-32 to 5-32 of a point.

Total sales of $7,943,000, par value compared with $8,244,750 on Wednesday.

Chicago Utility Plans Refunding

New York, Dec. 5 (AP).—Financial circles heard today that the management of Commonwealth Edison Co., the big Chicago utility, was studying plans to refund its outstanding $100,000,000 of 3½ per cent bonds, issued in 1938 to replace bonds bearing 4½ and 5 per cent.

Such a move, Wall Street bond brokers said, would be a logical follow up to the feat of Boston Edison Co. in breaking all precedents recently by selling a sizable issue carrying a 2¾ per cent coupon and getting a substantial premium over par for them.

It was also learned that Republic Steel Corporation also is considering a financing program. Negotiations were reported to be in such an early stage that there were as yet no indications of how large the operation might be.

Wholesale Commodity Index Rises in Week

By the Associated Press

Higher prices for farm products, building materials and some manufactured products raised the Labor Department's index of wholesale commodity prices two-tenths of a point to 79.7 per cent of the 1926 average during the week ended November 30.

Treasury Calls on Banks For Another $36,900,000

By the Associated Press

The Treasury called on banks yesterday for $36,900,000 of Treasury credits resulting from the sale of Government securities to the banks.

The call, effective December 9, was similar to one for $107,000,000 which was placed in effect on December 2 and 3.

The latest Treasury statement shows that on December 3 banks had $594,624,000 of such Treasury deposits on hand. The deposits arose from special arrangements under which banks have been permitted to buy securities and pay for them by placing deposits on their books in favor of the Treasury, the money to stay in the banks until the Treasury needed it.

Secretary Morgenthau said recently that the Treasury needed this cash because its cash working balance was down to about $1,000,000,000, the minimum amount he thought the Treasury ought to keep on hand in times of international crisis.

The banks were ordered to turn the money over to the Federal Reserve Banks in their districts, which act as fiscal agents of the Treasury.

By Federal Reserve districts, the latest amounts called in were:

Boston, $300,000; New York, $1,200,000; Philadelphia, $300,000; Cleveland, $100,000; Atlanta, $2,000,000; Chicago, $10,000; St. Louis, $5,000,000; Kansas City, $3,600,000; Dallas, $3,800,000, and San Francisco, $20,500,000.

No calls were made this time on banks in the Richmond and Minneapolis districts.

Yule Buying Reduces Idle Bank Cash

By the Associated Press

Christmas shopping, the Federal Reserve Board said yesterday, was chiefly responsible for a $110,000,000 drop in the quantity of idle money in the Nation's banks during the week ended December 4.

The board said the largest factor was a $104,000,000 increase in money in circulation, representing to a large extent withdrawals of shopping money from the banks. Pay roll necessities of the first of the month also contributed to the increase of money in circulation, but the Christmas season always brings large reductions in bank cash.

The cut in excess reserves reduced them from an all-time record high of $6,930,000,000 a week ago to $6,820,000,000.

The board also reported that for the ninth straight week the 12 Federal Reserve banks reduced their investment in Government securities, liquidating $4,000,000, in bonds, and $5,000,000 of notes. This reduced their aggregate investment in Government securities to $2,195,000,000.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended December 4 member bank reserve balances decreased $138,000,000. Reductions in member bank reserves arose from increases of $104,000,000 in money in circulation, $56,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks, $22,000,000 in Treasury cash, and $23,000,000 in November deposits and other reserve bank credit, offset in part by increases of $72,000,000 in gold stock and $5,000,000 in Treasury currency. Excess reserves of member banks on December 4 were estimated to be approximately $6,820,000,000, a decrease of $110,000,000 for the week.

"The principal change in holdings of bills and securities was a reduction of $9,000,000 in United States Government securities, direct and guaranteed: Holdings of bonds decreased $4,000,000 and of notes $5,000,000."

Baugh Wants 'Good Contract' To Play in '41

Skin Forward Pass Star Has Coaching Offer; $10,000 Job End

dicated he'd like to play another year.

"I have a chance to take a coaching job, but I'd like to play another season if I can get a good contract," Baugh drawled. "I have a little ranch back in Texas and I guess I'll stick pretty close to that during the off season. Might take a fling at a couple of rodeos, but I'm not ready to quit football yet."

Coach Ray Flaherty, who Wednesday began holding morning drills at Griffith stadium in absolute secrecy, is understood to be grooming Baugh for his greatest starring role of the year against the Bears in the championship playoff Sunday at the ball park.

Sammy's passes and the amazing catches of Dick Todd, Jimmy Johnston, Bob Masterson and others make up the "lightning war" attack the Redskins plan to unloose upon the Chicagoans.

Skins Hold Drill

Baugh's passes have accomplished such things as two touchdowns in less than four minutes this year, and in the Redskins' loss to the Brooklyn Dodgers it was his throwing that accounted for two scores in the final minutes of the game when the final gun checked what might have been a Washington victory.

The Redskins worked for two hours yesterday, but didn't get on the gridiron, covered by a tarpaulin to insure a dry field Sunday.

Flaherty's main hopes for winning the National Professional League title are based on a dry field—which, incidentally, give rise to the reports that the Redskins plan to literally pass the Bears dizzy. The Chicagoans are notably weak on pass defense.

As for donning rubber-soled shoes if cold weather sets in again and hardens the surface of the field, the Redskins may leave that old custom up to the Bears.

In their game with the Cardinals in which they won the Western Division championship last Sunday, the Bears put on rubber-soled shoes in the second half because of the frozen surface. Result was the Cardinals, scoreless through the first half, piled up 23 points in the second half.

Leitch Sets All-Time High In Pin League

In the Railroad Retirement Board's meet at Penn last night the big surprise of the night was 106-average duckpinner Leitch's championship rolling. Leitch started out with a bang, setting a new season record for high game with a 168 count. His second game was for 126 sticks and then he came back with a 154 count to total a huge 442 set, the biggest in the history of the league. Leitch's splendid work yanked his boys to high set of 1,653 but Card Files got the team game with 678. Adjustments is in front with 23-10, having a few pins over the Bar Sinisters who are equal to them in games won and lost while Secretary's Office is in the third spot.

COLUMBIA

Miss Thoroe, Population, was the big scorer in the Census Ladies rolling, getting a 149 high game. Machine Tabulation got the big knocks for team game and set, taking counts of 559 and 1,498 to top the others and whitewash their opponents, as did Population.

ICE PALACE

In the Connecticut Avenue Ladies' meeting the top scorer was Dorothy Bock, Orioles, who took highs of 125, 316 to show the way and aid her teammates in winning laurels with highs of 483, 1,400. The Orioles and Blue Jays took three straight from opponents, and the former is out in front 22-5, with the Blue Jays next with 16-11.

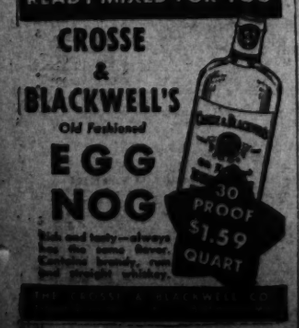
The Brick Manufacturers found that Broadhurst, Smoot and Merson, Washington Brick, were best for game and set with 137, 355, respectively, the latter helping his team take high game with a 561 count. United Clay Products stepped out in front for set with a 1,568 pinfall. Thompson & Slocombe won two games to go into a tie for first place, while Washington Concrete took all three to land in second position. Thour's 114 game helped Hydraulic Brick win the odd contest from West Bros.

BROOKLAND

Marty Alexander, rolling for the Sewer Department quintet in the District of Columbia Government loop, was the big noise last night with highs of 144 and 376 that led his team to top counts with 621 and 1,772. Repair Shop and Police No. 1 are tied for leadership with 21-12 each.

PENN RECREATION

The District Grocery Stores at Penn Recreation found out that the Orange and Black team was the best quintet of the drives. Jake Schwartz got high count for game of 157, as Jack Harris knocked the pins for a 381 set, both lads accounting for their team taking highs of 568 and 1,691 and three wins over Worcester Salt to stay at the top of the heap. Wilkins Coffee usurped a rival's slogan, being good to the last drop and taking the odd game from Maxwell House.



Rich and tasty—always has the right blend. Never Cracking brandy, rum and straight whiskey.

$50,000 Believed Price Paid for Young Hurler

trading lull to announce the Bowman purchase, they emphasized that Terry was working on at least one and possibly other deals of some magnitude. The needs of the Giants were so numerous that it was difficult to surmise what was in the wind.

Beaned Ducky Medwick

Bowman is the 26-year-old right-handed hurler who beaned Ducky Medwick, of Brooklyn, last summer, and his acquisition by the Giants not only gave them a first-line pitcher, but fanned their famous feud with the Dodgers to a new heat.

Bowman was raised up through the Cardinal farm system and entered the National League in 1939, when he won 13 and lost 5 for the Redbirds, with an earned-run average of 2.81. Last season, when the Cards slipped a bit, Bowman won seven and lost five.

Sellout Crowd Expected for W.-L., Gonzaga

Scholastic Grid Game Tomorrow May Draw 9,000 Fans

Every seat in the Washington-Lee High stadium, which has been enlarged to hold 9,000 spectators, is expected to be filled tomorrow when the Little Generals square off with Gonzaga High in a scholastic football game for the benefit of the Arlington Monarch Club's summer camp for boys.

Four thousand tickets, it was announced last night, already have been sold, comprising the largest advance sale for a schoolboy game this year.

To the winner will go the strongest claim of any high school eleven in this vicinity to the metropolitan title. The next best claim might belong to Western High, public school titlist, but Washington-Lee holds an early season 14-to-13 victory over the Red Raiders.

First activity tomorrow will be at 12:15, when three bands will parade through the streets of Arlington and onto the W.-L. field. The kickoff is set for 1:30 p. m.

Col. Paul B. Parker, former line coach at Tennessee University, will act as judge for the field goal kicking contest which will feature halftime intermission.

Harmon Presents Teammates With Gold Footballs

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Dec. 5.—Tom Harmon, Michigan's all-America halfback, presented his team mates and coaches with gold footballs last night "so that they may never forget the part they played in helping old '98'."

"I've been given a lot of medals, but if it wasn't for all these other fellows I wouldn't be getting them," Harmon said. "I'd like to melt all those medals down into one piece and divide it up among us, but since that's impossible, I'll try this."

Harmon's Jersey number, 98, was retired this season.

The All-America halfback made his presentation at Detroit's annual University of Michigan Club football "bust" for the Wolverine grid team.

Bowl Teams Place Men on All-Eastern

EAST, from Page 27.

Pitt football from being deemphasized too far.

Reagan had the least trouble winning his place on a team that averages 202 pounds in the line and 183 in the backfield. O'Rourke faced challenges from such contenders as Temple's Andy Tomasic, Cornell's Hal McCullough and Fordham's Len Eshmont; Kracum had strong fullback rivals in Sophomore Steve Filipowicz, of Fordham; 170-pound Mort Landsberg, of Cornell, and Georgetown's Jim Castiglia, and even Matuszczak had a play-calling, blocking challenger in Henry Toczylowski, of Boston College.

The same was true in the line with the possible exception of the tackles, where the field was small. At center Gladchuk won out over an exceptionally fine field that included Leon Gajecki, of Penn State; Columbia's Don Snavely, Lou DeFilippo, of Fordham, and Ray Frick, of Penn.

Greenkeepers to Hold Meeting and Election

The annual meeting and election of officers of the Mid-Atlantic Association of Greenkeepers will be held Monday, December 9, at Connolly's, 4715 Miller Avenue, Bethesda.

An oyster roast at 6 p. m. will precede the business.

Dates for the annual University of Maryland short course for greenkeepers have been set for January 27-28. Prof. Ernest N. Cory, State entomologist, has further information at the University.

Hemingway 'Degrades' Man, Asserts Priest

Fr. Slavin Criticizes Author as Helping 'Poison Youths' Minds'

The hidden message of Ernest Hemingway's best seller novel dealing with the Spanish civil war, "For Whom the Bell Tolls," is that victory can never ultimately come to those who are blasting the foundations of humanity, morality and religion.

This interpretation was presented last night by the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Slavin, O. P., of Catholic University, speaking at the Critics' Forum in the Mayflower Hotel.

Father Slavin asserted that if the novel is to be taken as history, "then instead of being a defense of the loyalists, it stands as an acute indictment of them."

The reviewer said that he preferred to look upon fiction as having entertainment value for its fundamental purpose, and on this score, the novel "fails to pass the test of good fiction since it leaves one depressed, filled with nausea, and wondering if mankind has finally decided to throw off humanity and strut about in brutish masks."

Hemingway, Father Slavin declared, with other novelists such as James Joyce, Sherwood Anderson, John Dos Passos, William Faulkner, James T. Farrell and others, is giving support to professors in our great American universities in subtle poisoning of the minds of the younger generation by degrading humanity in stripping from man his spiritual nature."

Four Trawlers, Drifter Lost, British Admit

Copyright by New York Times

London, Dec. 5.—Announcing the loss of four trawlers and a drifter tonight, the Admiralty praised the "tenacity, courage and devotion too duty" of the crews of these little ships, which, despite all manner of devices of the enemy to prevent the clearance of mines from British ports, thus far have kept the fairways open.

Recent German communiques have laid considerable stress upon the extent of their mine-laying operations around the coasts of these islands. These mine-laying operations are but one phase of the current German strategy of crippling Britain's overseas trade while attempting to destroy its factories by concentrated attack first on one industrial city and then on another.

Upon the trawlers falls the hazardous task of sweeping up mines laid by enemy aircraft and submarines. Not only are they constantly in danger of being blown up by mines themselves, but they are frequently subjected to dive-bombing attacks from the air and by fast motor torpedo boats. To the large list of those already destroyed there now must be added four more. These, the admiralty announced tonight, were the Ethel Taylor, Amethyst, Elk, Calverton and, in addition, the drifter Christmas Rose.

The entire crew of the Amethyst and Elk were saved, but there were casualties aboard the other three lost vessels.

Wholesale Trade Sets 10-Year Mark

D. C. Sales Reach $347,772,000; Pay Rolls Rise

Wholesale trade in the District during 1939 set a ten-year record with total sales reaching $347,772,000, the Census Bureau reported yesterday. Sales last year exceeded the 1929 figure of $223,401,000 by 55.7 per cent and the 1935 total of $242,729,000 by 43.3 per cent.

Listing 492 unincorporated wholesale concerns here in 1929 and 629 in 1935, the bureau last year counted 753. Owners and firm members of these firms totaled 267 in 1929, 327 in 1935 and 437 in 1939.

The District's wholesale pay roll also enjoyed a considerable boom over previous years. Salaries increased to $18,388,000 or 33.1 per cent over the $13,819,000. The 1929 pay roll was $12,666,000. An average increase per employe of $124 over 1935 is shown for last year.

The bureau's report was confined to the wholesale trade, which includes petroleum bulk stations and terminals, manufacturers' branch and sales offices, service wholesalers, agents and brokers and assemblers of farm products.

Agents' and brokers' sales were reported to have increased 68.4 per cent last year. Manufacturers' branch and sales offices showed a 62.2 per cent gain, while service wholesalers' sales rose 30.7 per cent.

Nearly 4,000 more employes are shown in the 1939 survey than in a similar study made in 1929. Last year's figure was 10,250, compared to 8,274 in 1935, and 6,356 in 1929.

Merchandise "on hand" at the end of 1939 had a value of $18,255,000 in cost price. The value in 1935 was $13,088,000 and $12,375,000 in 1929.

Similar surveys of other District businesses will be published soon, the bureau said. They will include a study of retail concerns, sales finance companies, motion picture theaters, hotels, tourist camps and the construction industry.

Morgenthau, Sr., Urges Greek Aid; Junior Reticent

Henry Morgenthau, sr., offered some advice yesterday on the question of aiding the Greeks, but Henry Morgenthau, jr., said he'd have to think it over because of his official position.

The elder Morgenthau, an Ambassador to Turkey before the World War, was present at a press conference held by his son, the Secretary of the Treasury. He told reporters why he believed the Greeks should be helped in their war against the Italians.

"What does junior think about that?" a reporter asked the Secretary.

"My father is a former Ambassador, and the sky is the limit for him," was the reply. "But I am just a plain Secretary and I have hobbles."

The elder Morgenthau was active in Greek relief work after the World War. He said of today's warriors of Athens that "they ought to be helped as soon as possible."

"I think that if the Italian army is no better than it was in the last war, it will be shown up pretty soon," he added.

Washington people are active participants and the Washington scene is actively portrayed for the Nation in the new WJSV C. B. S. series which you now can hear each Saturday at 6 p. m.

It's called "Report to the Nation" and each week presents a different aspect of the work being done by the United States Government—the biggest business on earth—in the interests of the people. Its director is Brewster Morgan, known as one of Columbia's most brilliant young impresarios. Its script creator is Helen Meinardi, the deft short-story writer whose "It Happened In Paris" you remember well from the movies. Its commentators are your two well-known Washington figures, Albert Warner and John Charles Daly. Its actors are Washingtonians who have been selected from among hundreds by Morgan for their natural-sounding presentations of lines.

All in all, it's pretty safe to say it's a Washington show.

The second in the series, which you'll hear tomorrow night, is to deal with the important problem of labor conciliation. In strictly nonpartisan fashion, the program will tell of the job being done to reduce stoppages in industry while our important defense activities are going on and how industry and its workers are being mobilized as never before in peacetime.

Similarly important phases of the active work of the Government, giving the vitally interesting background behind each of the activities which are making front-page news, will be treated each week
